NAACP determined to move ahead

By STEPHEN B. JOHNSON
Staff Writer

In the midst of negative publicity facing the NAACP, local chapter officials and dedicated members are determined to see the organization move forward.

Despite of the negative publicity surrounding Chavis, local and state officers feel the organization can move forward and accomplish the goals it has set for itself.

"We will continue to work toward achieving organizational goals as normal," said Franklin Breckenridge Sr., state president and national board member of the NAACP. "We are committed to implementing programs for the improvement of the African-American community."

Last Saturday, the national chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People fired its executive director Dr. Benjamin Chavis for conduct the board of directors considered to be hostile to the survival of the organization.

Reports from the national headquarters say Chavis was removed because of an accumulation of things that occurred during his 16-month tenure, including misappropriation of organization funds.

The organization has chosen Earl Shinhoster, who is currently the NAACP's national field secretary to serve as interim senior administrator. He will be assisted by Fred Rasheed who currently serves as director of the NAACP's Economic Development Department.

Both have extensive knowledge of the organization and its operations. They will be assisted by a subcommittee of the National Board of Directors which has been established to provide oversight during their interim period.

State Sen. Glenn Howard took a critical view of the national board's decision to dismiss Chavis.

Wishard Memorial Hospital is helping young fathers move from poverty and joblessness to employment and responsibility through an innovative program called the Father Resource Program.

The program was the creation of Sarah Meadows, director of Social Work at Wishard Memorial Hospital.

She realized that although the mother of the children received specialized care, little attention was being paid to the fathers who wanted to be there for their children.

Not all hate crimes in Indiana reported

By ANNETTE L. ANDERSON
Staff Writer

Although at least 334 law enforcement agencies in Indiana collect data for the Federal Bureau of Investigation's uniform crime report, few of them include or maintain information on hate crimes committed throughout the state.

This is a finding of the Indiana Advisory Committee in a report issued to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. The report ultimately states:

"There is an absence of data on the number of hate crimes in Indiana. Further, it is likely that there will not be a significant collection of hate crime data in the near future by either the state police or most local law enforcement agencies. This lack of information restricts study of the issue and also gives the perception that there is no...hate crime problem in the state."

Hate crimes are acts of violence or intimidation against a person or property that are motivated, in whole or partly, by the offender's bias against a race, religion, ethnic/national origin group, or sexual orientation, as stated in the committee's report.

The Hate Crimes Statistics Act was established in 1990 to allow the U.S. attorney general to collect data on hate crimes. In turn, the attorney general delegated the task to the FBI through its uniform crime report section.

Community reacts to the dismissal of Chavis

Saturday afternoon the nation's oldest African-American civil rights organization dismissed its national President Dr. Benjamin Chavis due to conduct the board of directors considered to be hostile to the survival of the organization.

People within the community had mixed emotions to his dismissal, responding to the question, "Do you think the organization was justified in their dismissal of Chavis?"

Mike Woodson, 38, Chrysler Foundry

"It was almost like he was convicted before he had an opportunity to defend himself. The saying goes 'you are innocent until proven guilty,' and it would be a shame if he were innocent and they dismissed him before all the facts were in."

Frankie McCroy, 31, Store Manager at Claire's Boutiques

"I could see the NAACP's reasoning behind firing Dr. Chavis in order to keep the positive image of the organization. With other people and organizations in a negative light, I can see the organization looking out for the welfare of the organization."

Rev. John E. Gilton, Sr., 50, Pastor of Loving Missionary Baptist Church

"I'm willing to stick behind Dr. Chavis until the final results are in. With so few Black role models out in the public eye, we don't need another role model in the mist of a lot of negative publicity."

There Was a Time

Many adults recall the times when they were taught about the great institutions of American government — the Congress, the Supreme Court and the presidency. The impressions most students were left with were fairly simple. The lesson was that these institutions despite imperfections, would most often act in a way that was in the best interests of the citizens of the U.S. So, no matter what happened relative to partisan politics, one could seemingly be assured the best interests of the Republic would always survive the battles and the name calling and everything else that goes into the public debate over substantive issues. This is not the impression he or she gets when one listens to the current debates concerning health care and crime.

Congress in particular has appeared to be overrun with individuals who try to do only two things; they seem to want to be reelected at all costs, and they seem to want to bash the other political party. In fact, it appears the questions concerning the best interests of the people are never discussed. This body of activity is a far cry from the noble debates presented in our history books. And when you add to this, the pressures generated by modern political fund raising and its connection to the agendas of the vast array of special interest groups, one sees little resemblance to the old ideals reflected in our political past.

Politics in general seem to have become a game of name calling and greed.

Our politicians seem to be playing roles in scores of little movies about themselves and their own individual interests. Gone are the days of the great debates. Instead we have the great blockages and great embarrassments.

We have a Congress full of politicians who seem very good at defeating each others intent. But they seem barren of good ideas. And no one, in the great body is big enough to give credit to a member of the opposition if he or she has a good idea. It all seems to be about insults and the tearing down of others.

How and when is the public interest served in such an environment? The answer is not very well and not very often. The public has little reason to expect the current debates over the Crime Bill and the health care agenda will result in something good for the public. The purpose of these congressional mini-series appears to give politicians the means to pretend they did the right thing instead of simply having done the politically expedient thing. Congress should be called "Egos R Us." So much for the courage of their convictions.

There has to be a group of politicians that has the best interests of the majority of American citizens in mind. There must be people in Congress who want to serve America's interests even at their own personal expense. Their have to be people who will focus the health care debate on the major issues involved as opposed to worrying about their political parties and their skewed agendas. Neither the Democrats nor the Republicans are more important than the health care of Americans. Neither party has figured this out.

In the other skirmish, the issue of crime in America has been hyped by the media so much that even communities which experience little crime are convinced they are experiencing a crime wave of unprecedented proportions. It's politically expedient to vote for the current bill even though the expense involved has been grossly misrepresented. For example, local taxpayers will have to come up with millions in new benefits and pensions for the new police officers. In addition, the federal government has only committed to funding these new officers for a limited period of time. Guess how things will be paid for once the federal funds stop. Are Congress talking about the expense of this bill over the long run? Of course not. All they have to do is get through the next election and everybody is against crime, so why bring up the troublesome issue of overspending. And so it goes.

We hope to see a return to the values that served Congress so well for so long. We'd like to see great debates once again instead of procedural blockages. We are not optimistic because we can't find a PAC that represents the Republic. Congress as a whole used to do that more often, represent the Republic, that is.

U.S. should help collect child support money

I was disturbed to learn recently that Americans are more faithful about paying for their car payments than for their children. The national delinquency rate for used car loans was a mere three percent in 1992, while the delinquency rate for child support owed to mothers was an astounding 49 percent in 1990.

A recent report from the Children's Defense Fund found that after a decade of government efforts to improve child support enforcement, delinquent parents and overburdened states are still failing to provide millions of children with the economic support they need to grow up healthy, safe and nurtured.

In fact, only 14.7 percent of the cases served by state child support agencies had some type of support collection in 1983, and the rate increased to only 18.7 percent of the cases in 1992. At this rate, it will be more than 180 years before each child served by a state agency can be guaranteed even a partial support payment!

Our child support system is failing to deliver on its most basic promise to children; that parents will be held responsible for ensuring their children have a roof over their heads and food on their tables. And we know that children pay when their parents don't. A 1992 survey of 300 single parents showed the real harm children suffer when child support is not paid. During the first year after one parent left the home, more than half the families surveyed faced a serious housing crisis. In addition, 10 percent became homeless, 48 percent moved in with friends or family to avoid homelessness, nearly a third reported that their children went hungry at some point during that year and more than a third reported their children didn't even have a winter coat.

Some states are better at enforcing child support than others. "Hall of Fame" states include Delaware, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Utah, Washington State and Wisconsin. "Hall of Shame" states include Arizona, the District of Columbia, Illinois, Indiana, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico, Tennessee and Texas. States were included in the Hall of Shame because they ranked at the bottom of the states in two or more key measures of child support performance, such as percentage of cases with paternity established or collections made.

In addition to families breaking up, the fact that more than one out of four children are born out of wedlock isn't helping the problem of inadequate child support. Yet improvements can be made by following the leads of Virginia and Washington State. Each dramatically increased its rate of establishing paternity by pioneering hospital-based programs which encourage fathers to voluntarily acknowledge the paternity of their children born out of wedlock.

Being in the Hall of Fame calls for congratulations, but let's not let them get too comfortable since even in Washington State, one of the nations leaders, two out of three cases served by the state agency go without any support payment at all.

Improving the child support enforcement system will require making the federal government responsible for collecting support and leaving the establishment of paternity and support obligation to the states. Also, a child support assurance system must guarantee children a minimum level of support when the government is unable to collect it on their behalf. The federal government must help states locate parents and collect support, as well as ensure that each state has the staff and resources to do the job well.

One in four children live in single-parent families. While the government must do its part to enforce support for these children, it is equally important that parents take moral and personal responsibility for the children they bring into this world. It is a tragedy and an outrage that the threat of car possessions prompts more regular payments from Americans than the threat that a child might go hungry! If you are a parent, remember that is the most important calling you have. Do not have children until you are ready to care for them.

Blacks need a new strategy to change racism

For 400 years Black people have struggled to attain first-class citizenship in America. During this time, thousands of brilliant Black men and women have formulated strategies to lift our race out of racial abuse. Black militants have put most of the strategies into action, but Blacks today are in many ways worse off than we were 400 years ago. The next generation of Black Americans will be in worse shape than we are today. Why?

Why, after all of these years, have we been unable to save ourselves? The answer is that we have used the wrong strategies. The primary problem for Blacks is the deeply-ingrained negative image that practically everyone has of Blacks. Until that is changed, Blacks will be disrespected. Until that image is improved, we will be used as stepping stones and dust mats.

Every problem that Blacks have grows out of the fact that other people, including many African-Americans, think Blacks are inherently inferior. To them, the dark skin represents natural intellectual, emotional and sociological inadequacy. Even if your nose is straight, your lips thin, your hair blond — if your skin is dark and you are readily identified as an African-American you are immediately discriminated against. Whites, Blacks and others apply the philosophy of racism or exclusionary stereotypical behavior.

The racial reaction has been applied by others to Blacks for such a long time that it is peremptory — automatic behavior. Racism is now a conditioned reflex. No one looks at a Black person and thinks, "Is that person African-American? Should I treat him (her) differently than I treat other people?" These questions are never asked. The reaction is automatic. If you are obviously African-American, others treat you instantaneously with disrespect. Racism is a habituated, conditioned behavioral response that is deeply imbedded in the psyche of most people in the world. Even Blacks often treat themselves and others who look like them with disrespect. Many Blacks call each other "nigger."

Racist behavior that flows out of continued, uninterrupted degradation of Blacks is the primary, unquestioned problem for Blacks throughout the world. And Blacks have contributed to their own problem by allowing the racist response to them to go unchecked. This has brought about the almost instinctive disrespect that Blacks receive.

Blacks need to counter this negative image the world has of them. We need to completely restrictive the image, so that the world responds to the brown skin color with respect rather than automatic disrespect. We can complain as much as we want. We can get as angry as we want. We can accept small, token pieces of the pie and continue to laugh at ourselves on television. We can wait for someone else to "give us a break." However, racism will never go away until Blacks mount an aggressive, worldwide campaign to make the world respect Blacks by viewing us as normal beings.

NAACP will soon sink into pitiable irrelevance

The NAACP will soon sink into pitiable irrelevance, bankruptcy and shame unless a majority of its board of directors can rescue it from its chairman, William F. Gibson, a South Carolina dentist, and its former executive director, Benjamin F. Chavis, Jr.

Recently, NAACP members and financial supporters across the nation saw on TV an admission by Chavis and Gibson that they committed more than $300,000 in "hush" money to a fired woman who threatened a lawsuit charging employment discrimination and sexual harassment.

Chavis admitted to paying Mary E. Stansel $82,400 - $64,000 directly out of NAACP funds and $18,400 from secret donors. Chavis pledged to pay her $250,000 more if he could not find Stansel a job paying at least $80,000 a year. Stansel has sued for the $250,000.

Chavis said he paid Stansel "to protect the NAACP from exposure to false and slanderous allegations." Gibson said he approved the payments to protect the integrity of the NAACP.

Almost nothing could do more to destroy the organization's integrity and reputation than these payoffs. Who is going to give more money to the NAACP when the chairman and executive director use its coffers as a private piggy bank when one of them wants to avoid personal embarrassment?

The NAACP faithful, such as Marc Stepp in Detroit, who have been working doggedly to raise funds to erase the organization's $3 million deficit surely feel betrayed. They know that the futile effort to pay Stansel for silence was not made to protect the NAACP; they have read where NAACP attorney Abbey G. Hairston was quoted as saying that the money was paid to protect Chavis, who was "literally scared to death."

The courts can decide the merits of Stansel's charges (from the lawsuit she filed despite the keep-quiet payments) and the later Chavis suit (the NAACP court action charging her with violating the deal). But we do not need a judicial decree to tell us that Gibson and Chavis have shown such terrible judgment and atrocious arrogance that they ought to resign their posts immediately or be ousted. I have written before that the NAACP was doomed to impotence when Gibson became chairman and decided that he, not the executive director, would have the last word on everything. He provoked a deep schism within the board of directors but kept power by loading it with aged, conservative Black Southern cronies who would rubber stamp even his most outrageous decisions.

At the time Chavis was chosen to succeed Benjamin Hooks as executive director, I noted publicly that Gibson hovered over Chavis at every moment by way of saying that the real power still rested with the chairman.

So, as in the dictatorships of the old Soviet Union and China, a cult of personality began to suck the lifeblood out of the NAACP.

If they fail to oust Gibson and Chavis, the NAACP will never again be a meaningful force in the councils of power in America.

"Land is the basis of power"

In the many speeches and writings of Brother Malcolm X in the late 1950s and 1960s, he reminded us repeatedly that "Land is the basis of power."

