FAKE DEMOCRATIC PAPER

City Controller Bares Budget Records

Is Being Printed in Republican Office

Bunkoing Number of Trustees Into Giving Legal Advertising That Should Go In Post-Democrat, a Real Party Paper.

A young man named Smith is trying to muss things up, with the recognized newspapers of Muncie. His wife is in the game with him.

Smith's father, who runs what he terms a Republican newspaper operates at Albany. His paper is called the Albany News.

Some years ago a fellow named Giggy, ran a newspaper at Gaston. He left Gaston to become a farmer, but before going he called on the editor of the Post-Democrat and stated that it would be a first rate policy for the Post-Democrat to buy up all the small town newspapers in Delaware county, in order shut out possible competition in legal advertising.

Giggy's paper was Republican in politics. It had no circulation, no advertising, no nothing. It was called the Eastern Indiana Rural News. It was worth about ninety dollars, but Giggy wanted nine thousand.

When he was laughed off the front porch, he looked wise, and said we'd wish we had taken him up, or something of that kind.

Soon afterward he left for the farm, making somewhat of a fake sale of his shirttail full of type to a nice young fellow from Detroit, who listened to some of the so-called Democratic "leaders" of Muncie, who promised him a lot of legal advertising he never got.

The young man faded out after he learned how he had been swindled and Giggy put his type and other belongings in a truck and quit Gaston cold.

Everybody supposed the Gaston paper was dead but a year or so another paper named the Gaston News bloomed forth. Nobody hardly has ever seen it, and it is said by those who have, to be a lalapaloosa. However this great Democratic newspaper is printed in Papa Smith's Republican print shop at Albany, and is bunkoing a number of trustees into giving it legal advertising that should go, of course, in the Post-Democrat, the only Democratic newspaper in Delaware county.

The Albany Smith, who runs a Republican newspaper even went so far as to perpetuate the franchise of Frank Parrott, a Republican Ku Klux trustee who ran a Republican newspaper in Eaton and started a Democratic paper in Muncie, to "get" the Post-Democrat, and went busted at it.

Smith's hocus pocus was about to be shown up last year and he dropped the Eaton What You Call It.

It has now sifted down to the Albany Avenger and the Gaston Goofus or whatever its name happens to be now. It is easy now to see what Giggy meant by advising the purchase of all the small papers.

The law says a newspaper must run five years before it is entitled to carry legal advertising and even then it must be generally known as the spokesman of the party it is said to represent. Nobody is sure even that the paper existed.

The Post-Democrat wouldn't give a dime for the Albany-Gaston, Republican-Democrat combination. Being neither fish, flesh nor fowl, the time will soon come when Democrats and Republicans will refuse to recognize their illegal claims. The law does not contemplate any such hybrid combination.

Thousands of Farmers Hear Secretary Wallace

"New Deal" for Tillers of Soil Outlined by Head of Department of Agriculture.

Farm week reached its high light at the Chicago World's Fair, when thousands of farmers from all parts of the nation assembled in the colorful Court of States to hear a message of national importance from Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture.

The long-expected pronouncement of the Roosevelt administration pertaining to its farm relief program was heard by more than 100,000 visitors on the fair grounds and by millions who listened in on national radio broadcasts.

Secretary Wallace outlined the "new deal" in simple, forceful language that appealed to the farm folk. Briefly the new plan contemplates:

- 1. Five million hogs to be purchased by the Federal government by "specified processors" for the Department of Agriculture, the meat to be distributed by the federal emergency relief to the unemployed.
2. The payment of $6 to $9.50 per hundred pounds for 4,000,000 hogs, between 25 and 100 pounds, the current market price plus a $4 bonus for 1,000,000 sows soon to farrow, weighing a minimum of 275 pounds.
3. Levy of a processing tax on hogs and hog products, sufficient to meet the cost of the program, estimated at $55,000,000.
4. A corn and hog program to follow, calling for the leasing of 20,000,000 acres, formerly planted to corn which is to fallow to insure a substantial increase in corn prices.

LITTLE DOING IN G.O.P. CAMP DURING WEEK

SENATOR VAN NUYS OFF FOR MICHIGAN

Democrats Marching on as They Did a Year Ago.

Politics has its dull periods and also its lively times and the past week was in the category of the latter for the Democratic party in Indiana. There was little doing in the Republican camp last week other than the chirping of Arthur Robinson whose standing for nomination is not as good as it was several weeks ago.

SAFETY EARNS BIG DIVIDENDS ON HIGHWAYS

Every Accident Cost Money and Places Burden on Pocketbook.

COSTS RUN INTO MANY MILLIONS

Automobile Insurance Rates Are in Hands of Public.

While the most important phase of the accident is obviously the necessary toll of deaths and injuries, there is another phase that should not be overlooked—the economic one. Every accident costs money. Every accident places a burden upon the average pocketbook. And the total of costs for a year runs into many millions. Accident prevention, as a result, pays cash dividends.

MAYOR'S CORNER

Well, well, well! Is it possible that John Grubbins' boast that he owns the council is true, or that he is getting, or trying to get, money under false pretenses?

Mr. Plank, a Jewish gentleman from Montpelier, who moved here four years ago, is owner of a junk yard that seems to have slopped over a large section of the South Side.

Kinder taking advantage of the Old Man, who has had a bum eye for seven months, the meritorious Plank, aided by the equally sanctimonious Ziegler, whose junk yards also sloop over promiscuously, put over a zoning ordinance that was not exactly right.

I squinted at the ordinance with my good eye and found that is their zeal to get the thing over quick, the Planks and the Zieglers had overlooked a few bets so I just didn't sign it. A new ordinance properly prepared was introduced last Monday night.

Before it could be voted on at the last council meeting, President Shroyer, of the council, who has two good eyes, appointed a committee of three to make an investigation.

The investigation thus far has developed that Plank and Ziegler conferred with John Grubbins, who has told so many people that he controls the council that they believed it.

It was agreed, it is said, that certain persons were to get the excavating, others were to sell the cement and others were to do the building.

In order to make the investigation thorough I have appointed a committee of three of the city planning commission to work in conjunction with the council committee, to find out what it is all about.

The people who have suffered at the hands of this pestiferous junk yard nuisance are entitled to know all the facts.

The city planning committee will consist of City Engineer Will Harley, Charles Morrow and Harold Hobbs.

The council committee is Harry Kleinfelder, Clarence Hole and Rodney Hayler.

I do not believe that Grubbins owns and controls a single member of the council, and if these two Jews do not tell the whole story I will send for Hitler.

