WESTERN NAVIGATION.

The exclusive privilege of using steam boats in the territory of Orleans, granted to Livingston and Fulton, and since confirmed by the legislature of Louisiana, is considered as an arbitrary exercise of power, by some of the best informed men in the western country. It is an infringement of the rights of other states which demands a prompt and efficacious resistance. In the winter of 1816, the legislature of this state passed sundry resolutions respecting the conflicting claims of patentees of steam engines, and after noticing the above grant to Livingston and Fulton, they proceeded to adopt, among others, the following resolve, which we believe never was attended to by our representation in Congress.

"And it is further resolved, That our Senators & Representatives in Congress, be requested to institute an enquiry, whether the legislature of Louisiana have not exceeded their constitutional powers by enacting the law referred to in the preamble to these resolutions.

It is an inquiry in which the whole western country is vitally interested; and since Louisiana has owned a determination to persevere in this iniquitous system of monopoly, we trust effectual measures will be taken to shew to the world that our rights are held by a better tenure than the mere legislative will of a remote state. The great rivers of the west afford us a natural passage to the ocean, and an easy and expeditious conveyance to market for our various agricultural productions; and we conceive it is not in the power of any body of men to prohibit us from using any mode of conveyance that either our interests or our pleasure induces us to select. As it respects the constitutionality of the measure, they might as well have extended their restriction to a total interdiction of the navigation of the Mississippi within the borders of that state, or have shut the port of N. Orleans against us. The right in either case would depend upon the same principle; it would involve the same enquiry, whether a state, situated at the mouth of the Mississippi, has a right to interfere with the navigation of those which live above her on the same river and its tributary streams. If Louisiana was an independent community, unconnected with the union such an act as the one complained of in the relative situation of the two countries would lead to serious negotiations, and if persisted in, would probably terminate in an open rupture.

We will not deny to Messrs. Livingston and Fulton the merit of introducing steam boats into our waters. This new era in our commerce was no doubt hastened by these gentlemen; but we do not feel disposed to sacrifice the rights of six states to their cupidity or to the arbitrary whims of Louisiana. We view this high handed proceeding as an alarming precedent, and, we hope, the western representation in Congress will institute an inquiry that will expose the futility of this legislative attempt to infringe the rights of neighboring states.

Juvenile Indiscretion

At Marlborough street a millie aged lady, (about eighty-eight) charged her son, Charles Richmond, a lad not yet quite seventy years of age with an assault it appeared that the greivous young rascal had taken offence at his mama's having lately married, which he conceived to be injurious to his future expectations he refused to work and became quite a libertine. His har' em scar' m conduct and youthful frolics, brought on him a maternal reprimand, which so enraged him that he committed the assault in question. He was bound over to keep the peace.—London Paper.

Foreign News.—Recent arrivals from Europe furnish intelligence which cannot but be considered interesting, as indicating a state of feeling which in all probability will lead to future wars.—Copied from the London Paper.

from all which we gather—That the people of England ardently wish the emancipation of South America that recruits and supplies are going to that quarter—that as all these circumstances are mentioned in the public papers, the government must be accessory to it. That Russia is using her influence to prevent any aid from going to South America. That Austria has prohibited supplies from going to that quarter. That in France the voice of the people, as expressed in the late elections, is very generally adverse to the royal party, and that plots were still disturbing the public tranquillity. It also appears, via London, that in Peru the royalists and revolutionists were about uniting to throw off the yoke of Spain.

From the United States Gazette.

We have in our possession, several pieces of earthenware, made at the factory of Mr. David G. Seixas near this city—if we had not obtained proof of its domestic origin, we should not have hesitated to believe it from its general appearance to be of transatlantic production. In this belief we should have been chiefly guided by a knowledge that many attempts have proved unsuccessful, to imitate the Liverpool white crockery. We should have been biased by the popular opinions that the United States could not furnish suitable materials, or if the materials could be had, that we were ignorant of the art of compounding them. But the result of the research and exertions of Mr. Seixas, the proprietor of the Pottery alluded to, at once sets aside the erroneous prejudice of these opinions. We are informed from an authentic source, and it gives us satisfaction to promulgate it, that every material which he makes use of is derived from our own soil, and exists in such abundance that they may be said to be inexhaustible—and furthermore that no foreigner has ever had any concern, or superintendence or employ in his manufactory.

GIBRALTAR, OCT. 4.

From Oran, by letters dated 14th and 25th September.

"Death of the Dey of Algiers.—On the 13th September a number of Janissaries assembled round the place of the Dey, and called upon him to descend, as it was their intention to put him to death, his reign having been a series of disasters both by sea and land.

"The Dey, being obliged to comply, was taken by the soldiers to the house of the Kishna-Age, where he was strangled, and a man named Ali Cogia, a retired merchant, was declared his successor: the Ministers of the late Dey have been exiled to different cities of the Regency."

Captain Jones confirms also the account of the arrival of the American squadron at Gibraltar. They arrived on the 3d of October, and were lying in a quarantine when the Orleans sailed.

At Oran, on the frontiers of the kingdom of Morocco, not the smallest precaution is taken against the Plague; notwithstanding this, the disease has not yet shewn itself to the westward of Algiers.

Caravans pass daily from Algiers to different towns in Morocco.

The Moors at Telemzen, and other cities of this province, communicate with the kingdom of Morocco as formerly.

At Bona the disease is said to have subsided; at Constantia, the daily number of deaths amounts to about 100.

SEPT. 27.

We are sorry to learn that intelligence has been received of the arrival at Fez, about the 1st inst. of a Caravan, with merchandise, direct from Algiers.

The number of deaths in Algiers, according to official intelligence, have amounted to 150 a day; but the disease has subsided to about 40 daily.