Over the last several years, the land question has not been a major topic in the Black liberation movement. However, it remains at the heart of our quest for power.

African-American people throughout the world should once again make land a priority of discussion.

The hordes of European and Asian invaders to Africa, beginning in ancient times, began the long historical battle to take African land from African people and thus attempt to claim the land belonged to them.

The most blatant example of this phenomenon is South Africa where descendants of the Dutch and British invaders of the 15th, 16th and 17th centuries claim South Africa belongs to them. Historical records are clear that South Africa belongs to African people.

Currently, in South Africa, historical records show that through theft, fraud, wars of dispossession and colonial conquest, 14 percent of the population (European and their descendants) own 95 percent of the productive resources of the country. This is a major issue for the new government in South Africa, under the leadership of President Nelson Mandela, to address.

One of the liberation movements in South Africa, the Pan Africanist Congress of Azania, takes the position that the land owned and controlled by the European settlers was acquired by illegitimate means and the laws of the country that protect this control and ownership are illegitimate.

Further, the PAC raises the question, "What is lawful about taking a peoples land with the barrel of a gun? And what is just about asking them to buy it with resources that have been deliberately put out of their reach?"

Since the independence of Ghana, under the leadership of Kwame Nkrumah in 1956, most African countries have now rid themselves of white settler colonialism in the reclaiming of their lands.

South Africa represents that last bastion of white settler colonialism on the continent of Africa. We must do everything we can to help our brothers and sisters in South Africa dismantle this racist and white supremacist regime as they struggle to win their land back. Even though the elections in South Africa were historic the land question remains a major challenge in the efforts of national reconstruction under the new government.

In the same connection, after the Civil War, African people in America were promised 40 acres and a mule. As we are not all aware of, this promise was never fulfilled. However, African people who lived in the southern region of the U.S. owned 16,000,000 acres of land by the end of the 19th century.

It has been well documented by numerous agencies that "In 1909 there were 3,000,000 acres of land. This tremendous land loss by African-Americans in the South can attributed to the land grab schemes of white farmers, developers, banks, manipulation of the law, and the younger African-American generations being generally disinterested in owning and maintaining property.

This is another reason why we need to re-stimulate the discussion of land in the Black liberation movement.

It is without question that the European world order has at the core of its objectives to conquer mother nature and mankind. The conquering of mother nature and mankind is tied to conquering and controlling land.

And of course, the new world order that the United States and its western allies have been articulating is just an extension of the old European world order that is based on white supremacy and control of the world, which means controlling the land.

Therefore, the question becomes what is the European master plan for 30 to 40 million African-Americans. Dr. Jacob Carruthers explains that "the master plan as it relates to those Blacks residing within the first white, most perfect republic in the western hemisphere (which by definition excludes us) is simply to ease us out of existence."

For African-Americans, we should fight for all land in the Black liberation movement if we are to survive and develop as a people.

By Dr. Conrad W. Worrill, the national chairman of the National Black United Front.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

An open letter to the African-American community

It has become fashionable for the leaders of African-American communities to present, exalt and give praise to the mainstream media. It is also interesting that when these same leaders introduce dignitaries at their functions, they bring the publishers and or representatives from the white media to the dais but completely fail to even recognize representatives from the Black press.

In a article in the Washington Informer, the headline read, "Black leaders rebuke NAACP's attack on media." Upon reading the contents, two African-American leaders blasted the NAACP for blaming the white media for "bad press."

In a similar criticism of the Georgia Chronicle (white daily) in Augusta, a Metro Courier (Black press) headline read: "The Daily newspaper in the Black community: some believe paper vicious in coverage of Black community."

If you have to always go to the white media for news, you probably are not supporting the Black press in your area. You might give your reason as being, "they (Black press) don't report the news, they don't have the resources to provide me with what the white media can give and I've read the Black paper in my area because..."

Well think about this. The Black press is a struggling entity in the Black community. The Black press could provide the same news and articles of interest that you want and need on a consistent and reliable basis.

Take a look at your average white newspaper. How many people do they have on staff? How many pages does it generally print? What is the make-up of its staff and are they being paid? And ask the same about the Black press.

From my experience, if you work on the staff of a Black paper, you are an editor, a reporter, a photographer, a delivery person and the Lord knows you don't do it for the money but because it is something you see with potential in and hope others in the Black community will come to see as a needed entity.

Isn't it time many of our Black leaders, ministers, NAACP, Urban League, school officials, etc. look around and start providing more support than criticism for Black businesses who are trying to bring economic stability to African-Americans by providing jobs for them.

Here is a simple idea: Every household and community where an African-American newspaper is printed should have a subscription to that newspaper. Just think about how much news you would get about African-Americans, white Americans, Congress, local, state and national news, as well as global news. On an average, a subscription to the Black press is between $12 to $30 per year, in comparison to $500 to $1,000 a year for the white media.

The Black Press could provide the same information and news as their white counterparts and even better coverage of the Black community when and only when they have the same resources as the other media.

So keep our children and their children from being in the same situation as most of us are now, searching though endless records. Support the Black press and make sure it stays in print. History at your fingertips.

Golden rule no longer exists — apparently

Can someone please help me clear up some confusion? When was the Golden Rule changed from "Thou shalt love thy neighbors to "Thou shalt show aggression toward thy neighbor"?

Perhaps this was decided on a Sunday when I was sick or traveling, or maybe on the proverbial Monday when no one was watching.

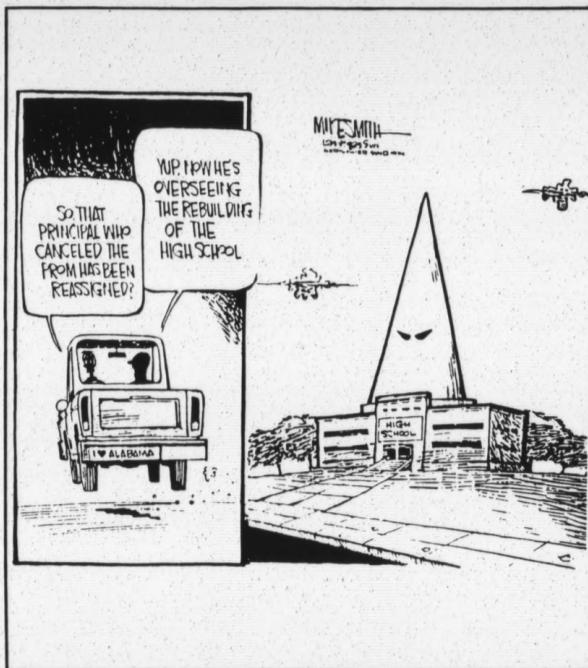

In any event, this odd concept seems to have permeated the fiber of our society. This revision seems to be the guiding principle for all areas of public policy debate, abortion, drug, health care, gun ownership, taxes, business regulation, education, foreign policy, smoking and environment.

Especially troubling is the manner in which this debate is carried forth. Clinics providing legal abortions are under siege from "militant" or pro-life groups while property owners are forced to mount a futile defense civil property "takings" resulting from actions causing harm to the reproductive well being of animals. Even though I find abortion and the destruction of the environment reprehensible, I find the aggressive and often times violent acts of some special interest groups to be equally reprehensible.

Increasingly, we as a society are pushing for long term reductions in others individuals liberty in exchange for an increase in our own short term perceptions of increased morality, lower crime, and happier spotted owls. I caution each American to consider carefully what we ask others to do in our name, for as a lesson in an often quoted yet seldom learned books teaches; "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

IEA

Education Association President Kerry Brown. "Priority has not been on the classroom in the past. They (school board) have taken the budget and balanced it on the teachers' backs. I think it has come down to administrative leadership given priority because that was seen as a way of being progressive, to work on programs they already had in place."

Teachers contacted agree with Brown in principle but stress their own concerns regarding the contract.

Eddie Thomas, second grade teacher at School #114, said teachers are not appreciated and that they have been forced to work with too much pressure on them.

"You can't work when there is a lot of pressure on you. Especially when you are not appreciated. You're just getting nowhere," she said.

She also said teachers about to retire feel the administrative hirings over the years have put undo pressure on them, especially Black teachers.

The original contract was for three years, but it only lasted about a year and a half because it took more than a year to get settled, Brown said.

When that contract started to run out, it was recommended to re-open the third year of the contract only, which is based on teachers salaries and benefits, Brown said. Since the contract expires this school year, the IEA, which represents the teachers, is trying to negotiate for a contract over several years. The teachers are working under the old contract until a new one is signed.

"Those issues got put on the back burner last year because of problems within IPS," Brown said. "And because the old school board would not move from its position of no increase in salary and benefits."

Cathy Widini, a middle school teacher, said she is also concerned with the salary issue and the negative perception of IPS in the media.

Lou Jones, IPS board president, said the new board is waiting to see how bad the school district really is financially.

"They (the teachers) are out there working without knowing if their going to get any type of increase this year," she said. "The board is really struggling with their financial position."

Jones also wants the teachers to continue to be patient and keep in mind the board will "be as fair as we can be."

The board should have the financial details in the next 30 days, Jones said.

Indianapolis Public Schools teachers are the lowest paid teachers in Marion County, making an average of $30,000-$32,000 as of 1992-93, with the experience ranging from zero years to 25 years. Beginning teachers make $21,022. This accounts for IPS teachers leaving to accept better paying jobs. More than 100 teachers left IPS last year, according to Brown.

Brown cites two reasons why Marion County teachers are at the bottom: the funding formula, which is based on enrollment figures for city, county and township schools; and money from the state, which is based on the property tax base.

Pat Pritchett, interim IPS superintendent, hopes an agreement can be reached and wants the teachers to know the school board is ready to negotiate.

"We're (school board) willing to begin the process and go to the table," he said. "We are willing to work with them and resolve these issues."

The IEA and IPS are scheduled to meet Sept. 1 to reach an agreement for the past re-opener, one that both sides want.

enforcement agency reported to the Dept. of Justice, and only five in 1992. This percentage is very disturbing to one of the members of the committee.

"There's an awful lot of work that needs to be done in the monitoring of hate crimes," said Sidney Taylor. "We would like to get this monitoring done by more police departments or human relations offices in each city. By doing this, we would know when these crimes are happening, and possibly do something to offset them. But each time we find out about them, it is well after the fact."

Ind. State Rep. William Crawford, according to Taylor, has labored long and hard to get legislation passed requiring law enforcement agencies to report these crimes. The HCSA is simply an encouragement not a mandate.

"It's (HCSA) definitely not a law, and it's extra work and a bother for agencies to report," said Irwin Rose, a former member of the committee. "And many of them have not been briefed by the FBI on what constitutes a hate crime. I didn't get the impression any of them were trying to hide these crimes, it is just a matter of being educated on what a hate crime is."

Rose said the committee obtained information and testimony from various groups such as the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, National Urban League, Hispanic, gay and lesbian groups, and law enforcement officials to complete their findings.

"I really enjoyed my service on the committee, I just had too many other commitments to continue," Rose said.

Crimes against people of color, primarily Blacks, is very prevalent in Indiana, according to the report. African-Americans, who are 7.8 percent of Indiana's population, are the most common victims of hate crimes, with 66 reported incidents (46.1 percent). Violent acts against gays and lesbians are also alarming.

Data contained in a study obtained by Taylor about South Bend, suggests these hate crimes are just as prevalent in middle class areas, as well as lower class areas.

Peter Minarik, senior research analyst for the regional office of The Civil Rights Commission in Chicago, explained why he thinks these crimes continue.

"It is my personal opinion that what is needed is a clear statement by political leadership that this type of activity is intolerable," Minarik said. "When these things happen and nothing is done, it sends a message that it's okay."

Ask Bank One

Answers to your questions about money management and banking.

Welcome to Ask Bank One.

It's important to make good decisions about money. But sometimes we all need good information first. That's what Ask Bank One is all about. Ask Bank One gives you the facts, and tries to answer your questions about all sorts of financial topics. We hope it gives you the information you need, and we invite you to call us or stop by your neighborhood Bank One Banking Center if you have any other questions.

*"The high cost of knowledge"Topic: Saving and Paying for College

If you're a parent, you want the best for your children. And these days, that usually means college, or some other degree after high school. College graduates almost always earn more over the course of their lifetime, not to mention the worthwhile knowledge that can make life more enriching. But the truth is, college is expensive. Right now, college tuition can run between $7,000 per year to as much as $20,000 per year. And like most things, it's not getting any cheaper.

In this issue of Ask Bank One, we'll answer your questions about saving for college while your children are young, and paying for college now, if they're almost ready, or already in college.

My daughter is still in diapers. Isn't it too early to start saving for college?

No, in fact, it's the best time. By starting a program when your children are very young, you'll be able to save just a little bit per month and still reach a substantial level when it's time to pay for college. Interest compounded over the course of 18 years can really add up. So by starting early and by making steady contributions, you'll be doing the right thing for your child's education.

Which savings program is best for me?

It depends on how old your child is. With a younger child, and because college is still a long way away, you may want to consider putting some of your money in an investment with a higher degree of risk, but with higher rewards. Since your child is young, a downturn in your investment would be less damaging in the long run.

As your child becomes a teen and approaches college age, a more conservative approach is called for — like Certificates of Deposit. Government Savings Bonds have advantages too. If they are bought specifically for the purpose of paying for college, they may have some money-saving tax advantages. (At Bank One, we can give you all the facts on the various investment programs, and help you decide which is right for you. Consult your tax advisor for information of deductibility.)

I have a child ready for college next year, and I haven't saved very much money. Where do I start?

Your first step is to complete the Need Analysis form that determines your ability to pay for college. Everyone interested in financial aid must complete the form, regardless of income, and it's available through your child's high-school career counselor, or at any college or university. The Need Analysis form is the most important document in determining many aspects of the financing, like grants, scholarships, and loans. It doesn't cost anything to submit, but it must be resubmitted each year the student is in school.