Facts Are Placed Before the Public

Greatly Reduced Assessed Valuation in City of Muncie Has Only Deceived the Taxpayer—Result is Same in Dollars and Cents.

So much has been written and discussed concerning the proposed budget and tax rate of the civil city of Muncie for 1934 and since it is well that all the facts be known, the Post-Democrat has compiled the comparative receipts from taxation and the disbursements by the city for past years direct from the city controller's records. These records are bonafide and supported by the reports and examinations made by the State board of accounts.

No Substitute Has Yet Been Offered

Prosperous and Progressive Railroads Are One of Greatest Assets of Every Country.

All forms of transportation have their uses and advantages—but when, in time of emergency or otherwise, we need fast and certain facilities for mass movement of men and materials, we invariably turn to the railroads.

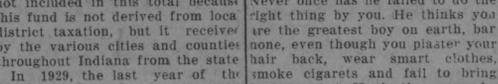

Taxpayers Deceived.

With this fact in mind it should be easily conceived that the tax rate and assessed valuation are important, other than they govern themselves and do not save the taxpayer one cent. A low assessed valuation will increase the tax rate, while a higher valuation will decrease the rate.

He is the man who won the love and life partnership of the greatest woman on earth, your mother. He is "some man" and not the "old man."

"No Marriage Ties" At Rivoli Theater

Shows What An Egotist Can Do To Women Until the Right One Comes Along.

One lament at the current attraction which opens an engagement of two days at the Rivoli Theater, beginning Sunday, is one of which the public feels assured to be entertaining. The picture, "No Marriage Ties," which stars Richard Dix, is one which shows how a man, who has a very good opinion of himself, and thinks he can get along and do things by himself, without being tied, by marriage, to a woman, and uses them only to further his own selfish ends, finally meets "the" woman.

Here, There, Everywhere Frank W. Lahrey.

There can be no question as to one's right to spend his or her wealth in the pursuit of the pleasures of life and in promoting the happiness of themselves and families, provided of course they do not encroach on the rights and liberties of their neighbors, or when they stay within the law and adhere to such rights and liberties as are guaranteed under the Constitution. However, there are times when one cannot help but feel that a large number of our millionaires, with marriageable daughters, whose sole ambition is to marry some foreign prince or nobleman, spend hundreds of thousands of dollars in an endeavor to gratify this desire to acquire a husband of royal blood, could spend their wealth to much greater advantage by donating a few of the many thousands, spent to secure some simpering, brainless prince as a son-in-law, to some charitable institution to distribute among the poor and needy, or it might be spent to better advantage in promoting a marriage between their daughters and some real, he-American, who would be an asset rather than a liability, as is invariably the case, when wealthy heiresses marry some foreign nit-wit with no other recommendation than an empty, meaningless title.

During the present week our newspapers have furnished us with a rather glowing account of the marriage of one of America's wealthiest young women to Prince Alexis Mdivani, which took place at the Russian Orthodox Church in Paris, on which occasion the father of the bride, a multi-millionaire of New York, outdid himself in his endeavor to land a son-in-law of royal blood and at the same time improve the social standing of the family, if possible, while the cost of this acquisition to the family ran into thousands of dollars as the following will show:

Under an agreement between the bride's family and intended son-in-law, the prince renounces all right to a share in the bride's inheritance, and in consideration of this renunciation, the bride's father agrees to pay to the prince the sum of $250,000 a year. In addition to this $250,000, the bride's father agrees to pay to the groom's family the sum of $30,000 a year for traveling expenses, while other items of expense incident to the marriage, the father must pay, for daily reception parties $15,000; wedding reception $10,000; bride's trousseau, $15,000; hotel expense, meals and wines, $40,000, and an additional sum of $3,000 for redecorating the church prior to the wedding, while further on in the newspaper account, we find that the bride received a small fortune in the way of jewelry and wedding presents.

If one is disposed to compute these amounts, it will be found that the total expenditures were $363,000 to say nothing of the small fortune expended in jewelry and wedding presents, and which no doubt were paid for by the loving father, all of which leads one into thinking, that princes come exceedingly high, especially when their true value is taken into consideration.

Just how long it will be before this marriage goes on the "rocks" remains to be seen, but it is safe to say that should dad, at any time be compelled to default in (Continued to Page Six.)

Gray On Economy Act

One of the most effective explanations of why the national economy act was necessary is being given by Finley Gray, Connerville, member of congress from the tenth Indiana congressional district. Congressman Gray supported the cause of the veterans in demanding that there be no reduction of compensation greater than reductions of others affected by the economy act, but he also exercised good judgment in determining why there is the necessity for curtailment of expenditures which were leading to financial chaos.

Mr. Gray in a recent address stated that when congress convened last March, the treasury was nearing exhaustion, the country facing national bankruptcy and the people threatening revolt. That was the direct cause of the economy act.

Following enactment of the act it was discovered that J. P. Morgan and hundreds of his associates had not been paying income taxes. It was found that Andrew Mellon and his group had evaded the payment of income taxes on technicalities, Mr. Gray stated. In other words, the national treasury was without funds because those most able to pay their just share for the benefits given them by the government had failed to meet their just obligations.

Senator Robinson has been charging congress with being cowardly for passing the economy act. He also charges that Wall street was behind the act to save from paying income tax. That statement alone is an indictment of Robinson for the proof offered by Congressman Gray shows the depleted treasury was a hang-over from the previous administration when leaders were evading their just share of governmental expense and Robinson was in the Senate throughout that period. There is no record that he ever exposed Wall street during all those years. He was strangely quiet until now when he seeks re-election. Mr. Gray is performing a great service to the people of Indiana by telling them the true conditions.

A Still Tongue.

Commenting on the fact that thirty-six million words were uttered by the Senators and Representatives during the special session of Congress, a Washington correspondent remarks that one of Indiana's Senators, Arthur Robinson, did a lot of talking and that the other Indiana Senator, Frederick VanNuy, was completely silent.

This correspondent states that Robinson is a candidate for re-election next year and he was the most of his opportunity to use the Senate as a forum. But he adds that Senator VanNuy remembered that his mother used to tell him that "boys should be seen and not heard," and he never spoke a word in debate. Senator VanNuy recognized he was a new senator and that the veterans didn't care much about hearing from a freshman, says the correspondent, so, instead of talking he spent his time in establishing friendships with his colleagues. Senator VanNuy's memory served him well and brought him the eternal respect of his colleagues. Back in Indiana the people recall another adage as they compare the records of the two Senators: To them the record of Senator VanNuy in his first experience in the Senate brings to mind that saying "that a still tongue denotes a great amount of wisdom, for his voice has been heard from the very time he entered the Senate. His first was that famous "birds of a feather" explosion and others which have followed have been of the same variety.

