With these views, your committee submit a bill supplementary to an act entitled "An act to provide means to construct the Wabash and Erie canal," and a memorial and joint resolution on the subject of applying that portion of our canal lands lying in the state of Ohio, to improve the Maumee river.

ABSTRACT STATEMENT of the population, and trade of the county supposed to be interested in the construction of the Canal, and which it is believed would receive supplies of Merchandise through that channel, if it were opened from the Tippecanoe to the Maumee Bay.

ON EXPORTS.

The bulky agricultural productions of the soil constitute by far the greatest portions of freights on a canal; and of the export grade, which would seek a market on ours, a faint idea only can be formed. The counties bordering on the Wabash annually export a large amount to New Orleans. Wheat will be a staple article of exportation, and as the country contiguous to the canal, and upper part of the river, produces the finest crops, to estimate the quantity with any approximation to certainty would be extremely difficult; the amount must necessarily be very great. Shelled corn may also be taken into the estimate at 20 cents steady demand, in cash per bushel. The farmers would furnish almost any quantity, and at a price of 60 cents, which is not a high average rate per bushel, for the last ten years in N. York, this article would bear transportation.

The cost of transporting a ton of wheat, corn, beef, pork, flour or whiskey, from the mouth of Tippecanoe to the city of N. York, by way of the canals and lake would be for Foreign News.

From the N. Y. Standard of Jan 31.
LATEST FROM EUROPE.

By the packet ship Sovereign, Capt. Henry L. Champlin, which arrived from London yesterday, we have received London and Portsmouth papers of the 19th December.

The most important item of intelligence is, that of an insurrection at Warsaw, and the fleeing of the Grand Duke Constantine from that city, beyond the Vistula. There can be no doubt that the Poles are about making a desperate effort to throw off the iron yoke under which they have groaned since the dethronement of Stanislaus, and the defeat of Kosciuszko. The tyranny established by Catherine the Great, and perpetuated by her successors, is about to be resisted; and it not successfully, at least for a long and bloody season.

Nor is this all. The Rhenish provinces of Russia are in commotion. Austria begins to assume a more warlike attitude. Switzerland is in arms, and there are evident signs that an appeal will be made by more than one nation to the infatigability of Artillery. The last accounts from Warsaw, are to 4th Dec. at which time a provisional Government had been established in that city, on principles more hostile to the Russian Government than had been originally avowed, and active measures had been taken to resist attack.

"At the beginning of 1829, the kingdom of Poland (i.e. the Russian province so called, of which Warsaw is the metropolis) contained 4,088,289 souls, exclusive of the army.

The London Court Journal of the latest date, says: "We can state confidently, that up to the present moment, the news of the Polish insurrection has not produced any marked change in the tone and bearing of the Ministers of the three powers, relative to the affairs of Belgium." The same paper states, that "the greatest enthusiasm prevailed at Paris on the subject of the anticipated foreign aggression. It is calculated that in the course of one week 1,200,000 troops, including the National Guard, will be in an effective state. Notwithstanding the pacific tone used by the Minister of the interior in the last sitting of the Chamber of Deputies, persons in this country who have access to the best sources of information, entertain strong doubts as to the eventual preservation of peace."

Bell's Weekly Messenger of 19th December, (latest) says—"The disposition of France at this moment is evidently warlike, and under the pretext of defending herself, she is preparing to make aggression upon others. The present stock jobbing ministers are indeed indisposed to war, but the proposition made by Lafayette in the Chamber of Deputies, on Tuesday last—that in case Austria or Prussia should interfere in the affairs of Poland, it would be the duty of France to prohibit them," was received with loud acclamations."

Bell's Messenger of 19th states that the question of reform was agitated from one part of the country to the other; and petitions were daily appearing in Parliament, urging ministers to fulfil their pledges upon this subject.

The trial of the ex ministers of France was going on the 15th December, and it was supposed would last about eleven days, and that the Peers would require at least 24 hours to deliberate on the sentence.

