INDIAN AFFAIRS

The Last Fight With Nana's Band-- Making for Mexico.

Denver, August 23.—Santa Fe special

The Indians were strong in numbers, and

Smith attacked them, expecting reinforcements

from the troops following some distance behind. The soldiers were being rapidly shot down, when at a critical moment

George Daley, with his force of twenty miners arrived, and joined in the fight, and the Indians were routed with great loss of life. The soldiers were being rapidly

THE DAILY NEWS. TUESDAY, AUGUST 23, 1881.

THERE can be no security for life or property, if the law is not enforced.

LAW is the general rule of conduct, and must be applied fairly and equally to all.

If the president should die—something, alas, that must still be taken into account—Guiteau may consider himself well off if he gets comfortably hanged.

YESTERDAY was a big day in the mayor's court. By the grace of the city authorities their connivance with the saloons to break the laws brings in a rich harvest of fees at least once a week.

The News is somewhat given to sweeping assertions, but it overshoots the mark when it says: "The Teuton, find him where you may, or of whatever nation, is a drunken animal." It is not true that the German people are a race of drunkards.

The Times makes an accession of information before it is able to judge whether an assertion is sweeping or not. The Teuton is not necessarily a German any more than the Latin is necessarily a Frenchman. The Times itself is a Teuton, though it may think it is a "big Injan."

Sally McClure's dead-fall, on West Washington street, was raised by the police Saturday morning.

The police are executing state law when they arrest prostitutes. Now, the same authority that compels them to do this must, under the law, compel them to arrest saloon keepers who do business on Sunday; and when that authority fails to do that it is violating the law. If it is Mayor Grubbs, then he is the man, if it is councilmen Pearson, Brundage and Stout or Chief Williamson, then they are the men. Whoever has a right to order the police to arrest prostitutes, has a right to order them to arrest Sunday saloon keepers, and violates his oath of office and is a law-breaker when he refrains from doing this duty.

THE president's case seems to be at a stand still, but with an inclination towards recovery. Beyond question it is now a very grave crisis through which he is passing. It is like a wavering balance, where the weight of a hair might make it turn. The swelling of the gland has not yet demonstrated itself. From the dispatches it has neither scattered, nor concentrated. The stomach is not firm. The light liquid nourishment is taken without nausea—but not enough to show whether a healthy digestion can be awakened in it or not. Thus in both of the more salient features of the case, while there is a slight amelioration, it is not enough to prove anything. Speculation points to this week as showing the turning of this long lane. God grant it may be up and out towards the broad highway of health.

THERE seems to us much reason for the truthfulness of the following extract from an editorial in the New York Times. There is nothing plainer than the immense advance made by the country during these eight weeks of the president's sufferings.

If, in the providence of God he is restored to life, he will find the people formed upon high ground that they could hardly have reached in years by the regular road. Says the Times: The revealing flash of Guiteau's pistol showed a great deal more to the silent, reflecting voters of the United States than his good many of those dependent on their sufferings have begun to realize. A nation's vigil around the bed of its sorely wounded chief has deepened many impressions which had already begun to claim attention, and given form to many ideas which had hardly been comprehended before. The path of duty to which President Garfield would be lifted amid the acclamations of a grateful people can be none the less clearly marked out than the responsibility which would be sternerly pressed upon his successor. The president may die, but so far from passing away with him, the work which he was expected to do will become the inheritance of the people themselves, and will be pressed to completion with a vigor to which individual selfishness or spitefully mean yield, and which will create a party for itself if no existing party can fully embody it.

The Indianapolis News furnishes its readers with the following conflicting paragraphs, viz:

The Chicago Times shows a disposition to try to get the president to go to the Malley boys. That is not very good morals for a newspaper.

Another: "Guiteau should be well guarded. It would be better to muzzle him, and chain him to the wall."

According to law and the evidence these Malley boys are guilty of murder; while the highest intent of Guiteau, according to law, is assault with intent. What kind of "morals" are that?—Lafayette (Chicago).

There is no similarity in the two cases, and, therefore, no conflict in the paragraphs. The Chicago Times advised the father or brothers of Jennie Crozier to kill the Malley boys, in defiance of all law. We suggested that Guiteau be chained, not for his original crime, but because he had made a murderous assault upon a girl, and was a dangerous prisoner, against whom precaution should be taken lest he take another life. We think that is a very good kind of "morals."