The people of Indiana are well pleased with the strategy of Senator VanNuy. He has been wise in his course and his wisdom will reflect to the promotion of better feeling for Indiana and its representatives in Washington.

The New Deal Senator.

The return of Senator Frederick VanNuy to Indiana for the first time he began his duties in the United States is being hailed with delight through the length and breadth of the state. As the opponent of the veteran Watson he gained hundreds of thousands of supporters. As the Senator from Indiana he has a record in a few months that has never been surpassed by a newcomer in that great law-making organization.

Senator VanNuy has given a comprehensive summary of the major legislation that was enacted at the special session of Congress. He has told what was effected, why it was necessary and the hopes that support it. Fortunately, the people of Indiana to an individual have been giving their support to the program and their interest in its success is all the more keen who was behind that program from start to finish.

It was refreshing to hear the Senator state, just as President Roosevelt has frequently said, that there may be some corrections needed in the program of some of the laws passed, but the general scheme will remain, and the public knows that means the administration will continue bending its efforts to realizing the greatest good for the greatest number. There was an immediate cause behind every piece of legislation voted at the session of Congress or it would not have been proposed. Senator VanNuy has explained these causes so graphically that there can be no question about them. He represents the type which Indiana long has needed for its representative in the United States Senate. There is no evasion, attempt to excuse the inexcusable or call to the narrow confines of partisanship on the part of Senator VanNuy.

Analyzing the record of the Senator from Indiana the conclusion is reached that he is a part and parcel of the new deal that was promised. He has caught the spirit of the administration and is carrying on.

EDITORIAL SQUIBS

So the Republican leaders have decided not to go ahead with their plan of sniping the national administration now because it is too early, but they will probably discover that they will get just as far starting now as later.

Of course, the Republican state leaders had things their own way so long it is natural they do not understand the value of co-operating with an administration that is endeavoring to bring the state out of the doldrums.

Say what you want to about the Indiana beer law, it has produced revenue of more than a million dollars for the state, not a cent has been lost in the collection of that amount and the state has paid nothing for the collection. The proof of the pudding is in the eating, you remember.

VACATIONS and HEALTH By Dr. ERNEST H. LINES Eminent Authority and Chief Medical Director New York Life Insurance Company

FIRST AID

FORETHOUGHT may prevent accidents, and quick thought and action may prevent an accident from turning into a fatality. Know the rules or first aid, and apply them when necessary, without losing your head.

The cardinal principle of first aid is to render such help in time of accident as the facilities at hand will permit. If you are going on a hunting, camping or extensive automobile trip, it is a wise precaution to carry along a first aid outfit, which may be secured from any drug store.

Bleeding or hemorrhage is one of the commonest and most serious accidents. When an artery has been severed, as a result of a serious cut, the blood is bright red and comes in spurts. In these cases, pressure should be applied to the heart side of the point of bleeding, preferably with a tourniquet, which may be improvised from a handkerchief or piece of cloth.

Wounds should be cleaned and a suitable antiseptic applied. This is particularly important when the wound may contain infected material.

Dog bites should be cleaned and cauterized. If possible, the animal should be put under observation to see if it is rabid, and if it shows evidence of this disease, anti-rabic treatment should be instituted by a physician.

Burns require first aid attention to prevent infection and to relieve them.

At our home there is a call for jam or jelly almost every day. With a cupboardful of jam and jelly success, made the short-bowl way, with bottled fruit pectin, I can always oblige. This sure, easy method gives jam and jelly the natural flavor of sun-ripe fruit. None of the juice boils away so you get more jelly from the same amount of fruit than can be obtained from the long-bowl method.

Plum and Raspberry Jam
4 cups (2 lbs.) prepared fruit; 7 cups (3 lbs.) sugar; 1/2 bottle fruit pectin.
To prepare fruit, pit and crush about 1 1/2 pounds fully ripe plums; cut in small pieces. Do not peel. Add 1/2 cup water, cover, and simmer 15 minutes. Crush thoroughly about 1 quart fully ripe raspberries. Combine fruits.
Measure sugar into large kettle. Add prepared fruit, filling up last cup with water if necessary. Mix well and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 1 minute. Remove from fire and stir in fruit pectin. Simmer, pouring quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once. Makes about 10 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

Spiced Blackberry Relish
4 cups (2 lbs.) prepared fruit; 1/2 cup (3/4 lb.) sugar; 1/2 cup apple vinegar; 1/2 bottle fruit pectin.
To prepare fruit, crush thoroughly or grind about 2 quarts fully ripe blackberries. Add 1 teaspoon each cinnamon, cloves, and allspice, or any desired combination of spices.
Measure sugar into large kettle. Add prepared fruit and vinegar. Mix well and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 1 minute. Remove from fire and stir in fruit pectin. Simmer, pouring quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once. Makes about 10 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

Blueberry and Currant Jam
4 cups (2 lbs.) prepared fruit; 7 cups (3 lbs.) sugar; 1/2 bottle fruit pectin.
To prepare fruit, crush thoroughly or grind about 1 pound each fully ripe blueberries and currants. Combine fruits.
Measure sugar and prepared fruit into large kettle, mix well and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 1 minute. Remove from fire and stir in fruit pectin. Simmer, pouring quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once. Makes about 10 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

Elderberry Jelly
3 1/2 cups (1 1/2 lbs.) juice; 7 1/2 cups 3/4 lb. sugar; 1/2 cup lemon juice; 1 bottle fruit pectin.
To prepare juice, remove larger stems from about 4 pounds fully ripe elderberries. Place in a kettle and crush. Heat gently until juice starts to flow and then simmer, covered, 15 minutes. Place fruit in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice. Measure sugar and juice into large saucepan; add lemon juice. Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1/2 minute. Remove from fire, skin, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once. Makes about 10 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

Baking Powder Pie Crust
1/2 cup sifted flour; 1/4 teaspoon cream-tartar baking powder; 1/2 teaspoon salt; 2 1/2 cups cold shortening; 1/3 cup cold water (about).
Sift flour, cream-tartar, and salt into a shallow pan. Add water (preferably ice water), a small amount at a time, mixing lightly with fork. Handle as little as possible. Wrap in waxed paper and chill thoroughly before rolling. Roll out on slightly floured board. Bake in hot oven (400° F.) 15 minutes. Makes enough pastry for one 9-inch two-crust pie. Use in making pie shell only.

