A MOUNTAIN OF GOLD

IT EXISTS IN QUEENSLAND AND IS MAKING MEN RICH.

Mount Morgan, the Australian Eldorado—How It Was Discovered and Its Vast Wealth Developed.

Chambers's Journal. In olden times it was said that there were "seven wonders of the world"—the Pyramids of Egypt, the Hanging Gardens at Babylon, the Colossus at Rhodes, and other creations of the genius and labor of man; but, compared with these, the wonders of nature known at the present day are as seventy times seven, and are found in every part of this grand old earth. We have read in fabulous story of mountains of gold; but we supposed that such miracles of nature existed only in the visions of poets and romanticists. However, it is known to many that a veritable mountain of golden ore exists in Queensland, the sunny State of the new Australian Commonwealth. This mountain is now being tunneled and leveled, and its stone crushed and passed through chemical processes. In one year over 32,000 ounces of pure gold were extracted; and the value of the mine once rose in the share market to more than seventeen millions sterling!

Traveling in Central Queensland a few months ago, curiosity induced us to visit this mountain of gold, which is situated about twenty-five miles from the populous city of Rockhampton. The train by which we made the journey runs some distance through open forest country, timbered mainly with bloodwood, boxgums and iron bark trees, and up a very steep ridge called the Razor Back to a range of mountains stretching for miles from north to south, where the air is cool and pleasant after the heat and dust of the city. As this famous mine is approached great activity is seen all about the place, and the machinery, and occasionally the sullen boom of a blasting explosion; and the smoke from the furnaces and various peculiar chemical odors make the atmosphere less bright and invigorating.

Working the Mine. In the immense tunnels made in the mountain, tier on tier, are men busily at work blasting and hewing the stone and loading it on trucks, which convey it to buckets that are lowered down from one platform to another until the huge crushing machines are reached; then the ore is carried forward by trucks and buckets to the furnaces, where it is roasted and made porous for the Hall-Richard chlorination process. The ore is now placed in large barrels and treated with chlorine solution, under high pressure; and afterward it is discharged into leaching vats, fitted with sand and gravel filters, placed directly underneath. The leaching is repeated, and it is finally made to percolate through perforated board work covered with cheesecloth, and through a bed of charcoal. This precipitates the gold, and leaves it in shining beads of fine dust on the surface. The residue is full of intense interest to the visitor. The grandeur and riches of nature are there, and also the science and art of the modern miner. More than $1,000,000 has been spent on the machinery, the gigantic dams for the storage of water, and the elaborate system of pipes and conduits that constantly employed, and, as the mine is lit up with electricity, relays of miners continue the work day and night up Mount Morgan is somewhat oval-shaped at the base, being about a mile and a half at its longest measurement and half a mile at its shortest. It rises almost precipitously from the banks of a small river called the Dee to the height of five hundred feet, and attains at its dome-like summit an altitude of twelve hundred feet above the level of the sea. There was nothing in the outward appearance of this hilly region to distinguish it from the other mountains of the range; it had the same rugged slopes and gulches, and the same scrubby vegetation covered its surface as could be seen for miles around. The farming settler and the shepherd wandering over this hilly region little dreamed of the treasure stored beneath. They would sometimes find alluvial gold in the ravines and creeks, and dig up bowlder heavily weighted with the precious metal; but that there was a whole mountain of gold waiting to be discovered, exploited by men of energy and enterprise never entered their minds. The gold was carefully hidden in its place, and its outward appearance differed slightly from the ordinary metallic structure of the soil around it.

THE DISCOVERY OF AN ACCIDENT. The discovery was made almost accidentally. In the early days of settlement in Central Queensland, a Scotch family named Gordon took up a selection on the slopes of the Razor Back, and by additional purchases extended their run down across a creek which divided the slopes from this mountain, and partly up one of its sides. They stocked their land with sheep and cattle, and endeavored to win a living from it, but had little success. Among other misfortunes, a large number of their cattle died through eating a poisonous weed which grew abundantly in the neighborhood, and so their fortunes were blighted, and the homestead for work elsewhere. One of the sons, Alexander Gordon, found employment with the Morgans, mining speculators living at Mount Wheeler, a few miles from Rockhampton. Mrs. Alexander Gordon was the daughter of a stockman who often drove his cattle over the district, and watered them at the streams flowing at the base of the mountain; and she had received from her father a piece of gold-bearing stone picked up in a creek there. Gordon showed this to the Morgans, and offered him £20 if he would show them the spot where it was found. This he promised to do, and the two explorers set out, equipping themselves in Rockhampton with horses and tools for a prospecting tour. Moved under the guidance of Gordon to find this modern Pactolus.

are being held. The Milwaukee Sentinel is doing a missionary work on behalf of the shamed-upon newspaper publishers, also on behalf of plain business ethics, which requires that advertising be classed as advertising and charged for as advertising, whether coming from a world's exposition or from an individual merchant.

ODD GAME OF BASEBALL

Shackled Prisoners, in Pairs, Fill Their Positions Creditably. Philadelphia Press. Perhaps the most remarkable game of baseball on record took place at the navy yard a few days ago, when two teams of shackled prisoners played five innings, one team winning by the score of 4 to 3. The players were handcuffed in pairs, and instead of one man pitching or catching there were two for each position on the diamond.

Working the Newspapers.

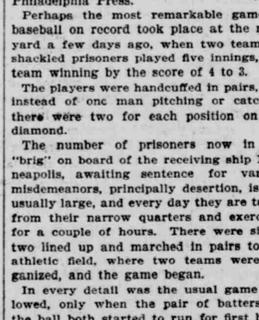

Rochester Post-Standard. The man or enterprise that seeks to get something for nothing and gets it visits and victimizes the newspaper office more frequently and more uniformly than any other place. The New York state fair lately held in Syracuse, was unparalleled by any similar event within the history of the State, both in the merit of its exposition, the magnitude of its crowds and the size of its net profits. Its success, as the managers were frank to admit, came primarily from newspaper advertising, which had been prepared skillfully, placed where it would do the most good, and paid for promptly and at card rates. In other words the New York state fair did precisely as any other strictly business enterprise would do and is required to do, reaping the inevitable reward. What our own state fair managers were frank to admit, came primarily in future years for the advantage and money profit of their state enterprise other managers were frank to do, reaping the inevitable reward. What our own state fair managers were frank to admit, came primarily in future years for the advantage and money profit of their state enterprise other managers were frank to do, reaping the inevitable reward.

MINISTERIAL SLUSH

Poured Out in a Gotham Paper About the Horse Show. Hartford Courant. It isn't every day that the metropolitan press misses the chance to make a fool of itself, and it can be counted upon surely when the horse show, so called, comes along. This year it does itself unusually and delightfully foolish. The esteemed Journal takes the cake, and its whole loaf belongs to a minister, who contributes a special article, from which a few extracts deserve preservation. He is Rev. Thomas B. Gregory, and thus he sings: "Eight-thirty p. m.—and the gala session of the eighteenth annual horse show, at the Madison-square Garden, was in full swing!"