THE suggestion that the cabinet invite the vice-president to act as president, under the clause declaring he shall so act during the inability of the president, seems to us decidedly absurd. There is no more right existing in the cabinet, so called, to extend any such invitation than there is in a combination of any other officers of the government, or of any other citizens. Commissioners Dudley and Rawn, and Treasurer Gillilan could just as well get together and extend such invitation to the vice-president. The Journal, Sentinel, Times and News could, with equal weight, extend the same invitation. Whatever force such invitation from the cabinet would have, would be the force derived from the joint and voluntary action of seven citizens, and that of any other seven would have equal force. There can be no such thing as an official act by the cabinet. There never has been such a thing and can not be. The cabinet is not a creature of the law. It is wholly a voluntary thing springing from custom, and because Garfield consults with a certain seven heads of department called a cabinet, is no reason that Arthur acting in his stead must. He or any other president need never have such a thing as a cabinet if he does not choose to.

There is no such thing as a cabinet for any official act. The best way out of this difficulty, it seems to us, is to stand still for the present. Admit the inability of the president; it causes no inconvenience now, and he may recover before it will cause inconvenience to the public business. If he does not then the general sentiment of the people will indicate to the vice president a desire that he should act, and supported by that he can perform the duties ad interim. The public desire for him to do this seems to us the only guide in the matter, and that can be better shown through the press than by any invitation of the cabinet so-called. At any rate there is a question here for the coming congress to settle. Some rule of action should be laid down. Until it is, the desire of the president and the sentiment of the people is the only rule we can imagine.

If Alderman Tucker's motion means anything it means that the law shall be enforced. That is what it resolves, but it calls especially upon the police board to enforce the Sunday law closing saloons, and directs a copy of the resolution to be furnished the board. If the responsibility does not rest upon Mayor Grubbs; if his oath to enforce the laws of the state does not mean that he shall enforce them as an executive officer, there is executive power somewhere. To maintain that the government of this city is absolutely helpless so far as the state law is concerned is to maintain anarchy. The government of the territory covered by this city is deputed to the city authorities by the state and it is made incumbent upon them that they shall execute the laws of the state within that territory. It is the sworn duty of the mayor, the police board or the city council to execute this law. We want to see it done, or we want a flat declaration that it will not be done. This city is being given over to drunkenness and rioting in plain defiance of the law, and the contempt for all law that springs from such defiance is breeding crime of every sort. The issue is made and can not be unmade until it is decided one way or the other. It is common rumor that Grubbs, Pearson and others, into whose hands power was expected to come in case of election, were supported in election by the saloon interests, for which, said interests were to be allowed to have their own sweet will. Since election the saloons have defied the law in a more open and brazen manner, and with more wider spread drunkenness and other crimes as a result than at any time in the city's history. This is why the question is up. It is forced up. The rumors before election and the facts since have convinced that law abiding citizens have been compelled to ask them selves, "Is it indeed true that there is a pact between those who are put in authority to execute the law, and those who break it, to up old lawlessness? Can these things be? The only answer is to demand an execution of the laws according to the oath of office. If it be denied then, whether there is a bar, ain or not, it is a fact that the officers of the law refuse to execute it." Such is the situation to-day.

CURRENT COMMENT. The latest gift of any considerable amount to the Mrs. Garfield fund, which is now nearly $150,000, was $2,000 from John Jacob Astor.

The Savannah, Ga., News says Mahone's triumph in Virginia would mean the collapse of the republican party in that state, and subsequently all over the south, and alliances between the negroes and dispossessed whites for the overthrow, if possible, of democracy. That, then, we should say, would be a very good result.

Pistol factories, it is said, are booming with business. This does not look as if the movement to enforce the law against carrying concealed weapons, which is pretty generally talked of in many states, had yet amounted to much.

There is a man on a Kalamazoo, Michigan paper, who writes, "Last night was a splendid moon, silent, soft, shadowy, superb. A splendid moon strode across the bare, blue heavens, lighting the earth with glorious light, and in its 'sweet sampler of Michigan,' either."