I want to go back to school. Are there programs for adult students?

Yes. Several loan programs are well-suited to adults who are working to get more education. Since they usually need to be paid back while you are still in school, make sure you pick one that fits with your budget.

How can I find out about scholarships and grants?

Scholarships and grants can really ease the burden of paying for college. Based on your Need Analysis form, your child may qualify for a Pell Grant, which is the most common, or a Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant (SEOG).

Many other grants and scholarships are available through unions, churches, social clubs, civic organizations, and others. There is money available to people who can show the need, so ask the school's financial aid people for help, and don't overlook any possibility yourself.

I know I'll need some kind of loan, but which kind?

There are several options. Several loans are especially set up to pay for an education, with longer payback periods and lower interest rates. Those loans fall into three basic types:

1. Federal Stafford Loans. These are very popular loans because interest rates are low, and repayment doesn't begin until the student leaves school. Repayment can even be delayed if the student continues his/her education or goes into certain volunteer services. The federal government subsidizes the interest on the need-based portion of the loan, while interest will accrue on any part of the loan not based on need.

2. Federal Parent Plus Loans.

These loans are taken out in the parent's name. There is no income limit, but there is a credit approval process. Repayment begins right away, while the student is in school.

3. Federal Supplemental Loans for Students (SLS). Students who are not dependents of their parents can qualify for these loans. Adult students, and other people going back to school often take advantage of these loans, which are not based on need. (For all three loan types, it's necessary to complete the Need Analysis form we mentioned earlier.) If you own your home, you may want to consider using your home's equity to pay for school with a home equity loan. This can be done in addition to, or instead of other education loans.

I'm not thinking about college, but I do want to get some additional education. What about vocational schools?

The educational loans mentioned below are available to students who are enrolled in vocational schools participating in these programs. There are also many vocational schools that offer financial aid through their offices. There are good schools and others that promise a lot, but deliver little. So talk with past students and graduates about the school, and ask tough questions before you commit to any loan or other financial agreements.

Do you have a question for Ask Bank One?

Program deals with young dads

Most often these men were counted out, told they do not matter, she said. They are not taught how to nurture their children nor how to be there for their children. Basically, all they know is they have a lot of responsibility and some are clueless as to what step to take next.

Meadows recalled Dr. Alvin Poussaint telling her, "there is no man who doesn't have hope for the future in the birth of his child."

This hit home and she realized the timing was right.

"This is when they most want to have hope for the future," said Meadows. "We can make contact with them as the women are here in our OB clinic. We'll be working with the child so that we can make sure their health care is good. Wishard is a place that has jobs available for people and everything just pointed to developing this program."

With funding from Lilly Endowment, Indianapolis Foundation and Wishard Memorial Foundation, the hospital was able to develop the Father Resource program.

"The task is working with young fathers — expecting fathers or parenting fathers — who are undereducated or unemployed and provide support services for them that they will be able to fulfill their roles as fathers, providers and nurturing parents," said Dr. Wallace McLaughlin, director of the program.

With this in mind, McLaughlin devised the theme building a "Noble Legacy of Fatherhood."

"There are a number of factors that contribute to what I call the social deterioration of the Black family and family's in general," said McLaughlin.

These factors include historical and political situations and the lack of jobs in the inner city. Schools do not address these issues, said McLaughlin, therefore there is a high drop out rate among Black males, an increase in crime and drug abuse and a weakening of family values.

The program wants to help both parents develop skills necessary to cooperate in caring for their children — even if they are separated. To achieve that, the program uses a four-pronged approach that helps fathers concentrate on finding employment, improving their education, developing their parenting skills and improving their self-awareness and resourcefulness. The men are also given a stipend for their participation in the program.

The program is targeted primarily towards men between the ages of 18 to 25 who live on the near Northwest side, an area that Wishard serves through one of its community health centers.

Financially disabled, young parents are at greater risk for school failure, criminal activity, substance abuse and unemployment, according to McLaughlin. Studies show that many young fathers want to support their families if they have access to gainful employment, he added.

The Father Resource program tries to provide some of these opportunities by placing the fathers through an intense six-week Father Development and Transformation course. From there, Wishard's human resource department provides job screening. Social workers and educators help the men earn their general equivalency diploma or steer them into job training programs.

"I don't know if this is everything I would hope it would be, but it certainly looks to me like it's on the right track," said Meadows. "We really are in an early stage and a lot of the problems we had I did not know how to get resolved and Wallace has done a terrific job. He's really good at what he does and the staff cares about the program, they care about the men and they are able to show that."

Six men have successfully completed the first Father Resource program. There are 12 in the program currently.

Jermaine Perry is on an odyssey towards manhood. He became involved with the Father Resource program after seeing a flyer posted in the laundry room of his girlfriend's apartment building.

"It said it could help you get your GED and get a good job with benefits and that's what I'm looking for," Perry said. "But as soon as I got in the program they told me they could open up the doors for me to go even further — to college. They told me there's nothing you can't do through this program and now I'm shooting towards the sky."

The program is a lifesaver, according to Perry. It has helped him to grow up and look at the world differently. A difference he hopes to impart into the rearing of his son.

Patrick Hill, 23, became involved with the Father Resource program quite differently.

After falling behind on child support payments, the prosecutor's office sent him a brochure on the program. He called and spoke with Khabir Shareef, the outreach coordinator, and made an appointment.

"I think the information they (McLaughlin and Shareef) share with me — their presence and getting to know these men is giving me a good model of fatherhood and all the information they share with me and everything I get from this program is what my children get from me," Hill said.

Perry dropped out of high school his sophomore year because he was working to raise his immediate family because his mother was not able.

Both men are working toward their GED and both want to attend college and have a career — Perry in construction and Hill in the medical field.

But right now, they are learning something that cannot be taught in college — how to become a man and a father.

"Being a father is loving, protecting and providing," said McLaughlin. "When you don't have access to good jobs, it's hard to provide. A good father is also building a noble legacy. You leave a foundation for your child. You provide the basics and provide a future for the child in terms of things that are tangible as well as those things that are not tangible in terms of values, spirituality and the sense of importance of education."

Perry and Hill have their own philosophies of fatherhood.

"To be a father, you must be a man," said Perry. "Being a man is teaching. So once you become a man, you can be that father to your child that you need to be."

"Being a good father is being there," added Hill. "Someone the child can depend on, having the knowledge and understanding to help that child mature into a boy, being there with the wisdom to help that child find himself and watch that child grow up into a man."

Just having contact with your child is essential, according to Hill, who was reared with an absentee father and a mother who was "kind of out of it."

"I would not even be in this program right now if there was a father there for me," Hill said wistfully. "I'd probably be getting out of medical school or something... If there's no man there to help mold a little boy, then most likely that boy won't become a man. Either he's going to mold himself after some of the examples out in the street or he's never going to find his way. That's what makes this program so important."

Perry said he is thankful that he has had a chance to go through this program.

"I do know that since I have this second chance and it's for me and my son's life and the other two significant others in my life — his mother and her little boy who I call my own — I want to create a better life with them, also for myself so we can all be a big family," said Perry. "That's what it's about, being a family."

McLaughlin has had a tremendous effect on Perry.

"He has played a very important role in my life," said Perry. "He's the one who started all this and he's the one who is telling the man that 'there is hope for them.' He has faith in us and that's all we needed. No matter how many (participants) sit up here and act like they don't want to be bothered with it and they're just here for the money, he's still teaching us and he's not going to stop just because he comes to one hard rock. He could be doing other better things, but he'd rather be here with us and that's great all its self."

Along with learning Black history and self-respect, the young men have guest speakers and open forums where they are able to discuss various ideas. They are assigned reading material by such authors as Dr. Naim Akbar.

"We come in here and the first thing we learn is our significance, our part in this world culture and some of the dynamics and reasons behind our condition today, but not in the 'blame somebody' attitude, but accept that as it is and do for yourself and lift yourself up out of that," said Hill.

Perry agrees Hill's sentiments.

"We thought we were inferior, but we're not and just by knowing that it made me think a whole lot differently — that I'm not dumb and I have it coming down," said Perry. "And then they teach you how to use that and they also teach you the difference between a male, a boy and a man."

Perry said his assumption of what a "man" is is totally different from what he is being taught in the program.

He believed a man was someone who was good with his hands, and was not scared to pull a pistol.

"But now I feel men have morals," said the newly educated Perry. "He respects himself as well as others. He respects his family and he respects his surroundings. You can't have too much respect for yourself if you're out there doing all that."

Perry now tells his friends about the things he is learning in the program because he wants them to wake up from the false ideology of manhood and fatherhood that once plagued him.

"Knowing is the first thing," said Perry. "Knowing is half the battle and with knowledge comes power."

Hill has also gotten a lot out of the program. Having a group of men care about him like this put love in his heart.

"You don't meet that many people who sincerely put effort into trying to help, so I guess I would thank them and those who are funding them and helping them to support this program," said Hill.

Small business conference coming to Indianapolis

Indianapolis is the site of the Indiana White House Conference on Small Business. The Indianapolis conference will be held at the WHCSB coming to Indy

The White House Conference on Small Business is an opportunity for America's small business community to make views known to the Clinton administration and Congress. To facilitate this, Congress created an independent commission charged to convene a series of state, regional and national conferences designed to identify and promote issues most important to small businesses.

The track record for the WHCSB is impressive. Half the recommendations made by WHCSB delegates in 1980 and 1986 were favorably acted upon by the legislative and executive branches.

The WHCBS will be at Radisson Hotel at Keystone Crossing at 8:30 a.m. Sept. 1.

"If the organization expects me to join without Chavis at the head is crazy. All they want is for corporate America to support them and their lunches and conferences and it is time for them to stand on their own two feet and support themselves and do what's right within the Black community," Howard said.

While many local members were in favor of the NAACP's decision to remove Chavis, others supported his efforts to get younger people involved in the organization. They also would like to see a younger person take over as president on a local level.

"Personally, I would like to see a younger person take over as president of the Indianapolis chapter of the NAACP," said Homer Smith, second vice president of Indianapolis chapter of the NAACP. "With the help from older people within the organization, I believe a younger person would be able to take the organization into the next level."

Many people within the community felt there should have been a more watchful eye on Chavis and the organization's funds.

"A man in his position who is in charge of that much money can not pay out that kind of money to a person without any checks and balances," said Ann Utter. "I think the NAACP did the only thing it could do for the benefit of the organization by dismissing him from his position."

Suggestions have been made from community leaders as to what the NAACP can do to improve relations within the African-American community.

"Locally, the NAACP has not busted a grape," Howard said. "What they need to do is march against Black on Black crime within the African-American community. Until they start doing things within the community, they will not amount to anything."

It is important for people to know that the NAACP is an organization and not a movement like the Rainbow Coalition and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and that we will weather this storm, said Tom Turner, administrator of the Indianapolis chapter of the NAACP.

Singer knows how intimidating her voice can be

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Patti LaBelle knows she can be intimidating to her fellow singers.

She sees it in their eyes. Her titanic voice, and her tendency to show it off, is the equivalent of a knockout punch when singers get together.

So LaBelle often quietly tells her manager to decline certain invitations to sing in group settings, such as show finales. And she admits it hurts.

"When I get out there and I look at some of the faces that I'm singing with, they're looking at me weird — and I'm feeling like I can't be myself," she said. "Because if I come out and just be Patti, it offends somebody. And if I come out and hold back, it offends me."

Country singer Travis Tritt was one of the latest to step gingerly into LaBelle's lair on the recent "Rhythm, Country and Blues" album.

"He acted (intimidated), but I said, 'Boy-friend, you are not intimidated by me, as well as you sing,'" she said. "And he went out and sang his butt off."

LaBelle has been doing the same thing since the early 1960s, when the Philadelphia native led the group Patti LaBelle and the Bluebells. She turned more toward rock 'n' roll

Free annual festival honors jazz great Wes Montgomery

By MELVIN WALDEN-JAMES

A park named after America's first president and a festival named after the first chief executive of jazz guitar will come together Sunday afternoon, August 28, when the 10th Annual Wes Montgomery Jazz Festival — affectionately known as the "Wes Fest" — kicks off in Washington Park at 34th and Rural. It's free to the public.

Four local groups will play jazz between 1 p.m.-6:30 p.m. Several of the players will be remembering the times when they played with the man who discovered the "Wes Voice" in his guitar while the whole world noticed.

The production team of Jazzline, Inc. and Indy Parks and Recreation recreated the free festival in 1991.

Ralph Adams, a radio personality and president of Jazzline, said Michael McFarland, Indy Parks community arts coordinator, asked him to use Jazzline as the steering organization after suffering through the summer of 1990 without a "Wes Concerned about escalating violence throughout the world, particularly in third world countries, and the lack of remedy to solve it, jazz musician Kenny Washington has taken measures into his own hands — through the salve of music.

Washington began his music career in 1968 with Germany's SABA-MPS records. His career in music was short-lived when in 1969 his wife was killed and he took time off to dedicate himself to raising his children.

Now, 20 years later, he has resumed his career and in 1991 released "Earthwalk" followed by "Dancin' With Bird" in 1993.

Nat King Cole, Al Jolson, and Ethel Waters, symbolized by new stamps from the U.S. Postal Service, will take center stage in New York at Damrosch Park, Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts, September 1. The dedication of the stamps will kick off a month-long American singers are part of the Postal Service's continuing Legends of American Music stamp series. Entertainer and Broadway star Ben Vereen will join Runyon at the festival.

"The music of our nation and its stamps give us an animated view of the American experience," said Runyon. "The American Music Stamp Festival gives us all a chance to celebrate and remember the legends of American music and to own a collectible which trumpets their spirit."

Throughout the month, post offices nationwide will host music stamp festivals honoring pop, jazz and blues singers.

"There are so many American musical pioneers who deserve our recognition," said Vereen. "I'm proud to join the U.S. Postal Service in saluting the men and women who have made pop, jazz and blues great."

