FROM THE INDEPENDENT BALANCE.
"Time and Chance happen to all."
There's a chance for the soldier tho' never so brave,
On the field of his glory to sink in the grave;
There's another chance too, that he safe may come back With a cart load of laurels—of rupees a lack!

There's a chance for the lawyer to live by his wits,
And a chance for the gambler to win by his hits; There's another chance too, that the gambler may lose,
And the neck of the lawyer find him a noose.

There's a chance for the sailor a prize ship to take,
And a chance for a whirlwind to come in his wake!
There's a chance on the ocean a treasure to win,
And a chance too that Neptune may have it again.

There's a chance for mechanics to live by their trade, And another chance too that their checks won't be paid;

There's a chance for the sexton to live by the dead, And a chance that he sometimes goes hungry to bed.

There's a chance for the doctor to live by the sick,
And a chance that that the "whitehorse" the doctor may kick;

There's a chance for the drunkard to live on good wine,
And a chance for the hangman to give him a line.

There's a chance for the poet to starve on his rhymes,

And a chance for a veteran to beg in hard times;

There's a time and a chance for all men on earth,
To him that is wretched, and him full of mirth.

But of chances and times in this world to be found—

And I've travell'd & travell'd it more than half 'round,

There's no chance so rare, if the truth
I must say,

As the chance that Subscribers the Printer will pay!

From the Columbia (S. C.) Telescope. The Butterfly in Church.

Last Sunday afternoon, a Butterfly appeared in the church. Borne on the wind, the variegated stranger fluttered in, and immediately attracted the attention of half the congregation. The younger auditors watched every motion; the older looked occasionally at the insect; and even the gravest cast an inquiring glance on the beautiful stranger, as it wandered about, without any apparent object; now hovering over the flowers of a bonnet, and now wafted toward the roses on some beauty's cheek. After a few vagaries of this kind, the butterfly went out as it came in, through a window.

This little creature is a striking emblem of a belle at church. Just like our butterfly, the airy Melissa enters the house, without a thought of the object of the Assembly, without a care except to see and be seen. She, too, is the subject of universal notice, as she glides gracefully to her pew.
Nor is she a whit more still, solemn, or engaged in the business of the place. This lady's bonnet, that lady's shawl, and yonder gentleman's wealth, talents or looks, catch her thoughts by turns, for a moment, as her eye rambles over the congregation; and her fan often emulates the restlessness of the butterfly's wing.
The hour past, she flirts away in like manner, the gaze of all the fops, the pity of all the wise, and the envy of all the weak girls among the audience.
Such is the beautiful, lively, accomplished, thoughtless, Melissa, whom I shall never see again on Sunday, without thinking of the butterfly in church.

Aphorisms for young, un- married ladies.

If you have blue eyes you need not languish.

If black eyes, you need not fear.

If you have pretty feet, there is no necessity to wear short petticoats.

If you have good teeth do not laugh less than the occasion may justify.

If you have pretty hands and arms, there can be no objection to your playing on a lute, if you play well.

If you have a disposition to be clusy, work tapestry.

If you have a bad voice, rather speak in a low tone.

If you have the finest voice in the world never speak in a high tone.

If you dance well, dance but seldom.

If you dance ill, never dance at all.

If you sing well make no previous excuses.

If you sing indifferently, hesitate not a moment when you are asked; for a few people are judges of singing, but every one is sensible of a desire to please.

If in conversation you think a person wrong, rather hint a difference of opinion than offer a contradiction.

If you discover a person to be telling an absolute falsehood, unless it is particularly injurious, let it pass in silence; for it is not worth your while to make any one your enemy, by proving him or her a liar.

Never touch the sore place in any one's character; for be assured, whoever you are, that you have a sore place in your own; and a young woman is a flower that is blasted in a moment.

It is always in your power to make a friend by smiles—what a folly then to make enemies by frowns.

When you have an opportunity to praise do it with all your heart.

When you are forced to blame, appear at least to do it with reluctance.

Make it a rule to please all; and never appear insensible to any desire of pleasing or obeying you, however awkwardly it may be executed.

If you are disposed to be peccant or insolent, it is better to exercise your ill-humors on your dog, or cat, or your femme de chambre than your friends.

If you would preserve beauty rise early.

If you would preserve esteem be gentle.

If you would obtain power be condescending.

If you would live happy endeavour to promote the happiness of others.
