

and death. He told us not to sell any more of our lands, for he never sold lands to any one. Some of us now keep the seventh day; but I wish to quit it, for the Great Spirit made it for others, but not for the Indians, who ought every day to attend to their business. He has ordered me not to drink any intoxicating drink, and not to lust after any women but my own, and informed me by doing so, I should live the longer. He made known to me that it was very wicked to tell lies. Let no one suppose that this I have now said is not true.

"I have now to thank the governor for what he has done, and have informed him what the Great Spirit has ordered me to cease from, and I wish the governor to inform others of what I have communicated. This is all I have at present to say."

PETRIFICATION

EATON, (OHIO JULY 2.)

An elderly gentleman, who lately died in Fayette county, State of Kentucky, previous to his death requested that his daughter's remains should be disinterred and deposited by the side of his own. His daughter had been buried about eleven years, in the county of Bourbon, Ky.—After his decease, the old gentleman's request was complied with. To the great surprise and astonishment of those engaged in raising the daughter's remains, her body was found to be entire, and of its full size. On a minute examination it was discovered to be perfectly petrified—its specific gravity was about the same as that of common lime stone. The coffin was entirely decayed. Her countenance had undergone so small an alteration that her husband, it is said, on beholding her, fainted.

Hypochondriacal. A respectable gentleman of the name of Pritchard, died at Portsmouth, Virginia, in an attempt to imitate the Saviour, by fasting forty days—He died on the twenty-fifth of the trial. In his rational moments he was a pious and worthy man.

A proposition has been stated in the Niagara (Upper Canada) Gleaner, to connect lakes Erie and Ontario by a canal that would be sufficient to carry vessels large enough to navigate both lakes.

Law Forms.—Not long since an attempt was made to invalidate an indenture, because, though perfect in all parts, the paper on which it was written was not cut in at the top! The Judge desired to look at the deed and taking his scissors from his pocket, he quietly zig-zagged it, and returned it to the profound lawyer, by whom the quibble had been started, as a valid instrument.

In a late debate in the British parliament Mr. Bennet said he "wished the Canadas to be given up."

A Lottery is advertised in Delaware, for the purpose of drawing comfortable births in a burying ground.—Nat. Ad.