The noon ceremony is open to the public and will include appearances by music celebrities and the families of the "Popular Singers" stamp subjects, including Nat King Cole's daughters, Timolin Casey Cole.

"Our father, by right, has earned his place in history as a true American hero and legacy through his contributions of artistry and music," said Timolin, upon learning of the stamp honoring her father. Her twin sister Casey said, "we are deeply honored to share the dedication of this stamp with all Americans."

The second major American Music Stamp Festival line-up appears September 17, at the Mississippi Delta Blues Festival in Greenville, MS. This exceptionally collection of postage stamps honors jazz and blues greats "Ma" Rainey, Bessie Smith, Billie Holiday, Robert Johnson, Howlin' Wolf, Muddy Waters, Jimmy Rushing and Mildred Bailey. The blues maestro himself, B.B. King, will help dedicate these stamps.

This year's stunning collection of stamps shows the versatility and intensity of the American music tradition and is just a prelude of what is to come. The captivating Legends of American Music series will run for several more years and continue to showcase great performers from all genres of music including jazz instrumentalists, opera performers and composers.

in the 1970s with the group LaBelle. The song, "Lady Marmalade" has matured into a classic and is probably her best known song.

She has settled into a comfortable solo career that has won her Grammy and American Music awards during the 1990s. LaBelle celebrated her 50th birthday this spring with the release of "Gems," a new album that features work by top producers Jimmy Jam & Terry Lewis and Teddy Riley.

"I was so happy to make 50 because all of my sisters died in their 40s from cancer," she said.

Her sisters died of colon, lung and brain cancer. That's made LaBelle continually aware of the disease, and she is the spokeswoman for the National Cancer Institute. She encourages women to be checked for breast cancer.

She still lives in Philadelphia where she has a teen-age son and two adopted sons in their late 20s. She also takes care of the son and daughter of her late sister, Jackie.

"Gems," named for LaBelle's pet name for her favorite songs, is basically a collection of love songs in cool rhythm and blues settings anchored by that LaBelle voice.

LaBelle said she's not trying to be a show-off when she sings. The singer, first noticed in a Baptist church choir, said she was brought up to never hold back.

"I feel good when I sing out, and I feel awful when I think, 'I could have sang that note better or stronger,' or put a little twist on that sucker," she said. "I'll be twirling notes around. I can't sing a note straight."

"It's pleasing to the audience. They like to hear a song belted out, especially at the end of a show — they don't want to hear 'Mary Had a Little Lamb.'"

LaBelle is happy with her career. She said she's signed to a record company, MCA, that she enjoys and is given a level of creative freedom. She feels accepted.

"Music is good for women, much better than when I had started," she said. "Women have been given the freedom to produce and direct and do what we want to do musically. It's not a man thing anymore. It's equal. And we're strong. Women are kicking butt."

LaBelle's next role may be as a combination Ed Sullivan and Ed McMahon.

She will be opening a club in Philadelphia this fall. Called Chez LaBelle, she sees it as a cabaret showcase for up-and-coming artists. LaBelle wants it to be like a live version of "Star Search."

"I'll be in the wings with them," she said. "Maybe I'll be discovered."

Suite for Orchestra and Tribe," was composed by Washington with arrangement, orchestration and additional composition by his close associate Mike Woods, who is based in New York.

It was recorded on the Pulse WORLDJAZZ label for this Fall release in the U.S., Canada, Mexico, Japan and Europe.

"The suite celebrates the survival of the tribally oppressed," explained Washington. "Musically, the instrumentation has a lot of ethnic instruments from third world countries, such as steel drums, and we get a flavor of different cultures from around the world. We've got strings from Europe, American jazz instruments, and so all of those instruments are a part of the suite."

"This suite is dedicated to the nurturing, health and peaceful victory of those who are oppressed and that greater Tribe of us who feel brotherhood and sisterhood with them," he continued.

It took Washington two years to complete his humanitarian piece. He performed it for the first time this month at the Indiana Avenue Jazz Festival which was held last week, and will perform it again at 9 p.m., August 28 at The Jazz Kitchen.

Performing with him is a collaboration of handpicked local and national artists brought together specifically for the suite, including Johnny Coles on the flugelhorn and Washington's children, Kenny Washington, Jr. on guitar and Kera Washington on conga and African percussion.

"Ghetto Love," moving up the charts

Top Story: Giving up the mic as lead singer for Ready For The World, Melvin Riley is boldly vying to be crowned the next hottest R&B male soloist on the block. With his current single "Whose Is It," from his MCA album "Ghetto Love," he's got a good chance of doing just that.

Although RFTW had its share of up-tempo hits they also had a way with ballads. And Riley's carrying on the tradition he began as a member of the 80s R&B group.

With Riley no longer involved in a group, he was able to spend a lot of time working on his solo debut. He co-wrote or wrote all of the songs on his album as well as helping produce all his songs. In addition, he did the musical arrangements and background vocals for every song.

He also is looking forward to touring once his "Ghetto Love" album starts to really take off, which should not be long.

PP&T: (People, Places & Things): When it comes to singing, Gladys Knight knows no competition. But she can also throw down in the kitchen. Because of her great singing and cooking skills, Knight has been tapped by a food giant. The Quaker Oats Company has drafted her to be the national spokesperson for their Aunt Jemima products.

No, she will not be pictured on the Aunt Jemima box.

Confirmation of Michael Jackson and Lisa Marie Presley's marriage has started a whole new wave of speculation, particularly Jackson.

Well, no one really knows. But could it be possible that they could actually really be fond of each other.

Phat Trax: Teddy Riley must like being in a group because no sooner than Guy broke up, Riley already had BlackStreet in the works. Unlike his work with Wrecks 'N' Effects, where he was not in the group but prominently popped in and out of their videos and songs, Riley is a full-fledged Blackstreet member. With their hit single "Booty Call" putting on the map, Teddy's ready to take the group to the next level, but he says Guy is not over yet! Riley, Chauncey, David and Lev came onto the scene with their hit single "Baby Be Mine" from the "CB4" movie soundtrack.

The current single, "Booty Call," according to Riley, is about his personal friend Mike Tyson, saying that Tyson made a "Booty Call" when he got into trouble.

Volunteers with HELPLINE dedicated to cause

By ANGEL STREETER
Recorder Intern

When Jack Burke retired from Eli Lilly last year, he wanted to do something "challenging and fulfill a desire to help others." He did that with HELPLINE, an information and referral network that connects callers with the proper services available.

Burke is one of 30 to 35 volunteers or information and referral specialists at HELPLINE, one of the services offered by the Information and Referral Network, Inc. Volunteers connect clients or callers needing human services with those who provide them. They operate from a 500-page catalog called the "Rainbow Book," a listing of all human services in the Indianapolis area.

Since Burke began working for the HELPLINE this summer, he has helped people get food, financial assistance and shelter.

"There's something different every time you answer the phone," he said.

"People have no inclination to what Black men are doing. They sell you so much negative stuff. People should see the contributions of Black men and women."

Burke works approximately four hours a week, as do most other volunteers. Each day he walks away with a sense of accomplishment, he said. "Each time you talk to a client, nine times out of 10 you'll help someone. It's instant fulfillment when you help someone. You can see the results," he said. "It gets me fired up every day."

Gene Bentley, 63, walks away with the same gratification. He has been with HELPLINE since 1989. In that time he has helped hundreds of people in need. "You always get a sense of accomplishment when you help someone. If you can connect them with resources, you feel you helped in some way," he said.

After he retired Bentley was referred to HELPLINE by his fellow church members. He enjoys the work so much that he's on standby in case the agency needs extra help.

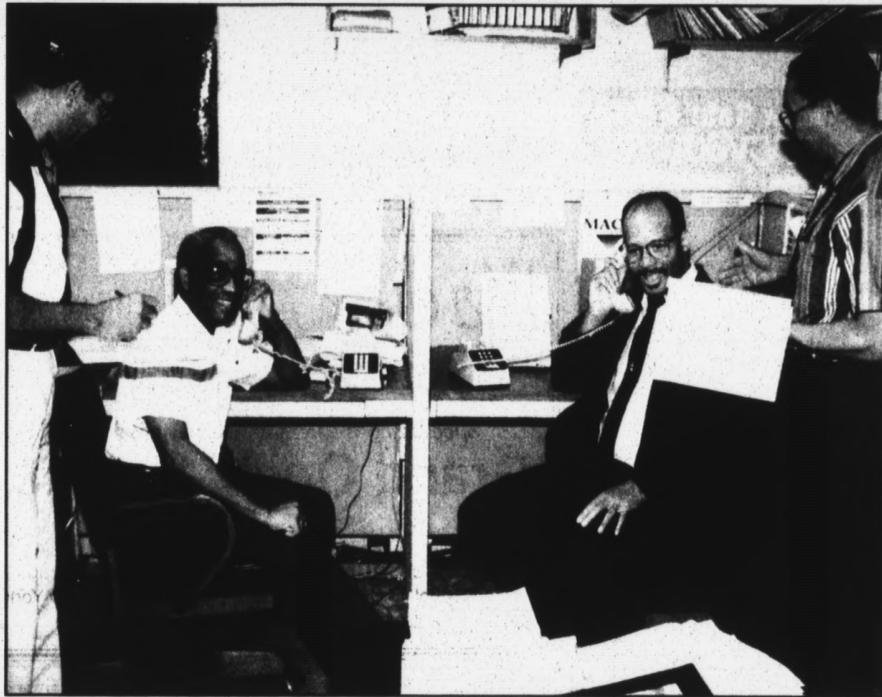

Bentley recalls helping a senior citizen who couldn't find a way to get food. Bentley found an agency to help her. He called her back, but she wasn't at home. But Bentley stuck with it and he managed to locate her. The food agency now delivers to her.

Most of the calls the volunteers encounter are for food, especially towards the end of the month when people run out of government assistance. Calls for assistance in paying for rent and utilities are also popular, particularly during the winter.

The volunteers are often overwhelmed by the enormous amount of help that people need. HELPLINE receives 30,000 calls a year. The calls range from people needing support groups to suicide hotlines.

"Until you get in a situation, you don't really realize how much help people really need. Hearing people in need just brings the reality of what's going on out there in our environment," said Bill Bellinger, 67, a volunteer for nearly two years. "There's a lot of proud people who think these people are simply begging. (But) people really need help."

Bellinger serves on the human resources committee of the board of directors of HELPLINE. He is also a role-play trainer for the HELPLINE training classes, that all volunteers must go through. Providing social services is right up his alley.

Bellinger is a retired guidance counselor from Arlington High School. He learned about HELPLINE when he was invited to its open house by a friend. He liked the people there so much that, upon retirement, he instantly volunteered.

Jack Perkins, 41, was similarly impressed with HELPLINE's establishment. Last fall Perkins was searching for an internship to fulfill his human services degree at Indiana Vocational Technical College. He interviewed for several internships, but none of them appealed to him. Finally, one of his professors suggested HELPLINE. He went in for an interview, and he immediately liked it.

"I realized instantly it was going to work," he said. "When I got there I expected a lot of white people. But when I got there, I

Order of the Eastern Star offers hope for city youth

Among the ritualistic and fraternal aspects of the Order of the Eastern Star, the Youth Fraternities are an integral part and an active challenge to our leaders. District No. 2 of the Order of the Eastern Star, Prince Hall Affiliated has two Youth Fraternities in Indianapolis comprised of young men and women between the ages of six and 18 years of age.

One advantage of belonging to this select group of young people is the opportunity to become a member of the Order of the Eastern Star on their 18th birthday. Marie Thomas is the sponsor of the Maude B. Herring Youth Fraternity which meets at Fidelity Lodge on the first and third Saturdays of every month, and Mildred Germany is the sponsor of the Alice C. Thompson Youth Fraternity which meets on the fourth Saturdays at the Prince Hall Masonic Temple.

The grand youth supervisor of the Indiana Council of Youth Fraternities, Order of the Eastern Star, PHA, Melody Moore, encourages our youth to use their minds and enhance their abilities in their endeavors.

Recently, a statewide meeting and banquet was held in Jeffersonville, Ind. The trip was multi-challenging as the youth were encouraged to use the knowledge they have learned from these sponsors on how to conduct themselves while residing in hotels, eating, and other forms of social etiquette. In addition, the youth were challenged that weekend at their banquet when the grand worthy patron, James H. Douglas, Sr., asked them to research and report facts of interest on Prince Hall, the founder of our Masonry.

Anthony Gray, the son of Anthony and Joann Gray, and Johnnie Wallace, the daughter of the late Johnnie Wallace and Sonya Gray, both of whom are members of the Maude B. Herring Youth Fraternity, were the proud recipients of a savings bond, issued by the grand worthy patron for both their diligence and substance of their research. The youth presided, carried motions and gave reports during their business meeting. A fall workshop for the youth will be held in South Bend, Ind., on October 8.

Says Moore, "I feel as if I'm aware and definitely concerned about the needs of our young people. I have two children."

Moore and the sponsors engage in fun activities for the youth as well. The youth will march in the Prince Hall Day celebration parade in Marion, Ind., Sunday, Sept. 11. Plans are being made for them to attend the Circle City Classic football game. Dances, camping, and "lock-ins" facilitate in making them well-rounded young people. Moore welcomes and encourages the parents of these youth to get involved. Interested youth may call 257-7831.

Melody Moore is a past matron of Amaranth Chapter #30, Marion, Ind., and is a member of the Usher Board and teacher for the Children's Church of Robinson Community A.M.E. church, where the Rev. Ann Henning Byfield is pastor.

Omnicare to improve care, cut costs for elderly

Care Pharmaceutical Services, Inc. and PRN Pharmaceutical Services, Inc., both Indiana-based subsidiaries of Omnicare, Inc., have introduced the first clinically-based guidelines or formulary for selecting appropriate drugs for the elderly residing in skilled nursing, assisted living and other long-term care facilities. These proprietary drug guidelines provide a unique analysis of drug effectiveness versus cost for nursing home residents which will help improve care, while reducing pharmacy costs.

