It's Coca-Cola Circle City Classic time

By AMOS BROWN III

Welcome to the 15th Coca-Cola Circle City Classic! Indianapolis' biggest tourism weekend of the Fall will be filling up the city's hotels and bringing thousands downtown for a whirlwind week-end of events and activities spotlighting education, athletics and economic viability.

Thronges of students, alumni and fans of Washington based Howard University and Daytona Beach based Bethune Cookman College are joined by thousands of others from across the Midwest, the South and the nation. Classic week-end is as crowded as any other major convention or sports event that Indianapolis hosts.

In its fifteen years, the Coca-Cola Circle City Classic has become as important an economic engine to Indianapolis as the Indianapolis 500 and the growing Brickyard 400. A study commissioned this year by the nonprofit Indiana Sports Corporation documented that 1997's Coca-

Cola Circle City Classic produced an economic impact to Indianapolis of $21.3 million dollars. That's just $3.6 million less than last year's NCAA Men's Basketball Final Four held here.

Tom Joyner's Morning Show to visit Indy

The Tom Joyner Morning Show will officially kick off activities surrounding the 15th Annual Coca-Cola Circle City Classic. The nationally broadcast radio program, heard locally on the new KISS 106.7FM, will originate from the Madame Walker Theater, Fri., Oct. 2 between 5 a.m. and 9 a.m.

Joyner will also serve as Co-Grand Marshall of the 15th Annual Coca-Cola Circle City Classic Parade, Sat., Oct. 3.

All the participants on the Tom Joyner Morning Show will be here for the broadcast: newswoman Sybil Wilks and comedians J. Anthony Brown, George Wallace, Myra J. and Mia Dupree. Also on board will be Hoosier-born Tavis Smiley, whose commentaries on the Joyner program focus national attention on issues of concern to African Americans.

It's Joyner's second Indianapolis broadcast. He broadcasts live from the 1996 Indiana Black Expo. But it's Joyner's first visit to the Classic. KISS 106.7FM Program Director, Geno Shelton, who triumphantly returned to his afternoon radio program last week, is pleased that Joyner is returning to the city.

"Indianapolis has a growing love affair with Tom Joyner," remarked Shelton. "KISS 106.7 is happy that Tom is bringing his ABC Radio broadcast to Indianapolis, and that for the first time in history, the Walker Theater will host a national broadcast."

There will be live music during the Joyner Show at the Walker Theater on Oct. 2. Plenty of special surprises are planned as well.

"The community had better get there early," said Shelton. "We're planning lots of prizes and surprises for early birds. We want to pack the Walker Theater for Joyner, Sybil, J. Anthony Brown, George Wallace, Tavis Smiley and the other members of the Tom Joyner Morning Show Family."

Admission and parking are free. Doors will open at 4:30 a.m. The broadcast begins at 5 a.m. and ends at 9 a.m. The Classic Parade, with Tom Joyner as Co-Grand Marshall, takes place Sat., Oct. 3, at 10:45 a.m. on Pennsylvania, Ohio and Meridian Streets downtown.

One million dollars' worth of prizes, including a college education, are up for grabs. To help your child get a college education, contact the Indianapolis Black Alumni Council, Inc. (IBAC) and the Circle City Classic Organizing

Bradley was L.A.'s first Black Mayor

By DEBORAH HASTINGS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In 1940, when Tom Bradley became a Los Angeles police officer, he wasn't allowed to ride in the same patrol car as his white colleague.

Thirty-three years later, the quiet Texas sharecropper's son shattered racial barriers, becoming the first black mayor of Los Angeles and launching a 20-year tenure as its symbol of maturation into a world-class city.

Bradley, who suffered a stroke two years ago, died Tuesday after a heart attack at Kaiser Permanente Hospital in Los Angeles. He was 80.

A man of quiet determination, Bradley spent a lifetime bridging

Goldsmith may seek third term

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indianapolis Mayor Stephen Goldsmith said he is considering seeking a third term in office next year, and his supporters are circulating a letter soliciting campaign contributions.

Such a run would break a pledge Goldsmith made nearly eight years ago that he would serve no more than two terms as the chief executive of the state's largest city.

Goldsmith, the unsuccessful 1996 Republican nominee for governor, said Wednesday he'll decide on seeking a third term as mayor after the November elections.