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat "gets in its work" on the Spanish cruelty which feasts itself on bull fights continually, thus: "The assault on the bull fight in Madrid is not better than was announced. There were four hundred horses of one kind or another, and the wounded are very pained. Not half so pained, though, as the coats of the poor animals, which they undoubtedly received before the fight."

There is a high toned base ball club in Louisville. It is called the Eclipse. It played against a Cleveland base ball club the other day, in Louisville, as the following play shows: The regular catcher of the Cleveland club is a mulatto. The high toned Louisvillians couldn't stand that, and refused to play until the objectionable "saddle-colored nigger" was withdrawn from the field, and then they wanted to put him out of the grounds. There was mention in the happy pride of the Eclipse; with a substitute they beat the Cleveland boys.

It is likely to be discovered that the celebrated Methodist, Asia, a tough family to-night, is a Methodist.

The Enquirer speaks from experience. The New York World has had a head put on it, in plain letters, like that of the Herald. It is no improvement.

"Dynamite Rossa" is the Cincinnati Commercial's name for the professional patriot.

Boyon, the White-house physician in waiting, babbles like Tenyson's brook. He out-Blisses Bliss.

The Cincinnati Gazette humorously remarks that the plaint of the Cornell university crew should be: O for a college in some vast wilderness, some boundless solitude of dry land, in which is no water larger than a well!

There is an average of five drunkards to every saloon in Chicago, which indicates a good business. Two good drunkards will usually be found in each saloon, and in each case represent the average wages of a man, and sometimes that of his wife. The assets of the drunkard are divided as follows: The saloon keeper gets his money, he gets the spree, and his wife gets the anxiety.—(Chicago News.)

There is more human sympathy in President Garfield's nature than in that of any president the United States have had since the kindly and generous Abe Lincoln was murdered.—(Charleston News.)

It is an undeniable fact that the negro is making his way, and is winning a more forward position than had been thought possible in the same generation that saw him a slave. While the negro can produce a Douglass and a Senator Bruce, it is impossible utterly to despise them. Their children are absorbing education with a power of assimilation they had never been credited with possessing, and are creating an opinion that as workmen they are not to be tied down to the position of mere hewers of wood and drawers of water.—(Memphis Appeal.)

We repeat that it is only under a government of the people by the people, that a long paralysis of the executive head can be endured without renegey or revolution. The knowledge that he is the object of a devotion which is not unaccompanied by an unexampled self-sacrifice, is an honor and a solace to President Garfield such as no monarch has ever enjoyed.—(New York Herald.)

If Hartmann is now secure because he has taken the preliminary step to naturalization, then he certainly has an advantage over other murderers of his class who are natives and committed their crime in this country.—(Chicago Journal.)

With the record of a pure administration upon which to appeal to the voters of the state, a united republican party can easily carry New York, and there is now no obstacle in the way of the free and friendly co-operation of republicans of all shades of opinion.—(New York Tribune.)

Obituary. A special to the Louisville Courier-Journal from Lexington, says: Gen. Leslie Combs, who for some time past has been quite ill, died yesterday morning at four o'clock. Leslie Combs, the youngest of twelve children, was a Virginian and an officer in the revolutionary army. He was born near Booneborough, Kentucky, in November of 1791, and hence lacked but a few months of completing his 87th year. He was in the war of 1812, and distinguished himself by his energy and bravery. He was wounded in an engagement near Fort Meigs, narrowly escaping death. He afterwards became a lawyer and politician; was one of the Kentucky delegates to the Harbors convention in 1840, and worked ardently for the nomination of Clay of whom he was a personal friend. At the time of the revolution in Texas in 1839, he raised a regiment for the frontier. In 1841 he was again conspicuous for his support of Clay. He was a fluent, eloquent and effective speaker. During the war of the rebellion he was an undying union man, and rendered valuable aid to the government. He lived all his life in his native state, and was one of among its many noted characters.

The Pottery. The British ship of Pottery, which was blown up a short time ago, has been found to be broken to two. Only twelve whole bodies have been brought up from the wreck, two being those of officers and the remainder of sailors. Six large guns, a mizzenmast, and some ammunition have been recovered. The boilers have been found intact.