Called the Omnicare Geriatric Pharmaceutical Care Guidelines, this reference guide is the first geriatric-focused formulary to rank drugs for their clinical effectiveness in treating the elderly in nursing facilities and to provide the relative cost of each drug versus others in its therapeutic class.

"The Omnicare Guideline is truly an innovative approach to health care reform. Health care professionals will now have at their fingertips a valuable reference tool that helps them provide better, yet less expensive medicine. The Omnicare Guidelines will help close the information gap and improve drug prescribing to the elderly in nursing facilities," says Joel F.

Gemudner, president of Omnicare, Inc., headquartered in Cincinnati.

Omnicare's Indiana Pharmacies along with other Omnicare companies and health care professionals nationwide participated in the development of the Omnicare Guidelines.

"It is not a traditional, cost-driven formulary. Rather, based upon year-long research into the clinical literature, drugs were rated as preferred, acceptable or unacceptable for treating a particular disease state," Erwin said. "Drugs may react very differently in the bodies of the frail elderly than in the rest of us, but there is not other formulary that analyzes the efficacy of drugs for this population." The Omnicare Guidelines explains in clinical detail the reason for the finding of PCPS along with comprehensive references to the professional literature.

After clinical determinations were made, Omnicare assigned each drug a relative cost symbol - from one to seven dollar signs - based upon the price of the drug to patients, their insurers or other payers of the pharmacy bill.

The first edition compares over 200 branded and generic drugs in 20 therapeutic classes used in treating more than 15 disease states selected for their significance in long-term care and for their cost impact, including drugs for hypertension, depression and peptic ulcer disease.

"The elderly residing in nursing facilities have special needs and the Omnicare Geriatric Pharmaceutical Care Guidelines was created to meet them. By prescribing a preferred drug with the lowest relative cost, physicians can be confident that they're making the best clinical choice and also saving money for their patients or other payers of the pharmacy bill. We believe that the Omnicare Guidelines, along with the assistance of our consultant pharmacists, can make a significant contribution to managing the pharmaceutical care of the elderly to produce the best outcome for patient and payer alike," says Gemudner.

Omnicare, Inc. is the nation's leading independent provider of institutional pharmacy and related services to nursing facilities and their residents.

Currently, Omnicare serves 121,500 residents in 1,400 long-term care facilities located in Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, Missouri, Ohio, Oklahoma and West Virginia.

could see it was an integrated operation. That impressed me."

After his internship, Perkins stayed with HELPLINE. Although he volunteers only five hours a week, Perkins says it's a lot of work, especially since he takes his work home with him. He often receives calls at home from people who know he works at HELPLINE to ask for assistance on some situations.

Perkins recalls a woman who called who needed help with housing. He gave the woman a referral, but he couldn't keep the woman off his mind all weekend. He finally contacted some people he knew involved in housing to see if they could help the woman. "It was a haunting thing," he said. "(Some things) you can't get off your mind."

Burke agreed. "Some of the stories you hear, it's really sad. It kind of makes you want to go out and do things on your own," he said.

HELPLINE was established in 1946 as a part of The Network, which is funded by the United Way. The purpose of The Network is to provide individuals and families access to services quickly and easily. It acts as a central source of information resources in an otherwise fragmented service delivery system.

The agency began accepting trained volunteers in 1981. To operate efficiently it needs at least 45 to 55 volunteers.

"Somebody who comes here has to be a well-balanced person. When people are in crisis, they can't think straight. We do problem solving for them. We do needs assessment," said Marketing Manager Linda Gillette.

A three-way line is often established between the client, the service and the volunteer. An average call takes about 15 minutes, sometimes longer. One time Burke had to spend 45 minutes with a woman who was having problems with her teenage daughter.

"You want to make sure you're giving them the right information. You really want to make sure you're getting the best for the client," he said.

To make sure they are giving quality service, HELPLINE volunteers tell the clients to call back if it doesn't work out or call back just to say how it went. The Network also compiles statistics on clients and services to which they are referred. This information is shared with policy makers and others who need to be informed about gaps in and barriers to human services.

Gillette applauds the efforts of the volunteers. "They're really a dynamic bunch of guys. (This) points out to people that men can do this too," she said.

All four men feel a need to give back to the community. "People have no inclination to what Black men are doing," Perkins said. "They (media) sell you so much negative stuff. People should see the contributions of Black men and women."

Starquest champs perform at Hoosier 96 Day at state fair

By ANNETTE L. ANDERSON
Staff Writer

Perfect Combination, Nasty Boys and Ladies and Gentlemen performed on the Hoosier Lottery Free Stage last week for Hoosier 96 Day at the Indiana State Fair.

The groups are all Pepsi Starquest '94 winners. Ladies and Gentlemen was the overall competition winners for Starquest '94.

"It was my idea to form the group, but my girlfriend gave me the inspiration," said Joe Lane, leader of Ladies and Gentlemen. "We are looking forward to establishing our own record company, that is a long-range goal."

Other members of the singing group, Candace Moore, Sherri Tunstall and David Dunkin, all agree they will be successful in their musical endeavors.

"The first single we put out will be a hit as soon as it comes out," said Moore. "I have all the confidence in the world that will happen."

Tunstall said the group hopes to acquire a record contract and produce quite a few albums. Dunkin's comments were a little different from the other members.

"I'd like to make enough money so that my mom and dad won't have to work anymore," Dunkin sighed. "I also want to give something back to the community, a community that has supported us."

Among the songs rendered by the group was "Make Our Love Last Forever," a song written by Lane himself.

Hoosier 96 Day also included a WAV-TV 53 live taping of party mix with 96.3 FM radio personality John Cavallario. Members of the audience were invited to dance on camera to receive prizes and movie passes for the movie "Blankman." Vanessa Conners, Scott Stalker, Joni Michaels, Lisa Boyer and Allan Haw were also on hand to assist with the event.

The members of Perfect Combination, Sommer Rhim, Qiana Stigler and Gwen Grimes, the champions of the senior dance competition for Starquest '94, jammed with members of the audience during the taping. It seemed their energy was endless, even after their very physical performance.

The energy level was also high for the Nasty Boys, Charles Smith, Rico Bacon, Dion Hutton, Chris Parker, Patrick Twyman and Derrick House, who have been dancing together for three years.

"Dancing is fun and a productive thing to do," Smith said. "It's also very competitive, and I like a challenge. We want to give our audiences what no other groups have. We want to go beyond all limitations to entertain them to the highest peak."

Smith, who creates the image for the group, is enrolled for fall classes at Ivy Tech, where he will study fashion designing and entrepreneurship.

Firefighting rescued Coolio from life of drugs, crime

IRVINE, Calif. (AP) — Rapper Coolio says rescuing people as a firefighter helped rescue him from a life of drugs and crime.

"It was like being on a football team," the 31-year-old performer said in a recent interview for a benefit concert at the Irvine Meadows Amphitheatre. "It cleaned me up. I got to see another side of life."

Coolio, whose real name is Artis Ivey, says he was addicted to cocaine in the early 1980s when he moved with his father in San Jose. He says he told his father he was on vacation.

In fact, he says he was trying to clean up his act, taking a job first at an airport, then joining the fire department.

As he battled fires he was also writing rap music, eventually joining the rap act WC and the MAAD Circle, with whom he still records.

Coolio's current single "Fantastic Voyage" is a current Top 10 hit.

Diversity comes to the Indiana State Fair —

Fair goers felt the spiritual impact

By SHAUNE SHELBY
Recorder Correspondent

It's official, the Indiana State Fair has finally joined the ranks of the rest of the secular community, by realizing Gospel Music is a main stream source of entertainment for people of all races and cultures. Fair officials added a new dimension this year — the Gospel Explosion.

The Gospel Explosion featured both national and local artists, which normally perform at churches, musicals or other church related events.

Gospel music by tradition has been associated with the Black Baptist church. The theme was that gospel music isn't a racial thing, but one of praise the Lord and Savior. The gospel music explosion was brought to the attention of many who regularly listen to gospel music.

The audience could tell from the invocation that the Young and old, Black and white, enjoyed continuous singing and praising on the Hoosier Lottery's Free Stage during the State Fair last Sunday. (Recorder Photos by Curtis Guynn) amphitheater would be transformed into a place of worship. Rodnie Bryant lead the devotion, with prayer being offered by Rev. C.A. Richmond of Garfield Baptist Church.

Michael Highbaugh, a gospel DJ with radio station WTLC, said many may have problems with worship service being outdoors. He reminded those individuals that we always didn't have big churches with air conditioning, carpeted aisles and padded pews. The Gospel Explosion helped people celebrate a tradition rich in rhythm and history. It showed how a race of people faced struggles and overcame them.

And its purpose was to ensure the fair goers felt the spiritual impact of gospel music. This was the first time attendees heard gospel music, which they liked, said Al Byndon. The singers and choirs sang an array of songs from traditional to contemporary gospel, to Jamaican, and old Negro spirituals and soul. All who passed by the stage either stopped or sat down and listened. Even the Lt. Gov. Frank O'Bannon was seen at the gospel stage.

Becky Webber, a vendor at the State Fair for Ben and Jerrys Ice Cream, said it was better than excellent. She brought a group of teenagers from a Johnson County High School to work at the fair as a fund-raiser which placed them next to the Hoosier Lottery Free Stage, where they had seen several groups and activities performed during the fair. She commended The Indianapolis Recorder and television station WAV-53 for sponsoring the Gospel Explosion.

Many said the Gospel Explosion was the best attended event of all time on the free stage. Many of the spectators stayed the entire day, from 2 p.m. until 10:30 p.m., making it the largest audience of any sponsored event at the Free Stage.

Prayers were being offered and people were being asked to commit their lives to the Lord. The audience was also treated to experiencing something that had never experienced before, a spiritual awakening. Although many who came for the rides, animals, games and food were surprised and glad to see gospel included. People from varied faiths and hues were singing and clapping their hands for the Lord.

The State Fair has added a whole new perspective to itself, one that offers something for all citizens of Indiana. It truly was a State Fair.

The Recorder was pleased to join in the endeavor to culturally diversify the State Fair. And many look forward to a Gospel Explosion II. If you missed this celebration of gospel music, see you next year or maybe you can find someone who attended and they can tell you better of what they experienced. Thanks to the ministers, choirs, and musicians who helped The Recorder promote the Gospel Explosion. And a special salute to Bill Stinson, executive director of the State Fair; Sam Jones, director of the local Urban League and State Fair board member, whose vision and hard work made this a reality. Also thanks to Samantha Cross, Free Stage coordinator, Rodnie Bryant, talent coordinator and Kathy. Also, to WTLC and WPZZ Gospel DJ's serving as MCs.

The Eastern Star Choir was one of the featured artists at this year's Gospel Explosion.

Episcopalian convention to stress restructuring

Recorder Wire Report

More than 12,000 Episcopalians are expected in Indianapolis this week for the 71st general convention of the Episcopal Church, one of the world's largest legislative bodies.

The convention is held every three years. It will confront tough issues such as proposals for restructuring and changing the governance of the church, the church's efforts at combatting racism, HIV/AIDS ministry, the church's position on sexuality, strengthening the family, evangelism, the environment, the national budget, gun control, certain specific areas of community activism, and many others.

"We must put aside our egos and biases and hear what God is saying to the Episcopal Church today," said Hattie Hall, one of the delegation of deputies from Indianapolis.

The general convention is structured very similarly to the U.S. Congress. It is the legislative body of the 2.7 million-member church, which is one of the nation's oldest. The first general convention was held the same year the U.S. Constitution was ratified, 1789, and many of the nation's founding fathers were Episcopalians. The two-house body, the 1,577-member House of Deputies and the House of Bishops, must both approve resolutions for them to become church policy.

Business will be done in 18 legislative sessions, when the two houses sit separately. But there will be less business; only about 400 resolutions have been submitted, one third less than in 1991. The House of Bishops' pastoral teaching on sexuality, produced over three years at the request of the 1991 general convention, is expected to draw a lot of public attention.

A preliminary draft of the teaching, which serves as a philosophical framework within the church develops its policies and practices, was leaked by a conservative group, Episcopalians United, early this summer, causing some consternation. And that same group leaked the final

A celebration of woman

The missionary and Women of Workers Alliance of the Mount Zion Apostolic Church held its annual revival last weekend. OPINION

No churches, pastors or members are flawless

Dear Ms. McCane,
I suppose my letter would be a little boring because I belong to a church that is doing everything right.

We have a good community-involved ministry; our pastor is just wonderful; our choir is dynamic; and our Sunday services are fired up for the Lord.

Sunday school and Wednesday night prayer services are well-attended.

I guess you could say that we are about as close to a perfectly-run church as possible.

I don't participate in any of the business matters of our church but when I get more time, I may do so.

It really is a pleasure to be able to write something positive about the church for a change. I can't understand why some of your readers report so many problems and disharmony.

Some of them are probably poor members themselves. They should look from within for improvement.

T.B.

Dear T.B.,

I certainly don't consider your letter boring because it is about a perfect church.

However, the fact remains, I write to stir the consciousness of those churches and members who aren't "perfect."

I'm not trying to put a blight on your religious experience. But I imagine if you would find the time to get involved in the business and administrative processes of your church, you might find a few pimples on your church's face.

It's often easy to sit on the pew (front or back) and pat your feet to the music every Sunday morning.

But when you have to help pull a music department together, it's a little more demanding.

It's often easy to smile and be hugged by everybody after service — then disappear until next Sunday.

But when you have to pull several members together on a project during the week, or attend several functions in the course of the week, often sacrificing home life, those hugs and smiles often get fewer and fewer.

If you should ever decide to work in your church, please don't become disparaged when some of your "perfect" members start acting "human" in the meetings. Remember, there are no "perfect" churches, "perfect" pastors or "perfect" members — just some that try to stay a little closer to God than others.