Book sparks debate on 'Environmental Racism'

By DANIELLE KNIGHT

WASHINGTON (IPS) — The claims made in "The Promise and Peril of Environmental Justice," a book by Christopher H. Foreman, are angering environmental and social justice organizations who have rallied for years against the "environmental racism" that affects poor communities and minorities. These groups live in areas often targeted as sites for toxic waste facilities or factories that emit hazardous chemicals. According to Foreman, a researcher at the Brookings Institution, "Poverty, unemployment, poor diet and smoking often pose a more dangerous risk to these communities than the potential hazards of industrial pollution. The problem with the environmental justice movement is its definition of the pressing problems facing these communities," Foreman says. "Because a harmful industry is often the easiest thing to get a community to rally against, other more concrete and provable risks to a community like unemployment and poverty are sidelined." Lois Gibbs, director of the Center for Health, Environment and Justice, said "Envi-

1998 marks the 15th Anniversary of the Classic, which began out of a desire to fill a new domed stadium that wasn't supposed to have a football team. In 1983, Indianapolis was building a new domed stadium and expanded convention center space. Then Mayor William Hudnut and city leaders were afraid the new dome would sit empty because it would be years before Indianapolis could gain an NFL expansion team.

Indiana Black Expo President Charles Williams approached Mayor Hudnut and Sandy Knapp, then President of the Indiana Sports Corporation, with an idea. Why not stage a Black College football classic in the new Dome? Other football events were being planned for the new domed stadium—why not this?

The named Classic Executive Coordinator Joe Slash was Deputy Mayor in the Hudnut Administration. He remembers discussions that a Black College game in Indianapolis' new dome should "be modeled after the Bayou Classic in New Orleans (the annual Black College football game in the Superdome)."

Officials of Black Expo and the Sports Corporation formed a committee of volunteers, chaired by civic leaders Tom Binford and Dr. Frank Lloyd, to make the dream of a Black college football game and classic in Indianapolis a reality.

The Committee's goal was not only to create an event for the new domed stadium but also to demonstrate the economic strength of African Americans, showcase the importance of education and the viability of Historically Black Colleges and Universities and create annual scholarships from the event's proceeds.

Volunteers were recruited, plans made and the word spread throughout the Midwest of a new attempt to create a Black College classic. Grambling and Mississippi Valley State accepted the call and agreed to move their regularly scheduled game to Indianapolis, and on October 13, 1984, the Circle City Classic was born, attracting more than 45,000 to the city's new Hoosier Dome. Seven years later, the Classic experienced the first of seven consecutive 61,000-seat sellouts.

Today, the Coca-Cola Circle City Classic is the collaborative effort of some 2,000 energetic volunteers who create an exciting event that publicizes and encourages education in the community.

According to Joe Slash, the Classic has been successful because, "The community's energies and cooperation have made it the African American community's proudest event, second only to Indiana Black Expo's Summer celebration."

"Initial reaction to the Classic that first year was favorable," recalls Slash. "We thought of the Classic in similar terms as the Bayou Classic in New Orleans with a game, parade and some satellite events."

Slash adds, "What we didn't foresee was that the Classic could grow into a festival event. The creative juices of this community took a football game and made it into a major festival event." It's an event that Slash says has earned the respect of the White business community.

The Classic's success is fueled not just by the game but also by several allied events that have themselves become among the country's largest.

Thursday's Black College Fair was already a popular event before the Classic came along. But in the 15 years that it has kicked off Classic Weekend, the Black College Fair has grown into the nation's largest. For area students, the College Fair is meaningful and lucrative.

According to Slash, "Over a million dollars in Presidential and other academic scholarships will be offered by the colleges participating in the Classic's Black College Fair. At one historically Black institution, a Presidential Scholarship brings a $50,000 full-ride scholarship and a guarantee of employment after graduation!"

Friday night's Classic Gala brings together a diverse group of successful Blacks and Whites in a positive social setting. The Gala also serves as a recruiting tool for Indianapolis businesses, says Lester McKinney, Director of Special Sales for the Indiana Convention and Visitors Association.

"Many companies use the Classic Gala, along with the Classic, as a recruiting tool," McKinney revealed. "When potential African American employees see the energies here that can create a successful event like the Classic, it helps cement their decision to relocate here."