The Highest Lake. The lake that has the highest elevation of any in the world is Green Lake, in Colorado. Its surface is 10,252 feet above the level of the sea. Pine forests surround it, and eternal snows deck the neighboring mountain tops. One of these Gray's peak has an altitude of 15,341 feet. The water of Green Lake is as clear as crystal, and large rock masses and a petrified forest are distinctly visible at the bottom. The branches of the tree are of dazzling whiteness, as though cut in marble. Salmon and trout swim among them. In places the lake is 200 feet deep.

An Excellent Woman. Lafayette Journal. The Indianapolis News is after Hon. D. W. Grubbs, mayor of that city, with a terribly sharp pencil. His honor is accused of too much favoritism toward the violators of the state laws and the city ordinances. The News is doing an excellent work in the interest of decency and the enforcement of the laws.

Colored Votes Against Prohibition. There was not a county in North Carolina at the recent election that gave a majority in favor of prohibition. The colored troops voted solidly against it.

An Able Editor. (South Bend Register.) It only takes about three of Charley Reeve's editorial efforts to fill an entire page of the Plymouth Democrat.

Reflections on a Skull. And this was man! Imperious man, Who laughed, defied and scorned; And this the chamber where the mind, Bright vision once adorned; And this the socket where the eye Bespoke his immortality.

And here the mouth, the fleshless mouth, Which once had spoken words of power; And there the shapelessness that once Inhaled the scents of earth; And here the nostrils where the soul's sounds Once made the happy heart rebound.

And this the cranium where reigned The passions of the soul— You, burning eloquence and thought, Too great for earth's control; 'Twas here where Reason poised her wings O'er a Passion's sleepless lightning.

You, from this summit of conscience sent The thunder of law; And radiant thought like lightning gleamed O'er all they felt and saw; It glowed in the eye, and shone in the bright, Like frosty crystals in moonlight.

Here realms of fancy rose and fell Like rainbows in a cloud; And cunning schemes and grand designs Were planned in the brain; Here Love and Hate and Hope and Ire Impelled the soul with wall of fire.

'Twas here where science lit the mind To look the world in the face; To measure worlds and systems vast; And comes in their flight; Here knowledge, in its glory, shone; Here, phenomena and lore.

'Twas here where subtle falsehood chained The spirit to the earth; Here, in the hour of trial, stood, A thing of little worth; Till truth, uprising, burst the bond, And pointed to the far beyond.

Where, poor, that love, that charity, That love, that love, that love; What, silent! 'Twas the abiding faith, The love, the love, the love; No tongue has told its tale of love In anguish to relate.

Who, wanting with the fate, That never, never, never; The power of thought, the flash of wit, The language of the eye; The influence of the spirit's power; In silence, but in silence, to laugh To scorn each human epithet.

I had no other, I had no other; I had no other, I had no other; When I have lost my breath, I had no other, I had no other; I had no other, I had no other.

I would I live, endure the pain Which racks the human frame; Which, when it has its last sweet hours, I live, and yet I know not why— I find the truth, mortality.

Oh, my soul, good night! My lamp is out, my life is over; My heart, my heart, my heart; My heart, my heart, my heart; My heart, my heart, my heart.

offered at one hotel, and the widow, with the ready tact of her sex, suggested to the bachelor that a wedding would make the accommodations accessible to both. They proceeded to a clergyman's house and were married, but on their return the vacant room had already been engaged. They took a train for Niagara.

Among the interesting exhibits at the Institute fair at Boston is a model of the city of Jerusalem on a scale of one inch to a hundred feet, giving the hills adjacent to the city, the Mount of Olives, Mount of Offense, with the valley of Jehoshaphat, Tyrophean valley and is in circular form, is seven feet, the city occupying the center. The whole is made of plaster, and eleven copies have been sold to Princeton college, Union Theological seminary, New York, and other educational and theological institutions. The model is made from the British Ordnance survey, and is correct in every respect.

I must confess that I don't like the average Englishman. I haven't made the acquaintance of any dukes or baronets yet, nor have I basked in the smiles of royalty, but he tries to make the acquaintance of some of the better sort of the English people. They are a very lawly and reserved class of people. There isn't that freedom, that delightful looseness, which you experience in Kentucky. I slipped one up on the sidewalk the other day, and he was actually offended at it. And another up whom I tried to borrow five pound actually had the cheek to refuse me, on the flimsy ground that he had no money. I don't care. That was the precise reason why I expected to get it. He'd be kind no longer he never would lend me it.—Nashby.