SAY "YES" TO THESE DESIGNS

YOUTHFUL costumes with a dash of sophistication that pleases both mother and daughter are the kind juniors favor this year. A frock like the one with puffed sleeves, a high bowed neckline, buttons down the center of the bodice and a simulated two-piece effect is one sure to please. (McCall 7382). Cotton in either a flowered motif or a vivid plaid gingham can be used. Cotton is queening it this year and it's up to every smart junior to see that she has the right amount of it in her wardrobe. Bolero costumes never fail the sub-deb, and the combination of plain and dotted material in a bolero outfit is unbeatable. (McCall 7398). Very studios, and yet very gay is this design and one not to be overlooked under any circumstances. (By courtesy of The McCall Company).

Would You Live Longer

By JOHN H. WILLIAMS, M. D. (City Health Commissioner)

Our national pride has been stirred by frequent references, from many sources, to the lengthening of the average span of human life. Upon looking and checking carefully into the facts, it has been discovered that this is due very largely to the wonderful saving of the lives of babies, and that our people, the American people, past middle age, are actually not living as long as they formerly did. This is in spite of the great reduction in typhoid fever, yellow fever, tuberculosis and most other communicable diseases.

Due to High Speed.
And now we hear that this increasing mortality after middle age is a peculiarity of the United States. In many other countries the death rate among adults is falling, and the actual span of life there is really being lengthened. What the cause is, of the apparent breakdown in this country, we are not sure, but it may be due to the higher speed at which we work and live and carry on.

The question naturally arises, what can we do about it? Do we prefer a short life and a merry one, or are we willing to slow down a little and live a few years longer? Excluding unavoidable accidents and some acute diseases, an individual is able to regulate his life to a considerable extent. The causes of death, which are fast cutting into middle age at a high rate, are various heart diseases, cancer, tuberculosis, apoplexy, diabetes and albuminuria—so-called Bright's disease. These do not spring up overnight. In fact, they develop very slowly, and in most cases are subject to diagnosis and treatment long before they reach the critical stage.

Various Causes Cited.
Periodical physical examinations should not be put off until some ailment is suspected or has made it self evident, but before serious damage has been done. A careful physical examination should not be made to see if we are sick, but to know that we are well. Various heart murmurs, rales in the lungs, lumps in the breast or elsewhere, tender areas, skin cancers or sores and minute skin fissures which will not heal, slight changes in the blood and urine, all can be picked out by a skilled physician with uncanny accuracy, and treatment started at once, thus saving weeks or months of valuable time.

The rush for prosperity and progress may have something to do with the cause of many of our physical ailments in middle life, but our momentum should not be so great that we cannot "Stop, Look and Listen" long enough for an occasional check-up which may prevent serious trouble and save time in the long run.

Find the Weak Spot.
Life and health are of more importance to most of us than pleasure and speed. You know you never miss the water until the well goes dry. Proper management and a closer check-up may enable us to live longer and enjoy a greater measure of happiness. Find your weak spot before it finds you.

My Favorite Recipes

EVEN in summer heat most families demand pie. So let's serve luscious, summer pies full of the cool quiver of fruit flavored gelatin. They look so pretty and will tempt the most languid appetite.

Fresh Peach Pie Glacé
8 (4 cups) fresh peaches, sliced; 3/4 cup sugar; 1 package orange-flavored gelatin; 1/2 cups warm water; dash of salt; 1 baked 9-inch pie shell.
Combine peaches and sugar and let stand 10 minutes. Dissolve gelatin in warm water. Add salt and pour over peaches. Chill. When slightly thickened, turn into cold pie shell. Chill until firm. Garnish with whipped cream, if desired.

Red Plum Pie Glacé
12 (1/4 cups) red plums, sliced; 1 cup sugar; 1/2 cup water; 1 package orange-flavored gelatin; 1/4 cups warm water; dash of salt; 1 baked 9-inch pie shell.
Combine plums and sugar and let stand 10 minutes. Dissolve gelatin in warm water. Add salt and pour over plums. Chill. When slightly thickened, turn into cold pie shell. Chill until firm.

Chilled Concord Grape Pie
3 1/2 cups Concord grapes, seeded; 1/2 cup seedless raisins; 1/4 cup sugar; 1/2 teaspoon salt; 1/2 cup water; 1 package orange-flavored gelatin; 1 baked 9-inch pie shell.
Cook grapes, raisins, sugar, and water together 5 minutes. Add gelatin and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Chill. When slightly thickened, turn into cold pie shell. Chill until firm.

Golden Apricot Meringue Pie
1/2 pound dried apricots, cooked and drained; 1/3 cup sugar; 1 package orange-flavored gelatin; 1 pint warm apricot juice and water; 1/2 teaspoon salt; 1 baked 9-inch pie shell.
Combine apricots and sugar. Dissolve gelatin in warm apricot juice and water. Add salt and pour over apricots. Chill. When slightly thickened, turn into cold pie shell. Chill until firm.

Three-Minute Meringue
2 egg whites, unbeaten; 1/2 cup sugar; dash of salt; 2 tablespoon water; few drops vanilla or almond extract.
Put egg whites, sugar, salt, and water in upper part of double boiler. Beat with rotary egg beater until thoroughly mixed. Place over rapidly boiling water and beat 1 minute; then remove from fire, and continue beating 2 minutes longer, or until mixture will stand in peaks. Add remaining heat. Spread over top of baked fruit pie. Sprinkle with shredded coconut, if desired.

Baking Powder Pie Crust
1/2 cup sifted flour; 1/4 teaspoon cream-tartar baking powder; 1/2 teaspoon salt; 2 1/2 cups cold shortening; 1/3 cup cold water (about).
Sift flour, cream-tartar, and salt into a shallow pan. Add water (preferably ice water), a small amount at a time, mixing lightly with fork. Handle as little as possible. Wrap in waxed paper and chill thoroughly before rolling. Roll out on slightly floured board. Bake in hot oven (400° F.) 15 minutes. Makes enough pastry for one 9-inch two-crust pie. Use in making pie shell only.

But we also need a blue eagle of the second class, with a starker reading: "The spirit is willing, but the bank account is weak."

Dairy Day Guest

MARY DAHNE, Director of Home Economics, Kraft-Phenix Cheese Corporation

The subject of what to eat and how to eat it is the most important subject in the world to women is the contention of Mary Dahne, nationally known food authority.

"Interest in dairy products has never been so great as it is today," Miss Dahne says. "Our consumption of cheese alone has increased in the past ten years from less than three pounds per capita to almost five pounds last year.

"Increased general knowledge on the part of American women of the importance and use of milk and milk products in the daily diet is making America a healthier and sturdier nation."