There's the Classic Parade this Saturday morning in downtown Indianapolis. Tom Joyner of the national Tom Joyner Morning Show (heard on KISS106.7FM locally) will be featured along with The Young and the Restless actor Shamar Moore, Richard Roundtree of Shaft, singer Howard Hewitt and BET's Tavis Smiley.

Marching along with more than 40 floats, balloons, marching units and bands from across the Midwest and the bands of Howard and Bethune-Cookman will be Governor and First Lady Frank and Judy O'Bannon, Mayor Steve Goldsmith, Congresswoman Julia Carson, Sheriff Jack Cottey, IPD Chief Michael Zunk and Recorder Columnist and WAV-TV Host Amos Brown. The parade's expected attendance is more than 70,000, making it the second largest African American parade in the country after the Chicago Defender's long running Bud Billiken Parade.

But, the Classic still is a football game, and unpredictability and excitement is what people have come to expect each year.

The first Classic involved then-unheard of Mississippi Valley State meeting Grambling University and its legendary coach Eddie Robinson. But that first Classic exposed Indianapolis to Jerry Rice, who showed the skills the world would later see with the San Francisco 49'ers. In that first Classic, Rice led Mississippi Valley State to victory over Grambling, 48 to 36.

Over the last 15 years, the action in the Dome has ranged from Central State's 3-0 win in 1986 to the six-overtimes in the 1996 Classic in which Florida A&M outpointed Hampton 59 to 58.

Fifteen teams and bands have participated in the Classic. Jackson State, Florida A&M, Central State, Howard and Tennessee State have each participated in three Classics. Grambling, Mississippi Valley State, Bethune-Cookman, Alcorn State and North Carolina A&T have each been in two. Participating in one Classic has been Southern, Hampton, Alabama State, Alabama A&M and South Carolina State.

Members of Delta, a public service organization, conduct monthly service projects such as nursing home visits and support of women's shelters.

Members of Delta, their families and friends worked the Delta souvenir booth at the Indy 500 and Brickyard 400 to raise money for the Delta scholarship fund.

Proceeds from Indy 500 and Brickyard souvenir sales, as well as the annual Fashion Show, were used to provide scholarships and book awards to serve women.

Educational endeavors of the sorority extend beyond scholarships, and include the Black College Tour, in which high school students tour 6-10 Historically Black Colleges. Area high school counselors have information about this year's tour.

Delta's Summit V-Health and Healing program focuses on screening the African American Community for clinical depression. With a grant from Eli Lilly, Deltas screened nearly 1000 people at the IBE Health Fair.

As an African American organization, Deltas seek to preserve their rich heritage through activities such as the planting of flowers at Crispus Attucks, a site on the sorority's historic register.

The celebration of our African ancestry and pride in our heritage was the theme for December chapter meeting as Deltas celebrated Kwanzaa.

Delta supports the efforts of other Black organizations through its participation in the Circle City Classic, membership in other organizations, such as the NAACP, the Urban League and the NCNW, and contributions to the UNCF.

Indianapolis Alumnae recognized the contributions of its members each month as Sorors of the Month, and also recognized an outstanding soror for the year.

racial barriers, opening city government to minorities and women, expanding social services to the urban poor and spurring economic growth.

"He was the one who dreamed impossible dreams when others didn't believe," said John Mack, president of the Los Angeles Urban League.

Bradley called racism "America's greatest evil," but his hatred of it was global. He was a hero to South Africans shackled by apartheid and a role model to would-be politicians across America. In 1985, he wrote Pieter Botha, then president of South Africa: "Do away with apartheid or surely it will do away with you."

Elected the first black mayor of a major U.S. city in 1973, Bradley proved that minority politicians could win office with white votes.

After taking office, Bradley changed the face of city government by appointing minorities and women.

"If you went to City Hall in the old days, there was no black person other than the janitor until Tom Bradley was elected," said Appeals Court Judge Stephen Reinhardt. "It was like a foreign country for blacks."

A soft-spoken man, Bradley governed quietly during his five terms by building coalitions instead of using the bully pulpit. His long hours and energy, even into his 70s, were legendary.

The son of a sharecropper, Bradley was born Dec. 29, 1917 in Calvert, Texas. His parents later moved west. At the University of California, Los Angeles, Bradley was a track star.

