

Appears that not more than 20 men were implicated in it, and these of the lowest order. Moldes had made them subservient to his views, telling them that the government was going to make soldiers of them, and send them to Buenos Ayres, & promising them, if they should enter into his service, $50 bounty, and four rials per day. It seems that one of their diabolical designs was to massacre every one in command, from the governor downwards.

PERU.—The accounts from this country are up to the 6th April. The congress was holding preparatory sessions—there had been some disturbance about the mode of examining the powers of the deputies, which rose to such a degree that Bolivar declared he would leave Peru, and abandon it to the horrors of anarchy. He was, however, dissuaded from his design by the entreaties of the congress, and tranquility appears to have been restored.

BOLIVAR.—The congress of Bolivar was installed on the 25th May last.—General Sucre resigned the command of the republic, requesting the congress to put a native of the country at the head of its affairs. The congress came to a resolution not to admit the resignation, but general Sucre still persisted in his design, alleging that he was a Colombian, & consequently a foreigner; and therefore not entitled to their confidence. The congress then represented to him the dangers to which he would expose the country, by withdrawing himself from the administration of its government; and he finally consented to retain the executive power until the arrival of Bolivar, who was expected at Chubuisaca about the first of August.

By a decree of the 24th of May, an amnesty is granted to all natives of Bolivia, for their former political opinions. For foreigners are not to be disturbed on account of their religion; but, on the contrary, are offered every kind of protection.

It is mentioned in letters from Port-au-Prince, that all the American establishments at St. Domingo are about breaking up, finding it impossible to compete with the trade now carried on under the Haytien flag, which possesses great advantages, over other nations.—[N. Y. E. Post.]

Bell's Weekly Messenger, states, that even in the neighbourhood of London, the workhouses are filled with young women, hearty and strong, who either refuse to go out to service, or, when sent, contrive to be dismissed immediately from their places, that they may live in idleness in those houses. Many of them are born and bred there. And the same abuse is more extensive in the provincial workhouses.

Capt. Parry has published his Account of his Third Voyage, in a quarto volume. In that, he expresses himself as follows: "I am much mistaken, indeed, if the North West passage ever becomes the business of a single summer; nay, I believe that nothing but a concurrence of very favorable circumstances is likely even to make a single winter in the ice, sufficient for its accomplishment. But this is no argument against the possibility of final success; for we now know that a winter in the ice may be passed not only in safety, but in health and comfort."