Spend--Save Now; High Prices Near

Country is Through With Bargain Prices--Oversupply of Labor Coming To An End.

A recent Dun & Bradstreet report accentuated a fact of the most importance:

"For a number of months' business recovery has continued without recession; and present signs do not indicate that any recession will occur in the near future.

In other words, we are not having a "rise in the depression" now. We are actually throwing off depression. The wise property owner will do well to think that over. It means that the country is through with bargain prices for commodities and services, that the terrific oversupply of goods and labor isn't going to last much longer. It means higher prices. It means that if we put off fixing our houses and business property or rebuilding the tottering garage for another few months, we are going to pay a lot more for what we get. Yes, it's time to "build, to improve, to repair. It will put money in your pocket, save valuable property from going to pieces, and demonstrate your faith in the maxim that Investment and Employment Are Cheaper and Better Than Charity.

MODEST HEN.
Lots of women are continually complaining of how hard they have to work and no doubt many of these complaints are justifiable. However, there are some women who do more cackling about cooking an egg for their husband's breakfast than the hen that laid the egg.

Lord Byron, English poet, once swam the channel of the Dardanelles in an hour and ten minutes. The feat was accomplished at the narrowest point of the channel where the current is swiftest and the distance a mile across.

"COOK" who takes a daily AFTERNOON OFF

BE YOURSELF and a good cook, too! Step Out for the afternoon—every afternoon, if you wish. Don't miss the happy hours of life... have a carefree summer with an abundance of healthful recreation. There is no need to center your whole life around a kitchen and the preparation of meals.

When you have a modern Electric Range, you may put a complete meal in a cold oven, leave the house light-heartedly, and your range will automatically cook a better dinner than would be possible if you were to sit beside the oven door of an old-fashioned range all afternoon. You can come in at the last minute and find a delicious meal waiting to be served.

We have the make and model that best fills your needs.

NOTICE OF BIDS FOR TEMPORARY SCHOOL LOAN

Notice is hereby given that at 10:00 o'clock a. m., on Tuesday, September 5th, 1933, at the office of the superintendent of City Schools, in the Central High School Building in the city of Muncie, Indiana, the Board of School Trustees of the School City of Muncie, Indiana, will receive sealed bids and proposals for temporary school loans aggregating Forty Four Thousand Dollars ($44,000.00) to raise funds to meet the current operating expenses of said School City for use of the tuition fund for the fiscal school year in anticipation and to be paid out of the taxes actually levied and now in course of collection for the fiscal school year, which said loans shall be evidenced by time warrants of the School City of Muncie, Indiana, executed in its name and on its behalf by its Board of School Trustees. Said warrants will be payable on January 1, 1934, and will bear interest at the lowest rate obtainable, not exceeding six per cent (6%) per annum, the interest to maturity to be added to and included in the face value of said warrants. Said time warrants evidencing said temporary loans will be dated and issued on the following respective dates, for the following respective amounts and for use of the tuition fund, to-wit:

Sept. 22, 1933 $15,000.00
Oct. 6, 1933 20,000.00
Oct. 18, 1933 9,000.00

Said loans will be made with the bidder or bidders submitting the lowest rate of interest and the amount of the face value of said warrants with interest to maturity will be appropriated out of the current revenues of the tuition fund, and will be pledged to the payment thereof. Each bidder will be required to submit with his bid an affidavit showing that no collision exists between himself and any other bidder for such loan. The board reserves the right to reject any and all bids and to award any part or all of said loans to the same bidder or to divide the same between two or more bidders.

TAKE IT ON THE CHIN.

When a fellow is down and thinks he is out, instead of moping around he should throw back his head and poke out his chest and look the world squarely in the eye. In other words, he should remember that even a postage stamp is not worth a darn until after it is licked.

There are a few newspaper writers who seem to enjoy raising a "stink" in the community where they reside, but the wind generally blows it back in their faces and eventually they get the worst of it—take William Sutton and White River, for instance.

Drive-in Theaters Become a Reality

Parking Spaces So Arranged that Vision is Not Obstructed at Any Time

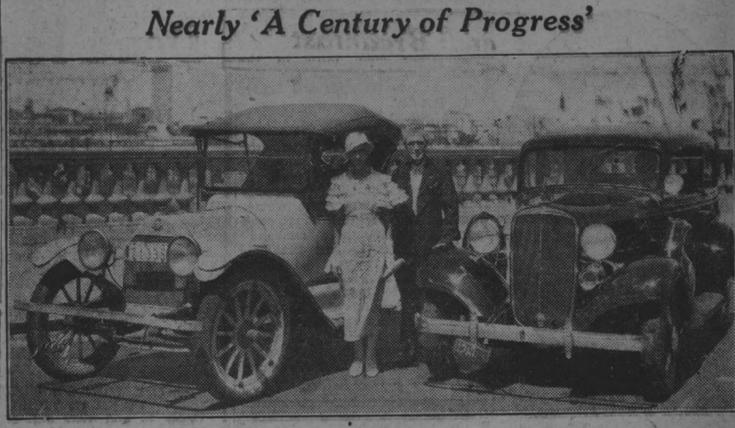

How would you like to go to a movie or play and not be worried about where to park your car or whether you are going to get an overtime parking ticket while you are enjoying the show? Well, in the future you will be able to go to the theater, drive in, watch the performance without ever getting out of your own car.

This isn't a pipe dream, either, for the first of a proposed chain of such theaters has already been opened in New Jersey by its inventor, Richard M. Hollingshead, Junior.

An area of 250,000 square feet is used for the theater and provides space for 400 cars and places the average in each car at four passengers, 1,600 people would be able to see the show at a time. The parking spaces are so arranged that your vision is not obstructed by the coming and going of other patrons. Ushers travel around on bicycles while escorting you to your place.

No matter how far from the stage you park, you can always hear the dialogue and it's not done with mirrors—but it is done with electricity by means of a directional sound device. Even if it should be raining and with all the windows closed, you still may hear clearly, but at no spot in the theater is the sound too loud.