While a police officer, he earned a law degree at Southwestern University. When he left the police department, he had become its first black lieutenant.

In 1963, Bradley won a City Council seat. Six years later, he ran for mayor on a platform of social justice after a bitterly fought campaign. Bradley waited and ran again, winning with 56 percent of the vote in 1973.

As mayor, Bradley's appointments were not without controversy. General Services director Sylvia Cunliffe, who headed the city's biggest department, was driven from office in the late 1980s amid nepotism and sexual harassment accusations.

Yet under his stewardship, the 1984 Olympics, despite predictions of economic doom and traffic gridlock, were an unprecedented success. The economic ruin and traffic gridlock many feared never materialized.

"He was a builder, bringing a remarkably successful Olympic Games to Los Angeles, encouraging a thriving downtown and improving mass transit," President Clinton said in a statement.

In a 1993 interview with The Associated Press, Bradley said: "The Olympic Games were the major event of my life."

Bradley would twice see racial hatred ignite in Los Angeles, as a city councilman during the 1965 Watts riots, and as mayor during the 1992 uprising, following acquittals in the Rodney King state trial.

Bradley appealed for calm, but some said his angry denunciation of the verdicts may have provoked violence. He would later describe the violence that left 55 people dead as his most painful experience. He twice mounted failed bids for governor in the 1980s.

Bradley is survived by his wife, Ethel, and two daughters. Memorial services were planned Tuesday at First AME Church in South Central Los Angeles.

ing that possibility, including raising money," he said. "I'm not quite ready to decide."

The letter to potential donors was signed by six civic and political leaders, including John Mutz, the former lieutenant governor who had been considering running for mayor himself. The Indianapolis Star reported Thursday.

Besides Mutz, who's now president of PSI Energy, other signers were Eli Lilly and Co. executive Mitch Daniels, who was an aide to Sen. Richard Lugar and former President Christel DeHaan, the former head of Resort Condominiums International; and Al Hubbard, the former Indiana GOP chairman and aide to former Vice President Dan Quayle.

Mutz said Goldsmith was asked about his re-election plans by a member of the site selection committee for the Republican National Convention in 2000. Indianapolis is among five finalists for the convention. Asked by a committee member if he would seek another four years in office, Goldsmith replied that was his intention, Mutz said.

Goldsmith said he told the committee "something like it was most probable. I don't remember the exact words, but the message was upbeat and encouraging, reassuring."

Goldsmith's likely opponent for the mayor's office in November 1999 is Bart Peterson, a businessman who was chief of staff for former Gov. Evan Bayh. Like Goldsmith, he has not formally declared his candidacy.

Peterson said of Goldsmith: "His decision has no impact on my decision."

Goldsmith in January 1991 pledged to serve only two terms as mayor.

Detained immigrants suffer in local jails

By JIM LOBE

WASHINGTON (IPS) — More than 60 percent of illegal or undocumented immigrants detained by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) were housed in local jails where conditions and treatment of inmates fell short of international standards, according to an 84-page report by the Human Rights Watch (HRW) called "Locked Away." It was reported that immigrants, including asylum seekers, were being housed with convicted criminals in these facilities and sometimes were subjected to physical abuse and mistreatment. The product of 18 months of work, "Locked Away" was compiled after interviews with more than 200 detainees in 14 jails across the country, INS officials, jail staff, immigration judges and attorneys.

Women are big business owners

By MICHEE BOKO and HAMADI AISSATA

COTONOU (IPS) — More and more women in West Africa are getting out of poverty by going into business. They are small, privileged minority among women, but they control much of the informal economy in many nations of the sub-region. "These are women who earn hundreds of thousands of francs each day. They are worth as much as, and even more than, certain men. They handle millions," said an economic analyst in Benin. In Togo, a group of women known as "Nana Benz" because of their preference for Mercedes Benz cars, have made a mark in business and trade. "They are famous and they alone control trade and more than half the national economy," said economist Raymond Baniab, a banker attached to the Banque Internationale de l'Afrique-Togo (BIA-TOGO). The bulk of these women have been involved in the trade of cloth and jewelry. But, with the opening up of their countries' economies, many have extended their operations to include household equipment and other imported goods. Others run small and medium-sized enterprises.

