

be running alone though he got many a bump on the head for his pains. He died, I grieve to say, a martyr to a game at nine pins.

Such characters, according to my observation, are among the rarest in the motley crowd of mankind—an 'old buck,' and an 'old boy,' are common phrases; but they apply rather to a system of blood and juices than to any moral distinctions. A fine 'old boy,' is one somewhat shrunk perhaps, in the legs, and a little protuberant in the belly, but active withal—who wears buckskin—is carnivorous—no flincher from the bottle, and can walk up stairs without touching the banisters. I by no means wish to undervalue the merits of such a person. It is said of him 'that he wears surprisingly well,' as one says of a pair of boots; and that, let me tell you, is something. The 'old boy,' whom I desiderate, is quite another description; he would answer better, perhaps, to the world's denomination of an old fool! one whom a knave might cheat, or a hypocrite over reach, somewhat more easily than they could practise upon other people; and with whom they might have gained all their ends, fairly and openly, by trusting to that benevolence which was as little able to deny as to suspect. The Vicar of Wakefield, when he suffered himself in his wisdom and experience to be cheated out of his horse by the cosmogony man, was certainly an old fool—His son Moses had the excuse of youth, and the fatalism of his thunder-and-lightning great coat—but the great Monogomist—what shall we say for him? This same Vicar, indeed, is a delicious example, in all respects, of the kind of old boy so much the object of my love and respect; and a I have mentioned him. I will leave the associations inseparable from his name to perfect and embellish for the character that I have been aiming to illustrate. R. A.

SOUTHERN COLLEGE

AT BOWLING-GREEN, (K)

THE Trustees of this institution have the pleasure to announce, that in compliance with a law of a late session of the Legislature, they have been enabled to combine the funds of the WARREN

SEMINARY with those of the Southern College. They have employed suitable and experienced instructors, and an education as liberal as that at any other institution may now be obtained at this College.—The prospects of the institution are flattering, and the number of students increasing. It is believed that this institution, taking into consideration the rate of board, which can be had as reasonable as at any place in this country, and the price of tuition which is Forty DOLLARS, state currency, per year of ten months, offers advantage superior to any in this section of the state.

The present session will end on the 15th of October and the next session will commence on the 15th of November. It is desirable that all who may purpose attending this institution would make application previous to that time.

One Hundred Dollars Reward.

RUNAWAY from the subscriber, living in Barren county, Ky. on the main road leading from Nashville to Lexington, my negro slave

2 BRISTER.

He is about six feet high, stout, rough and raw boned; stutters if interrogated or made mad. He took with him a pair of old saddle bags. It is supposed he has obtained free papers, and will make his way for some of the free states, most probably Ohio. I will give the above reward for the said negro, if delivered to me in Barren county, or fifty dollars if secured in any jail, so I get him again.