Patrons may smoke, have refreshments brought to them or converse freely without disturbing anyone else. And the best part of

So rapid have been advances made in car design and performance that when the old timer on the left rolled up to the gates at A Century of Progress, Chicago, at the end of its trek from Texas, visitors will have wondered whether it was destined for an exhibition hall. It is a 1916 Chevrolet roadster owned by T. J. Finerty, of San Antonio, who with Mrs. Finerty is shown beside the car on the World's Fair grounds. The old timer has been in continuous service since its purchase in the Union, and has rolled up through practically every state in the Union, and has rolled up about 300,000 miles. Beside it is shown a 1933 Chevrolet coach built in the assembly plant operated by the Chevrolet Motor Company in the General Motors Building at the Fair.

if a farmer of thirty years ago could be suddenly transported to the Chicago's World's Fair and shown the model exhibit of electricity at work in agriculture. As the saying goes, his eyes would pop out. He would see chickens treated with ultra violet rays, and their hours of rest and work controlled by light. Cows in a scientifically built lactary are automatically washed and then milked by sanitary, efficient electric equipment. Electric cooling and bolting equipment has superseded old hand methods. There are no hay lofts in the modern barn—instead, a large new type silo, a silo within a silo stores both ensilage and dry feed and reduces fire hazards. Two small structures store grain which is transported by electric conveyor systems. In the fields of this farm, he would see still more startling things. Even the tractor, though up-to-date a short time ago, has been dispensed with, its place taken by an electric cable plough which makes its way about the field carrying its own self-winding cable. There are no power poles to interfere with work or mar the farm's appearance—all the distributional lines are underground. As a matter of fact, the farmer of thirty years ago wouldn't be the only one to start with unbelieve eyes at the exhibit. To the of the future will be like in a real sense proclaimed as "the Lord's gift to man" of the nation, "has recently been world's fair shows what their farm "disrobed" at Washington.

Fan Mail and Breakfast By BETTY BARCLAY

WHAT do they eat in Hollywood when they sit down to breakfast at a table loaded with tall mail, no doubt?

Movie heroes and heroines have strenuous days. They need healthful food. But these same celebrities must retain a clear skin, a perfect figure and perfect health—so breakfast must be chosen carefully.

Handsome Buddy Rogers—now starring in "5 Cents a Glass,"—enjoys oranges and ham at the morning meal. Fruit waffles is another favorite breakfast in the film colony.

Those of us who live elsewhere can enjoy these dishes whenever we choose. Here are the recipes: Ham with Oranges (Serves 6)

6 servings fried ham 2 tablespoons flour 2 cups orange juice Parsley

2 to 3 oranges for slices Fry ham. For this number of servings a ham steak about 1 1/2 pounds will be required. Add flour to 2 tablespoons of fat from frying ham and cook until lightly browned. Add orange juice, stirring well to avoid lumps. Cook 5 minutes or until sauce is thick. Pour sauce around ham on serving dish. Garnish with parsley and orange slices.

Orange Waffles (Makes 6 sets of waffles in 2-section iron) 3 eggs, beaten 1/4 cup sugar 3 teaspoons grated orange rind 1 1/4 cups pastry flour 2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder

Put the mixture in a waffle iron and cook until golden brown. Serve in sandwich form with filling and top of slightly sweetened whipped cream. Garnish with 3 orange segments on top and 1 segment at each side of waffle.

Spotlight Turned on "Mellon's Millions"

Young Newspaperman Traces Steps Through Which Family Became Richest in World.

By Elliot Harris.

"Mellon's Millions," by Harvey O'Connor—a young newspaper man who has been writing for the labor press for many years—is the title of a new book which may well become one of the best sellers of the year.

It is a fascinating book in itself, well written and packed with facts which must have cost years of labor to gather. It deals with the fortunes of perhaps the richest family inhabiting the jungles of high finance.

And it starts with a valuable "send-off" from Andrew W. Mellon himself, who, forsaking his role of dignified silence, rushed into the daily press to denounce the work as "literary racketeering," and to declare that the author confuses "serenity with biography."

A good many chronicles have to be somewhat scurrilous to be true. No libel suits have been filed against the author or publisher of this volume, however. The Pittsburg "Press," right in Andrew Mellon's home town, published a page of excerpts from the book, and hasn't been sued yet, either.

Eyes on Big Chance. The book is correctly called the "Biography of a Fortune." It begins with Thomas Mellon, Andrew's father.

Tom was a farmer's son, but the farm meant too much to him. He tells in his autobiography that he was strongly attracted to the ministry, but there was no money in it, so he turned to law, instead.

When he got tired of a boarding house, he looked around for a wife. He made a list of eligible maidens, with the faults and virtues of each. Courtship interfered greatly with his plans for wealth, so he cut it as short as possible, and when he stole a kiss from the lady of his choice he went home at once, "feeling," he records, "unmolested for conversation."

His wife bore him eight children, two of them girls who died in childhood. "Daughters who die young," he remarks, "are not greatly to be lamented."

Defending Union Called Folly. He was more concerned about one of his sons who was in Milwaukee during the Civil War, and who enlisted for 100 days, subject to his father's consent. That consent was denied by telegraph, though the thrifty parent followed with a letter.

"It makes me sad to see this piece of folly," wrote Mellon, Sr. "I had hoped my boy was going to make a smart, intelligent business man, and was not such a goose as to be seduced from his duty by buncombe speeches."

"You are a poor, misguided boy," wrote his mother. "My dear son, look to God and ask directions."

From which it seems that in the bright lexicon of the Mellon family enlisting when his country is at war.

Tom had no such difficulties with his third son, Andrew. "Andy" at 22, met Henry Clay Frick, then 26, and the two struck up an alliance that lasted until Frick died.

Frick's specialty was coke, produced by the labor of imported "Hunkies," who were clubbed or shot into submission by the deputies and coal and iron police. Mr. O'Connor tells the story of some of the strikes which Frick suppressed with bullet and blackjack.

"Mellon watched the struggle through his cold, gray-blue eyes," reports O'Connor, "nodded approvingly when Frick triumphed, and jotted down for future reference the useful technique."

Fought Labor Unions. From that time to this, the Mellon fortune has fought labor unions and to get the help of police and deputies and judges has backed the crooked political machines which have disgraced Pennsylvania.

It is claimed Mellon put up $1,500,000 for Harding's campaign fund in 1920. That made him eligible for Secretary of the Treasury, despite the law which barred anyone "engaged in trade or commerce" from that high post.

The Mellon fortune, O'Connor finds, began with note shaving. Thomas started this. By the time the boys were grown there was a bank, and there were the profits of real estate deals.

Each period of prosperity gave its harvest of added millions to A. W. Mellon," says O'Connor. "In each succeeding depression, he wielded energetically the broom of foreclosure."

banker takes control of a new enterprise and gets the public to put up the money for it. He could see a bargain as far as a desert vulture can see a dying camel.

For some time he stuck to home affairs—banking, coal, coke, steel, traction. Then Charles M. Hall devised a new method for making aluminum. They needed more money, went to Mellon—and the Mellon family monopolizes the light metal today.

