

THE WESTERN SUN

VINCENNES, MAY 19, 1827.

The steam boat, Josephine, from Louisville, arrived here on the 10th inst. in the evening, and after discharging part of her cargo, proceeded up—and on Monday evening, again touched at this place on her way down.

The Secretary of War has officially notified Governor Troup that an appropriation has been made for "defraying the expense of an expedition fitted out consisting of the militia of Georgia, and the territory of Florida, for the suppression of aggressions committed by Indians on the frontiers of Georgia and Florida," during the last year.

A number of Spanish prisoners released from Algerine slavery, arrived at Port Mahon, in February last, in the most distressed situation. The officers and crew of the United States frigate Constitution, observing their destitute condition, volunteered a handsome subscription to relieve them and paid their passage to Spain.

A Great Battle.

BALTIMORE, April 24.

Buenos Ayres and Brazil—We stated yesterday in general terms the report brought by the brig Caledonia that a severe action had been fought in the province of Rio Grande, between the Buenos Ayrean and Brazilian armies, in which it was believed that the latter was defeated.—For the following additional information on this subject, the American is indebted to an intelligent citizen who came passenger in the Caledonia. He informs that the Buenos Ayrean army, under the command of General Alvear having thrown itself between the van of the Imperial army and Rio Grande, continued to advance towards that city as far as the walls of Jageron, which town it entered, paying due respect to the property and persons of the inhabitants. The Buenos Ayreans then made a diversion towards the city of Porto Allegro, (the capital of the province), and after various efforts to engage the imperialists, finally succeeded in bringing them to action on or about the 26th of February. As it was expected that a general engagement would be decisive of the contest, and would in all probability involve consequences of the highest importance to both countries, the commanders of the two armies had established the highest degree of discipline of which their respective commands were susceptible. When the action commenced, the Buenos Ayrean army numbered about eight thousand men, principally mounted; that of the Brazilians about ten thousand men.—The Brazilian General aware of the powerful charge of the Buenos Ayrean cavalry, protected his centre & flanks by a large body of German Lancers.—The engagement was furious and bloody, and the slaughter consequently great on both sides. The battle lasted without intermission until night separated the combatants.

The loss on both sides it is supposed is nearly equal, in all about five thousand men killed and wounded. The Brazilian officials claim the victory, but the people of Rio Grande seemed very doubtful on the subject; as, notwithstanding their attachment to their emperor, (having a short time previous voluntarily presented him with five hundred thousand dollars) they did not evince any signs of joy or gratulation, either in their appearance or in the illumination of their houses. Of the further details of this battle it was impossible at the time of leaving Rio Grande, to obtain any information, the official reports of the day not being entitled to any credit, and rumors being equally unsatisfactory.

To Farmers.—Soak seed corn in a solution of glauber salts, and it will come up three or four days sooner than if planted in its natural state, and neither worms nor fowls, nor birds will molest it. The discovery was made by accident last year, by a farmer in Massachusetts, who supposed the salts used were nitre. Not a hill of two acres planted with seed thus prepared, was touched, while at least half of the adjoining field, planted at the same time, was destroyed.

Eleven thousand yards of cotton cloth, (most of which is printed for calicoes) is manufactured daily at the Merrimack Company's mills, Mass.

NEW ORLEANS, April 19.—The capt. of the Milton, which vessel sailed from Havana four days after the Ursula, states that he met the Spanish squadron under Laborde, going into that port. It was reported that com. Porter's squadron had sailed from Key West. The commodore will probably proceed towards Porto Cabello, where, at the date of our last advices, there was a large Colombian frigate, with two or three smaller vessels, completely armed and equipped.

The following interesting account of the practicability of the route over the Rocky Mountains, is copied from a Zanesville paper.

The recent expedition of General Ashley to the Rocky Mountains has been productive of information on subjects of no small interest to the people of the Union.—It has proved that the overland expeditions, in large bodies, may be made to that remote region, without the necessity of transporting provisions for man or beast. General Ashley left St. Louis in March last, and returned in September. His return caravan consisted of upwards of one hundred horses and mules, and more than half that number of men. He went to the station of the party he had left beyond the mountains, when he came in a year ago, and descended a river, believed to be the Buenaventura, about one hundred and fifty miles, to the Great lake.

His return march to St. Louis occupied about seventy days, each mule and horse carrying nearly 200 pounds of beaver fur, the animals keeping their strength and flesh on the grass which they found, without losing any time on this long journey. The men also found an abundance of food; they say there was no day in which they could not have subsisted a thousand men, and often ten thousand.—Buffalo furnished the principal food—water of the best quality was met with every day. The whole route lay through a level and open country, better for carriages than any turnpike road in the United States. Waggon and carriages could go with ease as far as General Ashley went, crossing the Rocky Mountains at the source of the north fork of the Platte, descending the valley of the Buenaventura towards the Pacific ocean.

The lake which terminated the expedition westward, is a most remarkable body of water, and heretofore unknown, unless from vague accounts. It is estimated to be one hundred miles long and sixty or eighty wide. It was coasted last spring by a party of General Ashley's men in canoes, who were occupied four and twenty days in making its circuit. They did not exactly ascertain its outlet, but passed a place where they supposed it must have been. The water of the lake is much saltier than that of the sea. Some of the salt obtained from this water by boiling, has been brought in by General Ashley—he has also brought some specimens of rock salt found in a strata several feet thick at the surface of the ground, with streams of water running through it in numerous little channels. The people of the mountains plentifully supply themselves with salt at this spot, and carry it home in bags.

In the whole expedition, General Ashley did not lose a man, nor had any of those died whom he left behind last year, and are too happy in the freedom of those wild regions, to think of returning to the comparative thralldom of civilized life.—It would seem that no attempt had been made to ascertain the precise latitude of the point at which General Ashley crossed the mountains. It is to be hoped that this will not be neglected on the next expedition. From all that we can learn, the elevation is exceedingly small where the passage of the mountain was effected—so small as hardly to affect the rate of going of the caravan, and forming at the most, an angle of three degrees less than the steepest ascent on the Cumberland road.
