THE MAC INTIRE INVESTIGATION

Continuation of Evidence for Defense.

The Investigating Board into the management of the Deaf and Dumb Asylum was resumed this morning, with all the members present save Dr. Brown.

Prof. H. S. Gillett was the first witness introduced by the defense, and his evidence was that he had been a teacher in the institution for the past nineteen years, and that Ida Fawcner had been under his instruction for a period of over two years, during which time his relations with her had been of a pleasant and friendly character. I first learned of Ida Fawcner's trouble some few days before she took down her statement, and was first informed of it by Mr. MacIntire. When I went to Ida's room with paper and pencil I told her I understood she wished to tell me what was the cause of her sickness. She said she was very much ashamed to tell me about it, but I told her she must be free to tell me all about her trouble, just as if I was her father. I told her she must tell the truth, if she did not people would conclude she was a bad girl. She then related to me the following: Some time last October her uncle John E. Fawcner came to the Institute and asked Mr. MacIntire to let her go home for a few days, and that he said she might go after school closed that day. She went to her uncle's after dinner that day and remained there overnight.

That in the night sometime her uncle John came into her room and got into bed with her. She said he hurt her and remained with her about an hour. The next morning her uncle took her to the Institute, stopping on the way to get her a pair of shoes. She further said her uncle had solicited her several times before this and that she suspected the object of her uncle when he came to the Institute on the occasion to have her accompany him home. Ida Fawcner observed that her aunt was absent from the city when she went to her uncle John that evening. When she ascertained she was not unwell at the proper time she went into the city with her sister to her uncle, George Fawcner, and stayed all night, and on returning to the Institute in the morning she stopped at a drug store and bought three bottles of medicine, which she had understood was good for ladies to take, and that she had taken a week or two before she was able to get sick. This medicine she had bought with money her Uncle John had given her.

This statement, observed the witness, was taken down on paper as related by Ida, and which she afterward said was the truth. Mr. Gillett continued that his second conversation with Ida Fawcner was some few days after the one above recounted, in which she told him about the instruments. Said the next morning, while she was at her uncle John's, a young man came along by the name of Charles Barnes, and she told him what had taken place the night before about her uncle John. That a few days after Barnes came to the Institute and handed her the instruments then in her possession, she did not know how to use them and never had. Did not know where Barnes lived or what his business was.

Mr. Gillett said Ida never mentioned the name of Valentine in connection with either of her two statements taken down by him.

Witness explained with reference to the fact that when he went to Wabash to secure depositions he neither made any threats or offered any suggestions as to what witness should say or not say. With this closed the examination of Prof. Gillett, and on cross-examination no new facts were brought out, nor was the evidence of witness weakened in any respect.

Shot.

Just before the midnight train from the Centennial picnic had arrived at the Union depot, Saturday night, Thomas Daly, 436 South Tennessee street, started an altercation with Charles E. Newcomb, of the Peru freight office, and two other parties, one of whom was Newcomb of the Sentinel, and before its conclusion Daly received a pistol ball in the breast. He accused the first named of firing the shot, and Charles E. was arrested by Colonel Rose and Detective Hollywood, and found to be unarmed. Newcomb was taken to the central station, and yesterday placed under $1,000 to meet a preliminary examination August 5. The wounded man was not fatally hurt.

Academy Improvements.

At last there appears a disposition to make some much needed improvements to the Academy of Music, and the management are understood to have agreed to widen the main stairway full width of the main entrance, and run another stairway from the gallery floor down in order to relieve the pressure in case of a crowd. Some changes are also to be made to the stage, which is to be repaired or replaced with a wooden one, and there will also be some touching up with the brush where most needed. These improvements are much needed ones, and should be made at once.

A Peculiar Accident.

Last evening as Mrs. Barney Fisher was walking barefoot, in her yard, at 310 South Alabama street, she stepped upon a broken glass goblet, the stem of which entered the fleshy part of her right foot some two inches, cutting several small arteries and tendons, inflicting a frightful wound. The pain of the injury is so acute that she has to be kept under the influence of anæsthetics to alleviate her sufferings, and this morning her physician expressed fears that lockjaw would supervene.

Another View of the Library Matter.

To the Editor of The Evening News.

It seems to me that Indianapolis should have a city building, as the eastern and European cities have, in which all her business should be transacted. This should be the home of the public library. Such a building should compare in architectural effect with the court house and the new State house. I would suggest to the library committee that before taking definite action they consider the idea of a building, to be located in the east market square, large enough for a city market, a city hall, a Council chamber and committee rooms, city court and city officers, and for the library. Let the Council and the citizens be consulted as the feasibility of this and if it is approved, as I believe it would be, let whatever lease they make be made only till the city building is completed. The Tomlinson fund, which I understand is now available, would give enough to start with. Such a building could probably cost a half million of dollars, for it would be regarded as representative of the enterprise and worth of Indianapolis. J. A. P.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

THE INTRODUCTION OF A SUPERIOR ARTICLE INTO OUR MARKET, "REFRIGERATED CREAMERY BUTTER." We take great pleasure in informing you that we are now prepared to supply you with the finest quality of Creamery Butter. You will find this butter superior in grain, flavor and solidity, to any that has hitherto been offered in this market. Indeed we will guarantee it to be fully equal, and in some respects superior in quality, to the justly celebrated "Orange county selections" of New York State. Our butter is manufactured in the "Western Reserve" creameries, and coming from Ohio per express, a few hours only is required to transfer it to the creameries to our "Refrigerator." It is churned in large quantities and from sweet cream, this securing an absolute uniformity in color, flavor, and quality, and enabling us, at all times, to