We encourage readers to submit questions and comments for Ethel McCane's "From the Front Pew." Letters should be addressed to Ethel McCane, P.O. Box 18141, Indianapolis, Ind. 46218.

Women of Color to stress importance of health in conference

Recorder Wire Report
 "Women of the rainbow: Making Healthy Choices" is the subject of an upcoming conference on health and social issues affecting minority women sponsored by the Indiana Community AIDS action Network. The conference is scheduled to take place 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Aug. 27 at Robinson AME Church, 4602 N. College Ave.

The purpose is to empower women of color and enhance their awareness of emotional, physical, and spiritual health and well being; and to seek an improved quality of life through continued learning and positive choices.

"We have a real commitment to this conference in the hope of education this population on holistic health issues," said Debra Lampkins, chairperson, Women of the Rainbow steering committee. "The national health statistics pertaining to minorities, reveal higher rates of cancer, diabetes, high blood pressure, and HIV infection.

"Statistics also indicate that issues of depression, stress and low self-esteem, due to racial and ethnic oppression, negatively impact women and their families."

Featured speaker will be Virginia Blackburn, Ft. Wayne Women's Bureau, who will be addressing the group regarding oppression and how it impacts the community. Other speakers will address topics such as HIV/AIDS and relationships.

Other collaborating agencies include: the Marion County Health Department; the Indiana State Department of Health; the Minority Health Advisory Council; the Young Women's Christian Association; El Centro Hispano; Health Foundation of Greater Indianapolis; Robinson Community AME Church; Indianapolis Prevention of AIDS among Minorities; Marion County HIV/AIDS Coalition; Holiday Inn-North and Black-Eyed Pea Restaurant.

The conference is free and open to the public. Transportation and child care will be provided. For more information call 920-3190.

Women of Color Health Did you know that?...

■ In 1994, 44,200 new cases of breast cancer will be diagnosed in Indiana women. In the last 35 years, Marion County has had a significantly higher breast cancer mortality rate than for the United States. This is true for both women of color and white women.

■ Homicide is the leading cause of death for African-American women between ages 15-34.

■ Seventy-four percent of women with AIDS are African-American or Hispanic.

■* In the U.S., 90 percent of infants born with HIV infection are born to African-American or Hispanic women. AIDS is the leading cause of death among Hispanic children under one year of age and the second leading cause of death for African-American children under one year of age.

■ Nearly 20 percent of African-Americans have no health insurance. Thirty-two percent of Hispanics have no health insurance.

■ In 1989 in Indiana, the death rate for diabetes in African-American women was 30.3 per 100,000, as compared to 11.4 for Anglo women.

■ Hispanic and African-American women have higher rates of diabetes, hypertension, cardiovascular disease, and some cancers than their white counterparts.

■ African-American women ages 25-55 are three to four times more likely to die of heart disease, stroke, and complication of pregnancy than white women.

Indiana laity of AME Church concludes summer events

The Indiana Conference Lay Organization ended the summer on a successful note at the organization's annual banquet. The banquet, held at the new facility of St. James A.M.E. Church, was highlighted by music and readings rather than the usual format featuring a speaker. The occasion was the 156th session of the Indiana Annual Conference of the A.M.E. Church. Claudette Johnson of Allen Temple A.M.E. Church in Marion, Ind., was superb as mistress of ceremonies. Joe Herring, Providence A.M.E. Church of Indianapolis, participated as chaplain; Willie Gholston, Sr., former state president and currently first vice president of the Fourth District Lay Organization, gave the welcome. Gholston is a member of the St. John A.M.E. Church, Indianapolis. The music was rendered by Rev. Gerry Moore, pastor of Bethel A.M.E. Church, Muncie, Ind. Rev. Moore's baritone voice was at its best, thrilling all. Also part of the music presentation was a marvelous spiritual moving solo by Katrina Gilbert of Bethel A.M.E. Church, Plainfield, Ind. This was allowed by renditions from the Indiana Lay Male Chorus under the direction of Landy Williams, Allen Chapel A.M.E. Church, Indianapolis. This chorus has nearly 100 members statewide who all sing a cappella, the old gospel and spiritual songs dating back more than 100 years.

A reading was presented by Willicin Gholston, a high school student and member of St. John A.M.E. Church, Indianapolis. Gholston chose a work by Langston Hughes, titled "The Freedom Plow." Her recitation was brilliant and dramatic, once again reminding us of the price paid by both Black and white Americans for the freedom we enjoy today.

Herbert S. Swarn, state president, then presented the "Lay Person of the Year Award" to Wanda Davis, First A.M.E. Church, Gary, Ind. This award was from the Indiana Conference. Davis also won a similar honor from the Fourth District. Swarn and all who worked so hard on the banquet are to be commended for pulling things together out of chaos. It was a beautiful affair.

Other events of note are the homecoming at Old Beech A.M.E. Church, located east and south of Carthage, Ind. It was organized in 1832 and was the beginning of African Methodism in Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, and Canada now known as the Fourth Episcopal District. The homecoming is Sunday, Aug. 28. The afternoon service begins at 3:30 p.m. Rev. Ron Norris, pastor of Bethel A.M.E. Church in Richmond, Ind., will be the speaker along with his church in attendance. The original building and church pews are still preserved and used. The Lay Male Chorus will be singing.

Also of note is the State Lay Project known as the "Community Birthday Calendar." The money raised from this effort will go for scholarships and general operating expenses. The deadline for all materials is Sept. 1.

Rev. William L. Gary, host pastor at St. James A.M.E. Church in Elkhart, Ind., has done a wonderful job with this church dedicated to God.

CONVENTION

draft of the teaching in early August. It will be officially presented and debated Aug. 24.

Meeting concurrently with the general convention will be the 41st Triennial convention of the Episcopal Church Women, which is expected to bring some 4,000 delegates and guests to the event.

Highlighting the ECW meeting will be an historic joint session with the general convention, a panel discussion on sexism, "A Vision of Wholeness, Overcoming Sexism." Panelists will include the Rev. Carmen Guerro, the Rt. Rev. Robert Johnson, Ms. Ginny Doctor, the Hon. Byron Rushing and the Rev. Alison Cheek. Bishop Jane Dixon of the Diocese of Washington will preach at the opening service.

The general convention will also be addressed during three evening forums by Archbishop Desmond Tutu, Children's Defense Fund President Marian Wright Edelman and noted theologian and author Henri Nouwen.

The 12-day convention, which is Indianapolis' second largest of this year, is expected to bring more than $20 million into the city's economy. More than 1,000 volunteers have been recruited from all over the state to help extend Hoosier hospitality to the delegates.

Among the highlights will be the convention worship service on Sunday, Aug. 28, when congregations from all over the state will gather the delegations in the Hoosier Dome for an 11 a.m. Holy communion service, celebrated by the church's presiding bishop, the Most Rev. Edmond L. Brownin. A massed choir of more than 500 will sing and special music has been commissioned for the event. The service will celebrate women's ministries in the church.

"In all of Christendom, no faith affords its members more intellectual freedom than the Episcopal Church," wrote a Virginian priest. "The 71st general convention is our triennial struggle to live up to the responsibility our intellectual freedom, and our Lord, demand."

New Body Products to stress education in summit

Recorder Wire Report

New Body Products announced it will sponsor a National Educational Summit Sept. 2-4 at the Eden Resort in Eden, Ariz.

The purpose is to discuss expanding Black churches community involvement to that of multi-faceted Educational Centers, which would accommodate instruction in topics such as computer literacy, construction, agriculture, mid-wifery, entrepreneurship, African history, accounting, law and natural health, etc.

Education for African-Americans is in a "state of emergency," says Dr. Paul Goss, president of New Body Products. "The government has proven time and time again that they do not and will not provide quality education for African-Americans! We have no choice but to quickly organize and teach ourselves by establishing a 'Community University Network,' the foundation of which should be the Black church."

The itinerary will include healthy cuisine, educational and health seminars, plus outdoor activities such as hiking and mountain climbing.

Food and accommodations at Eden Resort will be sponsored by New Body Productions. For more information call 1-800-638-HERBS.

All African-American ministers and religious leaders are invited to attend.

Clothing store is a dream come true

By ANNETTE L. ANDERSON
Staff Writer

Two months ago a dream was realized for a young woman, one that changed her life.

Pia Jones opened her own shop, Marie's Boutique, 820 E. Westfield Blvd., last June, and says it was something she has always longed for.

"I've always wanted my own clothing store," Jones said. "My parents found this place for me, and thought it would be ideal because of its location. I saw it, liked it and I got it.

"It allows me to be self-sufficient, and I have the freedom to choose the style of merchandise not only that I like, but also what I think others will enjoy."

Prior to opening her shop, Jones attended Indiana University and IUPUI, earning a degree in psychology.

When asked why she ventured into the clothing business rather than psychology, Jones said: "I feel I've used aspects of my degree in my association with customers and retailers. I didn't feel I needed a degree in fashion, because I'm very knowledgeable in that area."

Jones attends style shows in New York to hand-pick merchandise to sale in her shop.

"I carry a lot of merchandise shown in major department and speciality stores in New York," Jones said. "The majority of what I have cannot be found anywhere else in the city. My merchandise is also very moderately priced."

Jones' efforts are evident to one of her many customers.

"I like her clothes a lot," said Ann Whitfield. "I'm a very earthy person so I like more comfort than style, and I can always find what I want there. Her clothes are the type that never really go out of style."

"She's (Jones) very business-like and polite. She's very professional, and her store is always very professionally decorated. The simplicity of her store makes it real nice."

Jones said she is just as appreciative of her customers.

"My customers are very excited for me, and about the business," Jones said. "They've given me a lot of helpful ideas along the way."

Jones also feels the same way about some other very special people in her life, her parents.

"They are really wonderful, and I really appreciate all the help and patience they have extended to me with my store and life itself," Jones said.

When asked what her major goal is, Jones replied: "I would just love to be very successful and expand."

GMAC Mortgage Introduces Affordable Mortgage Program

Recorder Wire Report

Buyers shopping for an adjustable rate mortgage can now finance up to 95 percent of the property's value with GMAC Mortgage's new First Step Mortgage. First Step, which was introduced recently, is an affordable approach to home ownership. It requires less down payment than traditional adjustable rate mortgages — qualified borrowers can put down as little as 5 percent and can select an option which allows them to close with zero points.

But the biggest feature may be the lower caps of 1 percent annually and 5 percent lifetime. Caps on adjustable rate mortgages prevent significant rate and payment increases, and are traditionally 2 percent annually and 6 percent lifetime. With First Step, however, the mortgage rate cannot adjust upward more than 1 percent per year or 5 percent over the life of the loan.

Traditionally first time buyers have selected fixed rate programs, but First Step allows them another choice. But First Step is not only for first time buyers. It is for anyone who does not have much available cash or equity for a down payment.

"The introduction of this program is one of many affordable housing initiatives GMAC Mortgage is pursuing," says Mark Korell, president and chief executive officer of the GMAC Mortgage Group. "Housing impact teams are being created throughout the United States to target affordable housing programs for low and moderate income borrowers. This approach is consistent with our mission of providing Leadership in Housing America."

GMAC Mortgage is an indirect wholly-owned subsidiary of General Motors Acceptance Corp. They are one of the nation's leading mortgage bankers with a residential and commercial loan servicing portfolio in excess of $35 billion and a nationwide network of 125 offices.

Can you name a federal government program that generates its own income and helps low-, moderate- and middle-income people achieve the dream of home ownership? If you're one of the millions of Americans who have used the Federal Housing Administration mortgage program, you know how valuable this government program

On the Business Scene

The Board of Directors of the Indiana Federal Community Defenders, Inc., recently announced the appointment of William E. Marsh as executive director of the corporation. The Federal Community Defender is charged with the legal representation of indigent defendants in the U.S. District Court, Southern District of Indiana. The appointment is effective immediately.

The task of the Community Defender is to provide aggressive and effective legal representation to individuals accused of federal offenses, under investigation for federal criminal violations or appealing a federal conviction or sentence, who upon request for appointment of counsel are determined by the U.S. District Court to be financially unable to afford private counsel.

Further: the office provides representation to federal Habeas Corpus litigants, upon a finding by the court that appointment of counsel is appropriate.

Marsh currently serves as a full-time Professor of Law at the Indiana University School of Law at Indianapolis. In this capacity he developed and directed the Civil Practice Clinic from 1982 through 1990. In addition to class-room assignments Marsh currently supervises the Criminal Defense Clinic. The clinic allows students, certified by the Indiana Supreme Court, and under close supervision by their professors, to represent indigent clients charged with Class "C" and "D" felonies in the Municipal Court of Marion County.

For more than 20 years Marsh has engaged in private practice in the areas of civil rights litigation and criminal defense. He served as lead counsel in four class-action suits challenging prison or jail conditions including those at the Indiana Reformatory and the Marion County Jail. He served as the part-time director of litigation for the Legal Services Organization from 1976 until the appointment of a full time director. He currently acts as a litigation consultant for the I.S.O. In 1978 he served as managing attorney, the first Legal Services branch office in Indiana; a store front office in Muncie, Ind.

A native of Nebraska, he received his B.S. and J. D. degrees from the state university at Lincoln. He served as editor-in-chief of the Nebraska Law Review during 1967-68.

Marsh is the recipient of a number of awards including the Robert Risk Award from the Indiana Civil Liberties Union (1983); Equality Recognition Award from the Equal Opportunity Advisory Board of the City of Indianapolis (1987); Roy Wilkins Award presented by the Indianapolis Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (1992); and the Isadore Feibleman "Man of the Year" Award for public service presented by the Indianapolis Chapter of B'Nai B'Rith in 1992.

can be in assisting first-time buyers who are unable to qualify for privately insured financing.

But did you know that proposals now under consideration by Congress can expand the program's reach and make it easier to use?