The following extract from the London Morning Herald of 14th and 15th December, will give the origin of the Polish Insurrection, and contain some speculations that are interesting.

INSURRECTION IN POLAND.

A courier, who left Berlin on the 4th inst. has brought the following news from Warsaw, which completes the intelligence we gave yesterday of the recent events in Poland.

"On Monday the 29th November, about seven in the evening, an insurrection broke out at Warsaw. It began, it appears, in the military school of ensigns. The young men, to the number of from 500 to 600, took up arms, and spreading themselves through the town, called the citizens to arms. A multitude of students and inhabitants soon joined them. They proceeded to the barracks of the infantry and the arsenal, which was taken by 10 o'clock. The immense quantity of muskets and sabres it contained were distributed to the people. The insurrectionists had previously gained the barracks of the infantry. The engineer regiment was the first that rose, and several other regiments soon followed it. The Grand Duke Constantine, on the point of being attacked or surrounded in his palace, effected his retreat upon Prago, with his guard, two Russian regiments, and a regiment of Polish cavalry, who only followed him from a sense of military honor, but who will remain neutral, if the soldiers do not disband themselves, or join their fellow citizens in a body. The exasperation, for a long time smothered, was so very considerable at the moment of the insurrection, that some Polish detachments, who, at the commencement, refused to give up their post of arms to the people, were massacred as traitors. Forty-one Colonels or Majors were killed in endeavoring to keep the troops in obedience. It is added that two Aid-de-camps of the Grand Duke were also slain.

The opinion at Warsaw was, that the defection of the Polish arms would become general. The chief of the Municipal Police and two Russian Generals were killed. The German General Haug and Count Stanislaus Potosky were also killed in seeking to rally the troops. The military chest and the house of the Paymaster General were plundered. General Klopicki has taken the command of the Polish troops, and in endeavoring to restore order. It is said that he has already 16,000 troops of the line under his command. The French tri-colored cockade was adopted at the beginning of the insurrection, but it was soon replaced by the Polish cockade. A corps of National Guard is organizing.

LONDON, Dec. 13.

We received last night the Messenger des Chambres and the Gazette de France of Saturday, and other Paris papers of Friday. Their contents are important. The rumor of an insurrection in the Russian provinces of Poland, which we gave on Saturday from other authority, is strongly confirmed by these papers, and details given which show it to have been a movement of much more consequence than was at first apprehended. As it was there stated, it had the appearance of a partial mutiny amongst the troops; but it has now assumed all the character of a national effort, and is to a full extent a revolution of Poland against the domination of Russia. All the Polish troops are in high rebellion. A provisional government is already appointed at Warsaw, and the Archduke Constantine, who was in the city, and had made some efforts to check the first movements, found himself unable to make head against them, and had retreated to the Vistula, with all the force which remained faithful to him, four regiments of Russians. The struggles which preceded this retreat seems, judging by the result, to have been most serious and sanguinary. Four Generals, on the Imperial side are stated to have been killed, one of whom was the Minister of War from the kingdom of Poland. The whole machinery of the Russian government had disappeared from that ancient capital with the Cossacks, and it was doubtful whether they would be able to reach the frontier, for they were hotly pursued by the Polish troops, headed by a native officer named Klopicki, who had acquired a reputation in the Spanish war.

This event must have an extraordinary influence upon the politics of Europe; for the Poles, from their attachment to liberty and national bravery, may be expected to sustain the first impulse which has been thus given to their efforts.

PRUSSIA.

It is stated that a revolution has commenced in Prussia. An insurrection, of which the details are not yet known, has undoubtedly taken place at Konigsburg. The King learned the revolt at Warsaw, and the disturbance at Konigsburg, perhaps at the same moment—Thirty thousand troops are marching on Luxembourg; an army advances towards Potsdam (Posen) and more troops are required in the ancient capital of the Kingdom.