A South Slav, Tony Luchich, anglicized to "Lucas," drilled the Spindletop oil well in Texas. He and his backers spent all their money in capping the giant gusher. Mellon carried on the work, and the result is the Gulf Oil Corporation, with assets of $761,000,000. Lucas got $400,000.

Got Secret Divorce. But the sum of it all is that the Mellon family controls, dominates or guides corporations with total assets of some $7,000,000,000 in 1929.

Mellon married an Irish girl—warm-hearted, warm-tempered—and she finally decided that she could not live with a cash register any longer. Detectives spent $32,500 on acoustophones to spy on her conversations. Mellon got a law passed through the Pennsylvania legislature enabling him to get a divorce in secret, but the news leaked out to papers outside of Pennsylvania, and Mellon was glad to settle.

Mellon came to the Treasury to save the rich from taxation, and to large extent did so. He saved himself $828,000 in one year's income taxes. He presented Congress with divers Mellon plans all untaxing the rich; and some of them got through. His estimates on public revenue were always wrong.

He boosted the gambling in the stock market which helped the nation toward disaster. He refunded more than three billion dollars of taxes, mainly to the super-rich. His oil companies bullied concessions out of South American states; and gunmen employed by his companies murdered strikers—his candid biographer tells it all.

No Sympathy for Sufferers. O'Connor insists that Mellon was not worried by the effect of the depression on the working population.

He refused to lend Pennsylvania $1,000,000 for relief, although when Governor Pinchot came to ask for the loan, he was shown some gems that Andy had just bought costing $1,170,000.

In the winter of 1932-33 the Mellon family gave $200,000 for relief in Pittsburgh, "which," says O'Connor, "was one-sixth of their personal income from the annual dividends of only one of their many banks.—Labor.

200,000 Rare Wild Birds in Gaspesia See Their Realm Opened to Scientists

Two of the nature wonders of the North American continent just opened to easy access by scientists and students over a modern highway around the Gaspesia Peninsula of Quebec. Above, the famous Perce Rock, or "pierced rock," in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, a piece of Mont Joli which slipped out to sea and is being slowly ground up by the waves. More than 200,000 rare wild birds, including relatives of the extinct flightless great auks, haunt this geological wonderland, literally covering the big rock and the cliffs on nearby Bonaventure Island, now a Dominion bird sanctuary believed to be the most densely inhabited wild bird refuge in the world. Left, a family of gannets in a colony of more than 14,000 protected "residents." No, that's not a mask, merely a highly decorative beak supplied by nature.

HERE, THERE

Delaware County, as there is no intention in that direction, and so far as our knowledge goes, business in Delaware County is transacted in a business way, but there are numerous counties in Indiana that are affected in this manner, and to these we offer no apology.

For many years past the people of Indiana have been burdened with excessive taxes brought about through the unwarranted expenditure of millions of dollars, and which has been placed in the hands of unscrupulous politicians to be spent by them at will. The result of this has been, the politicians in many cases have become rich and affluent, while the people have become poorer each day until at the present time there are thousands of honest men and women who are unable to bear the load, and in consequence of this their properties are being slowly confiscated in order to meet the tax demand.

What is needed at this time is more honesty in the handling of public affairs by honest officials and elimination of all graft from public work, and not until we are able to bring about this condition will there be relief from excessive taxation.

Another contributory cause for high taxes may be found in a great many counties in the state, and that is the fact that it is almost an impossibility to elect a man to the office of county commissioner unless he is a farmer. Of course there can be no valid objection to the election of a farmer to any public office, but in many cases farmers have been elected to the most important office in the county, that of county commissioner, and have successfully managed a farm, but when it comes to managing the affairs of an immense corporation like a county, they are simply lost, due to the fact that a different kind of management is required, one in which they are not skilled.

If evidence of the incompetency of many of the men elected as county commissioners is needed, one has only to visit some of the county seats throughout the state and see the vast amount of useless road building equipment that has been purchased which could not be used after it was bought. Or, one might be present at a meeting of the board of county commissioners and note the number of claims filed for approval of the board. These claims are supposed to be itemized, and if it happens to be a claim for per diem services, just notice the items as to what constitutes a day's work.

A lot of old timers can always be found around the commissioners court when claims are being considered, and all the old boys have a claim to be passed on whether it is right or wrong. Many of these so-called claims are ridiculous and should under no circumstances be allowed, but through the intervention of friends who reside in the district in which one of the commissioners was elected, and noted and "whooped it up" for him, the claim is usually allowed, and in this way the taxpayers are robbed of thousands of dollars each year.

On the other hand, if the board of county commissioners was composed of business men, much of this graft, for such it really is, would be eliminated, and those who file claims for three or four days each month when in reality they have worked but two or three hours, would be given to understand that two or three hours did not constitute a full day and if they wanted a full day's pay, they would be to be done, many thousands of dollars would be saved the taxpayers each year.

It must not be understood, that this is intended as a reflection on the board of commissioners of Delaware County, as there is no intention in that direction, and so far as our knowledge goes, business in Delaware County is transacted in a business way, but there are numerous counties in Indiana that are affected in this manner, and to these we offer no apology.

SAFETY EARNS

(Continued From Page One) rate is accompanied by higher efficiency. When a great many accidents occur in an industry the morale of workers is seriously impaired. There is a distinct slowing down in their operations. There is discontent—that most potent of all disturbers. And there is very likely a red-ink showing at the end of the month or the quarter.

During the past decade industry has made fine strides in safety. The roster of major businesses which operate for a year at a stretch without an accident of importance, is constantly growing. And those are the businesses which we know best—which are most stable, most efficient and most profitable.

In Hands of Public. In the future, safety can earn its greatest dividends on the highway. We complain because casualty insurance rates go up—and we overlook the fact that they went up because accidents increased in number and severity and the financial drain on insurance companies grew accordingly. Automobile rates, like home and industrial accident rates, are in the hands of the public, which increases or decreases the hazard on which the rate is based.

Every American should resolve to help alleviate tragedy and at the same time fatten his pocketbook by being a safer citizen.

LITTLE DOING

(Continued From Page One) Editorial Association. During his stay in Indianapolis the senator met hundreds of friends and made countless new acquaintances. He expects to leave early for Washington and to resume work, and there is plenty of work to do even though congress will not convene until January. Senator VanNuy is one of the most important of the Senate committees and from September to January he will be held down by daily conferences of this group which must report at the coming session.