"The Federal Housing Administration represents an excellent route first-time buyers can take to achieve home ownership. FHA's single-family mortgage insurance program typically serves borrowers who have lower incomes, make smaller down payments and purchase less expensive homes than buyers using private mortgage insurance," explains John Wolfe, president of the Metropolitan Indianapolis Board of Realtors.

Federal Housing Administration is a key financing tool for entry-level buyers, because it has lower down payment requirements and more lenient loan qualification requirements than most forms of conventional financing, he explains.

Federal Housing Administration insured more than one million mortgages in 1993, including those for 400,000 first time buyers, according to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. "The program is solid, viable and necessary. But it could be made even better," says Wolfe.

Metropolitan Indianapolis Board of Realtors, along with the National Association of Realtors, is urging that reasonable and responsible changes be made to FHA to expand the program's reach and make it easier to use. Among the proposals being advocated are:

- An increase in the current FHA base insurance limit, which currently is $67,500; and an increase in the maximum mortgage limit, which currently is $151,725. Raising the base and the maximum limit would enable more buyers to FHA in more areas. These adjustments would allow the program's insurance coverage to more accurately reflect increases in home prices that have occurred in markets across the nation.

- Simplification of the down payment process and streamlining the mortgage premium structure. These important changes will make qualification for FHA financing less cumbersome and more "user-friendly" for both buyers and lenders.

- Establishment of a program for risk-sharing of insured mortgages between FHA and other entities, such as state housing finance agencies. FHA credit enhancement would be made available through the risk-sharing arrangements in connection with loans that qualify under the state program guidelines, but which exceed FHA mortgage insurance limits.

- Creation of a no-down payment program targeted to low-income buyers in urban renewal areas.

"As Congress considers housing legislation this year, it is important that FHA's role as a crucial source of mortgage finance be continually strengthened. Potential home buyers deserve nothing less," says Wolfe. "FHA's good service can be improved, and Realtors are committed to making that happen."

times greater than the junk bond market at its highest point. But, most amazingly, that only includes the mortgages held by private sellers! In 1992, 34 percent of all real estate sales had seller financing as part of the purchase price.

Why do so many people get left "holding the bag?" When a person buys a house, there are two ways they can arrange financing: a conventional "bank" loan or seller financing. Let's look at a typical case. Mary has a house for sale. It is priced at $100,000. She has a mortgage of $50,000. Bill wants to buy Mary's house. He sold a house in another location when he quit his job and decided to pursue his dream of going into business for himself. Since he is now self-employed, he can only qualify for a bank loan of $50,000. However, he can put down $30,000 in cash (from the sale of his former house), which comes to $10,000. He lacks $20,000 of being able to buy Mary's house. Bill asks Mary if she would carry back a $20,000 second mortgage. Mary agrees. Mary now has a monthly payment stream of the cash she would have preferred. She has been left "holding the bag."

Now the Mary's of this world can have a choice. A new business, Custom Funding (513-860-1512), exists to help people like Mary get what they probably wanted in the first place — Cash. Mike Critchfield, owner of Custom Funding and a Certified Mortgage Investor, specializes in customizing deals to meet the needs of his clients. He also works closely with Realtors to show them how they can sell more real estate, especially in poor markets.

The slogan of my company is "where we turn dreams into reality", Mike Critchfield said, and it is obvious in talking to him that he really does enjoy being able to help people quickly convert those payment streams into cash so that they can live their dreams. For this "Mary", it was a dream cruise vacation. What will it be for you? Now you don't have to be left "holding the bag."

Indianapolis business details its strategies in new book

Local businesses can learn strategies for success from nationally recognized companies—including an Indianapolis firm—in Real-World Lessons For America's Small Businesses, 1994.

The book is published as part of The Blue Chip Enterprise Initiative—The Initiative is an award and information sharing program sponsored by Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, and Nations Business magazine. The BCEI seeks out, learns from and recognizes businesses that have demonstrated exceptional management of key resources and shares their strategies for success through "Real-World Lessons For America's Small Businesses." This year's book features four Indiana businesses.

There are some key similarities among the challenges and solutions faced by the American small businesses cited in the book. Analysis of these 200 "Blue Chip Enterprises" reveals that managing cash flow, raising capital and assessing industry trends were the toughest issues faced by the designees.

Beverly Middaugh's advertising specialties business, Bright Ideas In Broad Ripple Inc., started in her Indianapolis living room in 1983. Beverly incorporated new approaches to the business, such as a showroom for sample products and the idea of treating each customer, colleague and supplier as a friend. These ideas worked and today Bright Ideas In Broad Ripple, Inc. enjoys a wide client base and $2.9 million in sales.

Indianapolis native, Jim Carpenter, turned his pastime into a very profitable business. In 1981, Jim's store, Wild Birds Unlimited, opened offering supplies for backyard bird-watching and bird-feeding. Sales were decent but franchise opportunities really took off; last year, Jim's franchisee sales totaled $36 million at 157 franchised stores.

The Computer Center of Jasper, IN has seen its share of changes since 1979. Owner Brenda Stallions split with her original partner as sales slumped and staff came and went. Brenda discovered that musicians made terrific sales people because they are equally at home "on-stage" in front of customers or wiring complex sound and recording systems. Today, The Computer Center's band of networking specialists are harmonizing with $4 million in sales.

Squire Boone Caverns, Inc. of Corydon, IN, had spectacular caverns, underground streams and waterfalls, and dazzling rock formations; what it didn't have was location. In an effort to increase profitability, founder Fred Conway put his son, Rick, in charge. Since Rick could not move the caverns, he brought the caverns to the people in the form of rock candy and rock and mineral collectibles. Today, Squire Boone Caverns ships $6 million worth of rock candy and minerals across the country.

"Small businesses are the mainstay of the Indianapolis economy," said Paul DeCoursey, head of the Indianapolis Agency of Connecticut Mutual. "The Blue Chip Enterprise Initiative supports those businesses, not only by recognizing them, but also by sharing success stories from similar businesses across the country."

This year, the number one concern for small businesses was cash flow, as reported by 48 percent—or 95 companies—of the 200 designees. Thirty-six percent of all designees cited keeping up with industry trends as a challenge. Ranked third was a lack of capital, as evidenced by 67 companies, or 34 percent.

Surprisingly, this year's Blue Chip Enterprises did not rely on financial resources as their primary solution. Instead, 78 percent of the 200 designees used human resources to turn their businesses around. The other resources employed were: marketing (68 percent), financial (45 percent), technological (42 percent), quality assurance (37 percent) and working with their communities (18 percent).

Other challenges ranking high among the Blue Chip Enterprises were management and personnel issues. Of the 181 designees that dealt with management issues, 27 percent cited problems with the company's management, staff or sales structure. Within the personnel issues category, 34 percent of the 152 firms named employee motivation as a key challenge in achieving corporate success. However, finding people to work was not a problem. Only two percent of the 200 designees cited a shortage of available labor.

All 200 Blue Chip Enterprise Initiative case histories are available in book and video formats. The book and video are designed to aid other small-business owners by sharing problems and solutions. The challenges range from supplier/vendor loss and the lack of technology to succession planning and employee retention. The book, Real-World Lessons For America's Small Businesses, 1994, is available now. The first volume in the video library is due out later this year. This library contains case histories of approximately 50 of the most exemplary companies nationwide. This "how-to" information pertains to small businesses across all industries. Both the book and the videos can be obtained through the Indianapolis Agency of Connecticut Mutual, by calling 317-634-2020.

Companies wishing to vie for the 1994 Blue Chip Enterprise Award can also contact the Indianapolis Agency or call 1-800-FOR-BCEI for an application and complete information. The forms are available now. Any for-profit company with between five and 300 employees that has been in continuous operation for at least three years may apply. There is no cost to participate. All applications must be received by November 18, 1994. Any business submitting an application will receive a free copy of the book and video library.

GIBA honors Williams for his record-setting achievements

By STEPHEN B. JOHNSON
Staff Writer

For some people a nice family or social outing may consist of spending countless hours bowling trying to outscore their opponent. But for Gaston Williams it is more than just an evening at a local alley, it is a way of life.

Williams will be inducted into The Greater Indianapolis Bowlers Association's Hall of Fame in November for his dedication to the game of bowling.

Williams was born in Drew, Miss., and at age five, his family moved to Indianapolis. He is a product of the Indianapolis Public Schools system. He attended Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis for two years as an English major.

At age 15, he joined the Junior Bowling Program at Strum Bowling Lanes. His first three years, Williams averaged 99, 139 and 169 respectively. He received the Most Improved Bowler Award his second and third year. In his third year he received a High Game Award of 266 and a High Series Award of 595.

"Like most kids in our neighborhood, I played baseball. It wasn't until my friend Gregory Posley interested in bowling," Williams said.

Williams was so fascinated with the game that he practiced every chance he could and worked long hours to improve his game.

In September of 1969, he joined the adult bowling league at 421 and another one at the Bowl-O-Mat.

His accomplishments range from league championships, tournament titles (city, state and national titles), honor scores and other various individual and team awards.

In 1972, Williams was the first and only African-

"Chasing the Dream"

Tollis Robbins Production and Turner Broadcasting Systems are in the process of making a film, "Chasing the Dream," which will be a documentary about the life of Henry "Hank" Aaron. The film is scheduled to be released next spring.

Turner Broadcasting is looking for people who remembered when Aaron played for the Indianapolis Clowns as well as rare footage in the form of home movies, and various other team memorabilia.

Any information, articles of clothing or team logos and film footage submitted in making the film will be returned to the individual at the conclusion of the film.

For additional information on where to send your material or any unanswered questions you may have, please contact Debbie Jones at (818) 766-5004 or Stephen B. Johnson at (317) 924-5143.

American male ever to win the prestigious Meadows Classic Tournament scoring 692 singles and 1,957 for all events.

In 1973, Williams was the first and only African-American male in Indianapolis to win the City All Events title, bowling 1,972, the biggest score in 34 years.

In August of that year, he was the first Black man in the nation to bowl an 800 series scoring 245, 279, 279 for a total of 803.

During the 1979-80 season, he led Indianapolis to its first league championship in 25 years in the Tri-State Traveling League, which is bowled in Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana.

Williams was also the first bowler to average more than 200 in the league, 201 for 114 games. He also won the triple crown in that league for the most 200 games, 58, and 600 series games, 22, averaging 201 per game.

Two years later he broke his own record by averaging 203 as the leader of the Indy Fair Lanes Team that won the Traveling League Championship Title. His average is the highest in the 25 year history of the league.

Despite his accomplishments to the game of bowling, Williams remembered how tough it was for African-Americans to be considered for membership in the major associations.

"In the 50s and 60s Blacks were not recognized by the major bowling associations, so they founded their own association called the Negro Bowling Association, NBA," Williams said. "Currently, over 80 percent of the African-American bowlers are members of the NBA and the American Bowling Congress, ABC, associations."

Others recognized the contributions Williams made to the sport of bowling, and why he should be named to the Bowlers Hall of Fame.

"Williams, by virtue of his many accomplishments has proven beyond a shadow of a doubt to be worthy of his induction into the Bowlers Hall of Fame, said Mark Schoch, assistant manager of Raceway Lanes. "His good sportsmanship and eagerness to help young children and inexperienced bowlers are other great attributes which make up his pleasant personality."

NFL Air-It-Out, a 4-on-4 flag football festival, is scheduled to take place Saturday and Sunday September 10 and 11 at Lawrence Park. (Recorder File Photo)

NFL flag football festival kicks off in Denver

Recorder Wire Report

Armchair quarterbacks, put down the remote control. NFL Air-It-Out, the official 4-on-4 flag football kicked off its 19-city national tour in Denver earlier this month.

NFL Air-It-Out is presented by Budweiser and Gatorade, and is designed for players of all ages and abilities. NFL Air-It-Out creates an opportunity for football fans to act out their dreams by using a 25 x 60-yard field, non-contact rules and a sophisticated, computerized seeding and scheduled process that matches players by age and ability.

NFL Air-It-Out tournaments feature simultaneous games of exciting flag football among more than 400 teams of up to five players each. Sites will feature an average of 30 25 x 60 fields, as well as the NFL's acclaimed traveling theme park, the NFL Experience On Tour, with several interactive football competitions and challenges.

On-site attractions will also include tentative NFL player and cheerleader appearances, food concessions, displays of the latest football gear and more.

The 1993 nine-city tour attracted an average of 475 squads, 2,375, and nearly 20,000 spectators per city.

NFL Air-It-Out offers male and female participants, ranging in age from eight to 80, an exciting way to live out their football fantasies.

"NFL Air-It-Out marries a variety of interactive activities into the ultimate football fantasy weekend," said Don Garber, vice president of special events business development. "The NFL Experience On Tour festivities provide participants and fans alike an opportunity to experience the fun of the NFL, our players and their local NFL teams."

This year's tour will tentatively culminate with a National Championship in Florida. A television special is scheduled to air in the 1995 preseason on ABC Sports.

The Indianapolis Colts bring NFL Air-It-Out to Indianapolis Saturday and Sunday Sept. 10 and 11 at Lawrence Park.

Indianapolis' NFL Air-It-Out registration deadline is Friday, Sept. 2. It guarantees each squad at least three games. Official NFL Air-It-Out entry forms are available at all Village Pantry locations or by calling the NFL Air-It-Out hotline at 317-NFL-BALL (635-2255).

NFL Air-It-Out, which benefits NFL charities, reinforces the weekend warrior concept of people getting involved with the game. "For the player or those who have lost their touch or never had one at all, NFL Air-It-Out is the perfect weekend football fantasy," said Garber. "Although the festival features competitions, spectators can both watch games and get involved in the interactive football challenges."

Student-athletes deserve a voice on campuses

By David Newton

They don't wear a ball and chain around their ankles, but sometimes they feel like they do. They don't work in the fields from dusk until dawn, but sometimes their days seem just as long.

They are not Black or white. They are not from any particular region of the country.