At the breaking out of the war Sherman and Tom Ewing were in New Orleans, together, and Tom Ewing said to Sherman: "Sherman, there is going to be a war now without any doubt, and if I were you I would go right home to Ohio, and my family will have you made a major-general." General Sherman shook his head and said: "No, Tom; I don't want to go in as a major-general. I want to be a brigadier-general. There will be mistakes committed in the first part of the war, and they will turn out all their original major generals, and then the brigadiers will come to the front. I am for a brigadier-general, to begin with."

Now, Sherman's opinion is that there is an instance of Sherman's individuality of thought and sagacity. Men as smart as that political parties are afraid to handle.—(Gath.)

GARFIELD'S DOCTORS. A Medical Opinion—Hammond Scored as a Charlatan. (Gath's correspondence.)

I fact a prominent surgeon with a United States commission—a man of general acquaintance, of fine medical education, and of a just mind. Said I to him: "Has there been any thing lacking in the president's medical advice?"

"Nothing whatever," he said. "No man ever found with more respectate for the body of doctors around him, men of large experience, fine science, and with their whole pride enlisted in his behalf. If Garfield dies he will die because it could not be helped, and I do not think any honorable man in the profession say other than this. There are a few men," continued the doctor, "whose critical faculty is always active, and some others who belong to a clique in the army and navy that are using the press, and even venturing themselves into publicity in rebuke of those six good men who are trying to save Garfield. Now, Dr. Bliss, whatever they may say about his business and professional errors in the past, is not so much of a charlatan as Dr. Hammond. I say this," continued the doctor, "with a very complete knowledge of both men. I do not know Hammond a charlatan because he administered quick medicines, but because he makes extravagant charges on laymen for doing nothing more for them than any plain doctor would do for a patient."

The long delay in the preparation of the laws is arousing the legal profession and all organizations interested in the execution of some particular law, such as the fish law. This morning a committee consisting of Gen. Coburn, Gen. McGinnis, John Finch and Ignatius Brown, appeared before the governor for the protection of fish, called at Secretary Hays's office to expedite the distribution, if possible. Sufficient copies for the full county allotment cannot be ready for some time, but a small number could be prepared in short order, and these, it was proposed by Mr. Finch, might be sent by mail to the various counties, a copy to each county clerk, and that the journals which provide for the "circulation" of the laws before they are in effect, be carried out. The secretary proposes to do all he can to hurry forward the work. Ripley, Starke, Pike, Scott, Brown and Orange counties will be supplied first, these counties being least accessible. He says, however, that the office has not yet received a copy, and does not expect to receive them until the first of next week, when they will be sent by freight to the least accessible counties. The boxes have yet to be made. With the laws, the journals of the house and senate and the two last acts of congress are to be sent. These are in the cellar ready to be shipped. The journals are to be printed as when they will be furnished with sufficient copies for full distribution. The governor thinks distribution will be complete within three weeks, but the prediction is made that it will not be completed within six weeks. This is said to be the first time in the history of the state that such a delay has occurred.

It is no longer a matter of course that the distribution being made before the September term of court, a good deal of annoyance to lawyers seems to be inevitable. A prominent democrat attorney said this morning that the republican administration would be called to account for the delay in the next campaign.

Mr. Carlom & Hollenbeck, said that the delay in printing the laws is due to the custom of former years in regard to selling copies of the statutes before they were distributed by the secretary of state. He says, further, if there has been any unnecessary delay, it will not be repeated. It is not the fault of the printers, since they could have furnished bound copies of the new laws within sixty days after the adjournment of the legislature had the matter been furnished them as fast as called for. The work of printing the new volume was finished last Friday, and by the printer's extra time they furnished several orders at once, the regular work for the state meanwhile going on uninterrupted. Mr. Carlom said they would comply with the governor's request and get out more for sale until the state's quota is filled. Not that he thinks that the governor has the right to demand it at their hands, but as an act of courtesy and through a desire to render satisfaction to all concerned.

Estimates Still Further Reduced. The council and aldermanic finance committees held conference over the estimates for the current year yesterday afternoon. The corrected estimates of the committees, as published in The News of Saturday, amounting to $734,882.75 were taken and printed down to $701,777, thereby bringing them within the revenue of the city.