New Spirit Evident. Politically, as far as the Democratic party is concerned, the return of Senator VanNuy was a master stroke. He proved to be a great harmonizing factor that is already being reflected in more ways than one. There has been more of the spirit that prevailed among Democratic leaders of Indiana during the campaign last year than has been noticed for several months. It might be said that the Democrats are again united and are marching on as they did a year ago. New life has been injected and the Democrats are suddenly finding they have plenty of good, solid material with which to refute the malicious propaganda that has been sent out from Republican state headquarters.

Force Nearly Spent. In our first paragraph we said that Senator Robinson is not in as good standing as he was several weeks ago. There are two projects for that. Robinson has spent the greatest part of his force in the past month. He knows there is little left for him to solidify himself before he has to return to Washington for the session of Congress and when he is gone what the party leaders of the state will do to him will be plenty. So, Artie has gone wild, made extravagant statements and attacked President Roosevelt with insane arguments until sensible people are tired of him and what amount to chatter from a chatterbox. Then, two weeks ago, Republican leaders in the hotel lobbies were knitting their brows and wondering whether Robinson could be defeated for the nomination. Now, they are biding their time and winking at each other with the knowing look that there is a chance they have been waiting for. Obviously, Robinson's play has been to shut out all opposition, but he will find plenty there just the same by the time the March winds blow next year.

CITY CONTROLLER

(Continued From Page One) 499.47. In comparison it will be noted that this is a still greater reduction over previous years. The city is operating this year on $368,000 less money than was required during 1929. This reduction is hardly believable, but nevertheless authentic and a fact. The budget as proposed by the council for 1934 would amount to a total of $432,028.19, an increase over the present year, but still a large reduction as compared with former years.

Expenses Not Increased. The proposed rate of $1.125 on each $100 of assessed valuation would raise on the $99,000,000 value of taxable property in the city of Muncie, a total of $438,750. It has been discussed to refund some bonded indebtedness for 1934, which would decrease the sinking fund rate 6 cents and contemplated slashes in the park budget would eliminate 1 cent from the total rate. Providing this adjustment is made the total tax rate for the city would amount to $1.055 on each $100 of assessed valuation which would raise a total sum of $411,450.

It cannot be disputed that the city has made remarkable reductions in the costs of government during the present administration and it is NOT due to increased expenditures that the tax rate is higher for 1934, but who's due to the pronounced decrease in the assessed valuation of taxable property within the city. This reduction in assessed valuations has not only been foolishly practiced in Muncie and Delaware County, but in numerous places throughout Indiana. Recent reports show that the city of Elwood, Indiana, proposes a $1.06 tax rate for the city of Elwood, next year, and Hartford City has established a total tax rate of $4.345 on each $100 of assessed valuation.

Jewels Are Discovered. He shouts in excitement, for all about him on the floor are glittering objects of gold, bracelets, rings, necklaces, jade, silver, pearl, turquoise, beautiful goblets of rock crystal and pipes of bones, found in the tomb. Suddenly a pick breaks through the dirt and strikes stone, and by the sound of the blow, Dr. Case knows that beneath, there is a cavity. The workers, too, become excited. They dig faster. Soon the stone is loosened, and lifted from its place. Dr. Case peers into a black void. The opening is too small for the pump Case, so he lowers a slim assistant, Juan Valenzuela. Senior Valenzuela drops to the floor of the tomb, and lights his flashlight.

History in Bones. There are countless jaguar bones carved with a technique comparable to that of the best Chinese and Hindu ivory carvers. Their hieroglyphics tell the story of the Mixtec race, making them veritable leaves of history, written on bones. "Here is one," said Senorita del Rio, "which tells of the birth of an important child. See, there is the child being brought to earth through the tree of life, while his ancestors await his arrival. This may be symbolic of the origin of the race, for the Mixtecs still believe that their ancestors sprang from two large trees."

Slaves Are Sacrificed. There are dozens of gold breastplates and masks, but one is unusually significant. It represents the head of the god Xipetotec, "Our Lord the Played." In a bloody ritual celebrated to make the earth fruitful, the Mixtec priests sacrificed three slaves and skinned the bodies.

Dressed in the skin of the victims, and with faces painted black and their heads smeared with blood, the priests went into their weird ritual dance.

"No wonder the Spaniards under Cortez wrote back home that the Mixtec priests looked like the very devil," explained Senorita del Rio.

The little mask vividly depicts the skin of the victim as the priest wore it.

One of the most remarkable pieces is a beautiful rock crystal cup, ground from a solid block of some painstaking Mixtec lapidary. Rock crystal is one of the hardest and most brittle of stones, and it must have required the lifetime of an artist to produce such an object.

Brittle as Glass. And there are earrings—large earrings, two inches in diameter, which the Mixtecs wore. The lobes of the ear was pierced and stretched for years so that the Mixtec might wear these earrings. Some are of obsidian, ground to the fineness of paper, though obsidian is as brittle as glass, and much harder.

Three funeral urns were found in the dirt, beneath the other objects. Their are definitely that of the Zapotecs, as is of the stones with which the tomb was constructed. This leads archeologists to believe that the Zapotecs constructed the tomb and that the Mixtecs later conquered them in one of their innumerable wars, and broke the Zapotec idols.

Today the Mixtecs and the Zapotecs live together peacefully in the valleys of Oaxaca, the glory of their races and the fierce wars of the past only a dim tradition in their memories. But those who know, says Senorita del Rio can even yet find among the hills of Oaxaca Mixtec natives who bury their little jade gods in their corn fields to insure fertility. And not for all the gold in the world will they sell them. For them, Xipetotec and the fierce gods of the past still walk the desolate hills of Monte Alban, just as they have walked through the oppression of the conquistadores and the vicissitudes which have beset Mexico for a thousand years.

Leaves of History Written on Bones

Hieroglyphics Tell Story of Mixtec Race—Vivid Story of Discovery of Rare Jewels in Tombs of Monte Alban, in Southwest Mexico.

The time is the afternoon of January 9, 1932. The place, how to work with iron. The metal Monte Alban, a desolate mountain must have been discovered as it is in southwestern Mexico. A group of laborers is digging into the fact that this was the only way important mound top directed by an archeologist. He is Dr. Alfonso X. Case, head of the department of archeology of the National Museum of Mexico. For three months his little party has been toiling to uncover the long-forgotten ruins of an ancient fortified city whose culture was old when Columbus discovered America, and which was destined to wither swiftly into the obscurity under the oppression of the Spanish conquerors. Inexplicitly, Dr. Case senses a discovery of importance in this lonely mound. He spurs his workers to greater effort, for after a long moon is waning. Suddenly a pick breaks through the dirt and strikes stone, and by the sound of the blow, Dr. Case knows that beneath, there is a cavity. The workers, too, become excited. They dig faster.
