Greencastle is again honored in the recognition accorded Col. Matson, who has been mentioned in several parts of the state as an excellent candidate for the Senate of the United States.

We are having one of those early springs that have been so scarce in Indiana for several years—have while it is ours, as the ancient sages would put it.

In the Daniel case we have another instance of a man being put to the utmost inconvenience and loss of time and money, in order to prove that he did not commit a crime the state charged him with committing.

ROADS AND ROAD MAKING

GOOD ROADS AND BUSINESS.

Large Sums Expended for Temporary Improvements.

The people of the United States are paying at least $500,000,000 a year to the bad roads fund. In other words, the excessive cost, the loss of time, the wear and tear on horses, vehicles, and equipment in transporting the products of the American farms, forests, mills and mines to the railroad stations, or to the markets, aggregates more than half a billion dollars each year says James B. Metkile in Good Roads.

It has been estimated by the Department of Agriculture that the cost of transporting the products of the United States, by wagon, to the railroad stations, aggregates more than $900,000,000 a year, and that practically two-thirds of that sum might be saved by universal good roads.

The greatest fault in the present road system is that the money expended is spent very largely upon temporary work, or in make-shift construction. This is necessarily so, because all of the roads must be kept open and passable, even if they are not good.

In the Interest of Good Roads. A practical step in the direction of good roads has been taken by the creation of a new profession—highway engineering.

Permanence or Makeshift. "Good roads at $200 a mile" is the heading of an article that has recently been the rounds of the press, and which suggests that the bargain counter bacillus, which is, perhaps, the most expensive pest of the age, is attacking the vitality of the proposition for permanent road building.

Well constructed roads may be maintained at some such cost as is suggested, but they must first be properly built, and provided with adequate drainage, solid foundation and good surface.

Another Chance to Economize. The New York Times recently stated that the apparently large balance in trade in favor of the country is practically offset by an estimated expenditure of $300,000,000 a year made by American tourists to Europe.

It has been estimated that bad roads cost our farmers annually $500,000,000 in the extra expense of hauling their products, and can it not be presumed that at least one-half of this $500,000,000 spent by pleasure seekers abroad might also be saved to our people by making home attractive.

Scottish Pavements. City Engineer Thompson, of Seattle, Wash., describes in a letter the prevailing pavements of Glasgow, Scotland. They are of granite blocks from two to three inches deep, each so carefully dressed that they have the appearance when laid of vitrified brick.

In Keeping Butter. Butter that is to be kept for any length of time should be washed with water that has been thoroughly boiled and cooled down to 58 degrees.

Excepting labor and hives, there is practically no expense attached to the bee industry.

The Way.

Dobson—The President of the Hide and Seek Bank speculated. Hobson—And, naturally, was successful? Dobson—Why do you jump at that conclusion? Hobson—Because they don't call it speculation when bank presidents win.

Her Pa Was a Bad Man.

Miranda—I advised mamma to use a little rouge, she was so pale. Don't you think it improves her appearance? Papa—Yes, my dear, it puts an entirely new complexion on the mater.

"Gentle Palm's Resistless Motion."

TWO VIEWS. Coming.

Going.

A Tough Proposition.

Puzzled Barber—I really don't know what he wants and if I ask I'll probably hurt his feelings.

HOW HE HAD BEEN TAMED.

The young man who had picked up three books in succession, only to discard them, finally lit a cigar nervously and sat on the corner of the table. "Say," he began, "do you suppose all girls are alike—in some particular way, that is?"

"The other young man looked bewildered and then resigned. "I was in the middle of the most exciting chapter in this story," he remarked. "What do you mean—that is, of course, if you know what you mean?"

"I was just wondering," said the young man on the table. "You can never tell, you know. Now, there's Albert Banitt. You know Albert?" "I did know Albert," replied the other young man; "before he was married, two years ago. I haven't seen much of him since."

"Of course not," said the young man on the table. "He's married. Well, I knew him two years ago, too—and of all the bluff and hearty, no-time-for-nonsense sort of chaps, he was the most pronounced."

"Nobody else could hear himself think when Albert was in a crowd, he cause he always had so much to say. And he said it, too! I'd like to see any one who could have stopped him! And he was up to everything going. As for girls—say, he kept them as meek as Moses waiting for his smile, and didn't care whether any of them liked it or not! That was Albert!"

"Yes, that's what he was, all right," agreed the other young man. "I have been surprised that his wife has tolerated him so long!"