Reductions were made as follows: Board of health, $200; bridges, $500; city assessors and clerks, $100; city dispensary, $100; city hall, $500; city hospital and branch, $800; fire department, $1,471; printing, $200; street improvements, $300; street openings and vacations, $300; street repairs, $191.04; street signs, $200; and water rent, $10,000. The estimates as thus reduced will be reported to the next meeting of council, and will be acted upon by the body. The original estimate for water rent was $31,000, and it is a question whether the reduction to $21,000 will be approved. The reduction from the estimate for the fire department, as proposed by the fire board, is, altogether, nearly $7,000.

Fatal Accident. Yesterday evening Charles Wilding, assistant yardmaster in the lower Bee Line yards, while switching, caught his foot in a guard rail and fell upon the track. He managed to throw his body outside the rails, but the entire train passed over his left leg and arm, crushing the leg at the knee and the arm above the elbow. He was carried to his residence, 295 East New York street, where amputation of both leg and arm was made by Drs. Cominger and Bigelow. The shock was great that he did not rally, but died at half-past eleven last night. He was a young married man, and until recently was clerking in the Bee Line office, but voluntarily gave that up to accept the outdoor employment in which he met his death.

Close of the Camp Meeting. The Aton camp meeting closed last evening amid much enthusiasm. There was a large attendance, excursion trains coming in from various points. A collection was taken and presented to Elder Ives as a thank offering. During the evening a procession of young and old people went about the grounds singing revival songs. There was much hand-shaking and good feeling manifested. During the meeting seven-and-a-half conversions have been made.

Admission to State Fair. The price set by the state board of agriculture for admission to the state fair this year is fifty cents for adults. This change from twenty-five cents has caused some feeling among the farmers, and the board will be fully shown, a News reporter interviewed the board this morning. The premiums for this year have been increased twenty per cent over last year, and this increase must be met by increasing receipts. The fact that the premiums on live stock have heretofore been insignificant, and as large as the revenue of the board would permit. This year they have been raised to something like an equality with those of other states. The board is heavily in debt, and it was thought best to augment the receipts, and this could only be done by increasing the admission fee, as the attendance, although it has been immense, has not brought a revenue large enough to pay running expenses and to pay off any part of the debt. Ohio, Illinois, Kentucky and Missouri all charge an admission fee of fifty cents, and the board does not think it first session to-morrow morning, beginning at 10 o'clock. The freight train to which a coach is attached, leaves Liberty street at 6:45.

National Dusk Meeting. A large number of Duskers or German Baptists, are in the city to-day, en route for Arcanum, Ohio, where a general meeting or conference of the body is to be held. They belong to a class of people who are fast becoming extinct, and who are now rarely to be found in the larger cities. This latter statement was volunteered to a crowd of Duskers in the depot this morning, and one of them sadly and sulkily shook his head and said: "Yes, young man, there is no truth to be found around here." Their dress is exceedingly ancient, and they resemble the Shakers somewhat in manners and customs. All that are in the city are quite old men, and it would seem that a generation hence few of their peculiar sect will be left.

Prices of Vegetables. In the market this morning tomatoes were selling at ninety cents a bushel; rutabagas at two dollars for fifteen cents; sweet potatoes at $1.20 and $1.40 a bushel; small heads of cabbage at ten cents. Squashes and melons, the product of this section, which are usually abundant at this season of the year, are very scarce and of poor quality. It is probable vegetable prices will be still higher in the latter part of the week.

Criminal Court Jurors. A number of the jurors drawn for the regular panel of the circuit court, having been excused, the following additional names were drawn by the county clerk this morning, to fill the vacancies: Wm. B. Bradley, Washington township; Thomas Barrett, Decatur; James Gentry, Perry; John Johnson, Wayne; John Moore, Pike; Cornelius Wagoner, Lawrence; John Ellinger, Warren; and James H. Thomas, Warren.

A Faded Old Maid. A faded old maid, who had been in the city for some time, was seen yesterday in the Fifth Avenue hotel to-night, bowing left and right, as if he were a prima donna recalled to the stage. Not a soul spoke to him, and he looked as if there, and did not pay the least attention to him. The stalwart of the stalwarts looked like a faded old maid.