They are student-athletes.

Or, as South Carolina football player Anton Gunn likes to call them, "Slaves of the 90s."

Gunn isn't firing from the hip with another athletes-should-be-paid campaign, although he believes student-athletes should be compensated beyond their scholarships.

Gunn, co-chairman of the University of South Carolina's student-athletes committee, along with Michelle McCarthy of the women's swimming team, concerns go deeper than a monthly stipend for athletes who don't have money to do laundry.

He compares student-athletes to slaves because, he believes, their lives are dictated by their sport, just as slaves were dictated by their owners. Between practices, weight training, games, classes, study hall and meals, he says most athletes have little time to enjoy the true college experience.

The most recent NCAA survey available, 1987-88, found basketball and football players spend more time in their sport than they do preparing for and attending classes combined, and miss about two classes per week.

It also determined that basketball and football players spent 3.7 hours a week on activities outside their sport. Regular students spent 6.2 hours in activities outside their main extracurricular activity, in which they spent 20.4 hours a week.

At South Carolina, many student-athletes also are isolated from the rest of campus because the athletics dormitory, which will be eliminated in 1995 by the NCAA. The dorm is a 10 to 15 minute walk from the main campus.

McCarthy and other South Carolina athletes agree with Gunn that their college experience is limited by athletics, although they are less inclined to describe themselves as slaves.

"You read in the sports pages how people do on the field, but you never hear about athletes in the dorms," McCarthy said. "Most people see athletes as sports mechanisms. It's not really like we're individuals."

South Carolina, Southeastern Conference and NCAA administrators understand the growing concerns of student-athletes. That's why student-athlete committees such as the one at South Carolina are popping up across the country.

That's why the NCAA is creating more opportunities to give them a voice on national issues and has formed a special committee to review student-athletes welfare, access and equity.

That's why the 1995 NCAA Convention is entitled "Welfare of the Student-Athletes."

"It's a climate in the country, not just here," said Laurie Massa, South Carolina senior women's administrator. "And it's in a similar vein as gender equity is. It's the right thing to do. Ultimately, there's got to be a forum."

Massa is an advocate of student-athletes having more of a voice. She cited an issue that came up at a meeting concerning female athletes who had to walk across campus at 6 a.m. for drug testing.

"It wasn't a big deal, but it certainly was a concern," Massa said. "We made arrangements for transportation and took care of it. Things that we (administrators) never would think about can be resolved in a very short period of time."

But Massa is opposed to the idea the athletes are slaves to their sport.

"There is no time in your life where you're going to be able to do everything in your life that you want to do," she said. "What about those choices that will be made two years from now, when he wants to be the president of a corporation and his family has another idea about his time?"

"I would not say someone would describe that situation as being a slave to your family. It's a good thing to be in."

South Carolina football coach Brad Scott says athletes have more extra time today than they did five years ago because of NCAA legislation such as the 20-hour rule; an athlete can put only 20 hours a week into his or her sport, the mandatory day off and shorter spring practices.

Many athletes, however, go well beyond 20 hours a week working out on their own because they believe it's necessary or because coaches encourage it.

INSRA makes changes to attract more fans

Recorder Staff Report

The Indiana State Racquetball Association has announced its statewide tournament schedule for the 1994-95 season.

The schedule features 15 events this season in several locations throughout the state.

The INSRA has made several changes in its schedule from last season.

In an effort to draw more players per event, the association limited each racquetball club to hold a maximum of one sanctioned event per year, excluding the major championships and the Midwest Seniors/Masters.

The INSRA also put at least two weeks between each sanctioned event to give players a rest. To spread events throughout the state more evenly, no club-run sanctioned events will take place in the same part of the state on consecutive tournaments.

For the first time in many years, the INSRA State Doubles Championships will be played outside of Indianapolis.

The championship will be held Dec. 2-4 at the Fitness Barn in Valparaiso, Ind. The move was made at the request of club managers and players in the northern part of the state.

The turnout from the northwest part of the state is expected to increase substantially.

The event will move back to Indianapolis next year and is scheduled to move to a northern site again in two years.

changes: good or bad?

By Sarah Smith
Broad Ripple High School
Recorder Intern

Last year, former IPS superintendent Shirl E. Gilbert II, made many changes with his Select Schools program including the middle and high schools switching times, which turned many heads. This time last year, high school students were to be at school by 8:30 a.m. and out by 3:30 p.m., an hour later than the middle schools. This year is different, both middle and high school students have to be at school by 7:30 a.m. and out by 2:30 p.m.

Tori Scrivener, an eighth grader at Crispus Attucks Middle School said, "This time thing really ain't no thing to me because I had to do it last year."

Jessica McCollough, also an eighth grader at Crispus Attucks Middle School feels differently.

"I don't like waking up early because I just don't feel like getting up," McCollough said. "The good thing about it is we get out at 2:30, and that gives me more time to do homework and other things."

The middle school students' time really didn't have any changes but the high school students have made a big change. The high school students have to be at school by 7:30 a.m., an hour earlier than last year. Some students are satisfied with the change but some aren't.

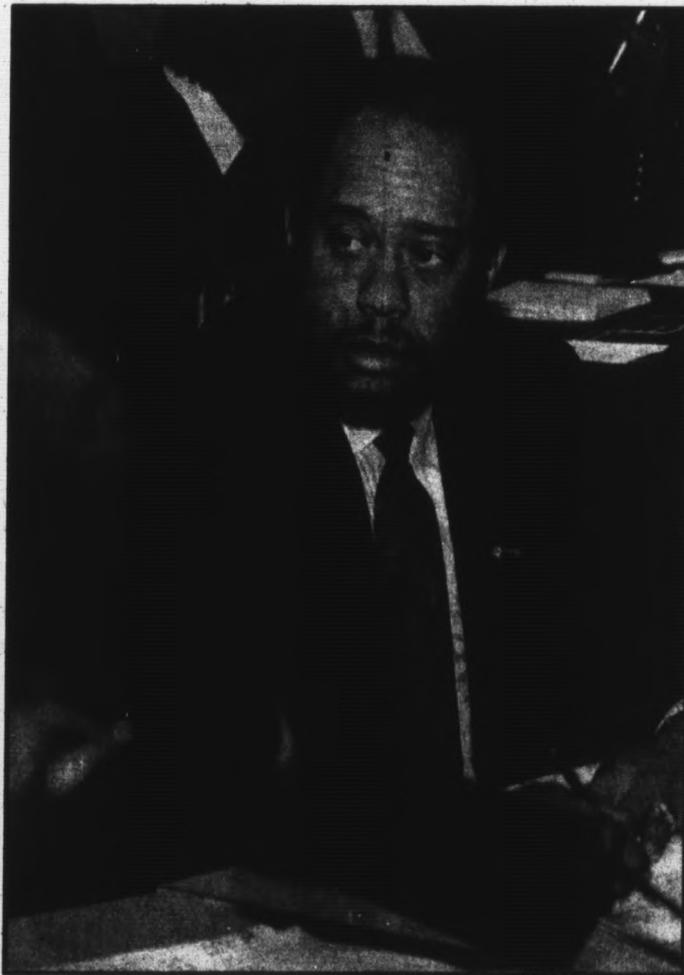

"I liked it better last year when we didn't have to be on the bus stop so early because when winter comes, I don't want to be on the bus stop in the dark," said Dawn Brown, 16, of Emmerich Manual High School. "Getting out at 2:30 is alright 'cause it gives me more time to do some things."

With the high schools getting out before the elementary schools it gives the working parents a little less worry about their younger children being home by themselves.

Sharon Maxey, a mother of a Broad Ripple High School student said, "I feel that it's good that my child is going to school early so she can go ahead and get the day over. The younger children shouldn't be out on the bus stop early anyway, with winter coming up."

Now, most of the high school students are trying to get jobs so they can have money. So getting out of school early gives them the chance to have more time to get to their jobs and do homework. The only question that comes to mind is about the buses getting there on time.

a sudden change: hope for the best

commentary

By Robert Marshall
St. Andrew
Recorder Intern

This school year many students and parents are deciding to put their child in a different school. There are many changes in the Indianapolis Public School system this year and parents are panicking and running. Some have decided to go to Catholic schools.

"A lot of parents chose the Catholic schools because of the discipline program," said Theresa Lopez, a parochial school secretary who enrolls the new students. "The majority of the students came from public schools."

Lopez is in the administration office and helps with determining the tuition.

Vicky Thomas, an account manager who's child is entering a Catholic school said she made the change because she feels Catholic schools have a better curriculum with an emphasis on Black history and most importantly, religion.

With the new changes in the IPS school board — no Dr. Shirl E. Gilbert II, and the fact that IPS does not teach religion — people are headed to Catholic elementary and middle schools. The high schools are basically staying the same because of the fact they have to wear uniforms. For some people the tuition was a problem but thanks to programs like C.H.O.I.C.E. the burden is not as heavy. Roffana Williams, who's child came from St. Bridget's believes the benefits of Catholic schools include "the academic challenge, the schools emphasis on African-American history and the small classes which I believe helps push the children and gives them more one on one experiences." Williams later went to say "the school I am sending my child to cost more but I am willing to make that sacrifice for my child."

Buses are starting their engines and are ready to go out but are the students ready to start their minds to ticking for the new school year?

"Time to go to bed cut those lights out so you can get up for school," said Ollie Johnson, a mother. "Around this time of year I try to get my children to get plenty of rest for that school week ahead."

Getting prepared for school involves making plenty of changes and that is hard when you are used to staying up late, hanging out all night and having lots of fun, added Johnson.

"It's pretty hard when I'm so used to partying with my boys but I know that I have to get ready to get back on track," said

Michael Johnson, 15.

This is a common phenomenon, according to many students.

"My mom is always trying to make me eat good food and we have been shopping for school clothes since early July," said Jessica Rayner, 15 about preparing for schools.

The lockers are being distributed and classes are being given and teachers are picking out lessons they think they would enjoy teaching.

"The school I plan on attending has a lot of opportunities for me, especially since I am pregnant and can get the attention that I need and want" said Joanne Williams, 16, who will be attending Arsenal Technical High School.

Parents are getting ready as well as their kids.

"I love my kids and want the best for them that's why I try to preach to them that their minds are important and they need to go to school," said Tammy Willuoby.

marc plummer: coming up in church...

By Che Gupton
Pike High School
Recorder Intern

Marc Plummer, Sr., 37, is fulfilling what many would call spirit inspiration. His devotion to God has led him to realize the dream he has had since he was a teenager — a gospel music producer.

Plummer got involved in producing by "coming up in church, being around a musical family...having an older brother who wrote songs with Tom Jones," he said.

Plummer was bitten by the music bug while a member of the church choir which he also directed at times.

Plummer has worked with Denise Teshner, Lamar Campbell at left, Rodnie Bryant and The Christian Community Mass Choir, right.

When asked what messages he wants to give through his music, he said he wants his music to inspire people get to out of situations they once thought were impossible by bringing words of the Bible to them.

Plummer's first professional music endeavor was with a group called Deliverance in the mid 1980s which had hits such as "Only Jesus" and "Keep on Praying."

Plummer has worked with Denise Teshner, Lamar Campbell, Rodnie Bryant and several choirs.

His next step was joining a group called "One Accord." This led to Plummer hooking up with Brian Barbour. These two in the near future will start off Ken Johnson (Chaplin for the Indianapolis Colts), a young, local male group, and several other groups and choirs based in gospel.

Plummer said he cherishes inspiration by writing it down and he wants to professionalize that inspiration.

A word of advice for budding gospel artists.

"Don't settle for second best," said Plummer. "because God deserves the best."

With so many other genres of music such as Rap and R&B, Plummer said he will stick to gospel.

"Songs that speak not love of a woman but love of God and life is what I would write," he said.

And he hopes to write for the rest of his life as long as God sends him inspiration.

Presently Plummer is pastor of Greater Faith Apostolic Church.

I love my girlfriend for who she is and not her race

By Adrian Anderson
Stonybrook Junior High
Recorder Intern

Black and white — are they made to mix? Some people feel different about interracial relationships. Many think that one race should stick with their own. Others think that it is a free country and they should be able to be in a relationship with anyone and any race they choose.

"I love my girlfriend for who she is and not her race," said Michael Brooks a Black male in an interracial relationship.

The opinion of others should not always matter, but some people's family members cannot always accept the situation.

"My mother will never take my boyfriend to the side and accept him for who he is and not his race," said Kendra Fields a white female in an interracial relationship.

Not all parents feel this way though. Some try to deal with it and support it.

"My son is in an interracial relationship and I feel that it's all good," said Kenneth Lewis, Sr.

Out on the town and enjoying the city with a mate of a different race can get a few stares.

"I'm tired of people staring at me when my girlfriend and I are at the mall," said Brooks.

With all of the added problems interracial couples have to handle, is it worth it?

"I think God put us on this earth to interact with each other so race does not matter, it's just a color," said Anne Meridith, a Black female in an interracial relationship.

Some men believe Black women should be worshipped.

"The average Black female is like a Nubian princess," said Jason Clark, an African American male.

Marchelle Sanders summed it up.

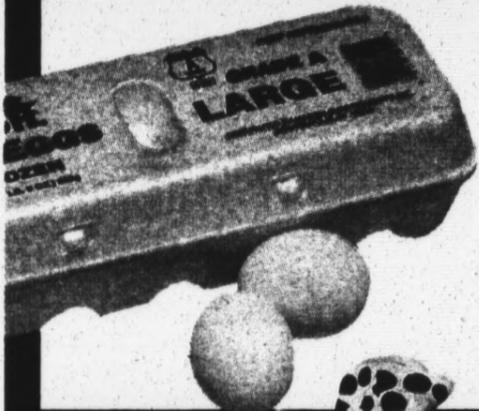

"We all have another race inside of us, none of us is a pure African or European descendant," said Sanders. "So you are already having an interracial relationship even with another Black or white person."