The young man on the table nearly fell off in his emotion. "I see you are truly ignorant," he said. "Albert and his wife and I all happened to be at Jones's the other day. I had never really had a chance to get acquainted with her before. I didn't notice that Albert was with her when she came in, because she had on so much furs and hat and swept into the parlor so all-pervasively that I didn't see him following."

"Said Albert's wife, 'You know, Mrs. Jones, I had the worst work getting Albert to drop his old newspaper and come out calling with me. He just ruins his health staying in the house. He doesn't know what is good for him, and it's lucky I do!'"

"Not that he didn't want to come to see you and Mrs. Jones—he was eager when he found we were coming here—but he is indolent about getting started. Albert, did you take your cough medicine before you left? You've no idea how careless he is, Mrs. Jones! About everything, too! Now, the day I particularly told him I needed only a yard and a quarter more of dimity, what did he do but get a yard and a half—and it is one of my rules never to make useless purchases. It's throwing money away!"

"What did I do? Why, I just made him return the yard and a half the next day and go in later and get what I had asked for in the first place! It was the only way to make him remember next time. "He's pretty good about doing my shopping errands for me—it's right on his way to the office, and there's no sense in my bothering to go down. But he bought the queerest things for himself till I saw plainly there was nothing for it but to show him what he wanted. "Of course, it's a nuisance in a way, but I always go with him now when he buys shirts and collars and things. I see that he gets things that are useful and sensible instead of three-dollar ties and shirts made to order. Albert, throw back your coat to Mr. Jones can see that shirt you have on. I want him to see what a bargain we got. Ready made, of course—Albert says the neckband doesn't fit, but I can't see but that it's all right and it's just imagination on his part. I tell him if he stops thinking about it he'll never know the difference. "No, I don't suppose a man would have picked out a chocolate and white shirt—but the goods will wear well. There isn't any sense in spending so much money for a garment other people never see and wouldn't pay any attention to if they did. Albert is getting very sensible about such things, Mrs. Jones. He didn't see it at first but he does now. Don't you Albert?"

Cruel.

Ethel—Sister says you remind her of my doll. Cholly—Why does she think so? Ethel—Well, you know, dolly's head is filled with sawdust, too.

Peaceful and Quiet.

Mrs. Scribbles—I have only rented a room at this resort to finish my new book. It is called "The Quiet Home." Miss Auto—Why didn't you write at home, then? Mrs. Scribbles—Too many noisy children around.

Self-Reproach.

"Was it green, Willie?" "Yep, but not half as green as I wuz to tackle it!"

Ready to Welcome Them.

Mrs. Jellers was peeping out through her lace curtains. "These people that are moving in next door can't fool me by covering their furniture with burlaps as if it were something fine," she said. "I've looked them up in the commercial directories."—Chicago Tribune.

Nothing to Back It.

Miss Millions—If you want to succeed you must have confidence in yourself. Mr. Noah Rocks—How can a man have confidence in himself when he only gets $10 a week.

Couldn't See Her.

Tom—You ought not to kick. I don't see your daughter as much as I used to. Her father—You don't. Tom—No, sir. When I call now I always put out the gas.

They are Small in Proportion to Cases, but Caution is Necessary. The melancholy death under an anaesthetic of Hon. T. A. The Story of American Shoes. The story of leather in the United States is largely a history of invention and improvement in shoe-making machinery. Starting with the stitching-machine of Colonel McKay (who was, it should be said, more of an exploiter than an inventor), in rapid succession there were put on the market machines for wetting, pegging, and lacing, more than a score for performing all these complicated operations by which the modern ready-made shoe is built up.

Pride. Some people are very much afraid of pride, confounding it with arrogance. Pride differs from arrogance in that it is based upon the genuine not the false. One sort of pride makes a man look up his head and feel himself a man. It will not allow him to do a mean action, or associate with bad company.

Aerial Smuggling.

Martinsville Reporter: Prosecutor Hughes led a raid on two blind tigers and gambling dens at Harmony, Clay County, Sunday. A big bunch of men and two van loads of booze and staff were taken. This is in line with the work done by the deputy prosecuting attorney of the Monroe-Lawrence Circuit and is sure proof of an earnest desire to stop habitual violations of the law. The Prosecutor can determine more accurately whether there is evidence for conviction, if present when the raid is made. If evidence should be insufficient to convict, then there is no necessity for harassing the innocent with further proceedings.