Once militia, now drug-pushing bandits

By ALAIN SHUNGU

KINKALA, Congo (IPS) — The Ninjas, former militiamen left over from a five-month civil war, are accused of turning this south Congolese town and its environs into marijuana country. They are allegedly growing and peddling the illicit drug, and terrorizing the area. The growers and dealers are remnants of a militia that backed former Brazzaville mayor Bernard Kolelas. Kolelas was also leader of the opposition before a five-month civil war broke out in June 1997 between supporters of then head of state Pascal Lissouba and Denis Sassou Nguesso. The latter became president in October 1997 after defeating Lissouba's forces. During last year's conflict, Kolelas and his militia remained neutral until Lissouba appointed him prime minister, after which the Ninjas fought alongside the then president's forces. When Sassou Nguesso, himself a former president, defeated Lissouba, Kolelas sought refuge in various African capitals and finally in London, England. His Ninjas fled to The Pool, their region of origin. Now they cultivate marijuana with impunity in the forests where most of them sought refuge, and sell it in Kinkala, the regional capital, located some 75 kms south of Brazzaville.

Why we need affirmativem action

By BERNICE POWELL JACKSON

The state of Washington is facing a proposition on its ballot in November which would effectively end affirmative action in that state, as did Proposition 209 in California. The debate on affirmative action has proven to be an emotional one which often is based on anecdotes of individuals who believe they have not received a fair chance to go to school or for a job because of affirmative action. Let's try to take away some of the emotion and just look at some realities.

First, let's look at one significant case study. It's the U.S. Supreme Court, the highest court in the land. If there is one point of deep chasm between perceptions of fairness between people of color and European Americans, it is around criminal justice issues. So, the need for the active participation of people of color at the nation's highest court is imperative. Yet the numbers of people of color in the nation's highest halls of justice are astounding. In our nation's history only two Supreme Court justices have been people of color — both African American men. There have been no African American women, no Hispanic men or women, no native American men or women and no Asian American or Pacific Island men or women who have had the privilege of serving on this court.

Even more astounding is the record of the Supreme Court clerks, those young lawyers who are hired by the justices to do much of the reviewing and writing of first drafts of opinions for cases before the Court. According to a recent USA Today article, of the 800 Supreme Court clerks hired since 1965, when civil rights legislation was passed, 675 have been European American men and 80 have been European American women. Only 18 have been African American and 28 either Hispanic or Asian American. There has never been a Native American.

A closer examination of the Supreme Court's hiring practices shows that half of the African American clerks were hired by one man, Justice Thurgood Marshall, the first African American to serve on the Court and himself a significant actor in the civil rights movement. Justice Thomas, the only other person of color to have served as a Justice, has hired one African American clerk among his 33 clerks in his seven years on the bench. Currently, in this session of the Court there is one Hispanic woman who is serving for Justice Steven Breyer.

What does this mean for our nation that both the Supreme Court justices and these important behind-the-scenes-shapers of our justice system are by and large white men? It may mean that by only choosing from a very limited pool of candidates that they are not getting the full breadth of experiences and insights which they might as they consider our nation's most important cases. It means that institutional racism has for generations kept out women and people of color and that the Supreme Court, other than Justice Marshall, has not examined how to deal with it.

It means that our nation has not been well-served by having for the most part only one race and gender shape the judicial decisions of our multiracial, multicultural land. Justice Thomas, having just addressed the National Bar Association, the nation's African American legal association, has expressed an interest in increasing the number of people of color clerks on the Supreme Court. But this is too important an issue to just rely on the interest of individual justices. The Court needs the best and the brightest to serve as clerks. But the Court as a whole needs to examine the system of recruiting and hiring its clerks so that the best and the brightest are also reflective of our great nation. It is doubtful that this Court, which has outlawed affirmative action for others, would choose to use it for itself. But by whatever means, the Court and its employees must be more reflective of our nation.

The NAACP and the Hispanic National Bar Association plan a protest outside the Supreme Court on October 5, its opening day for the fall session. We can't un-elect Supreme Court justices, who serve for life and are supposed to be removed from public opinion, but we must find a way to express our concern and our outrage.

Why no radio voter registration campaign?

Nobody noticed. Officials at the State Democratic Party didn't notice. Neither did the folks at the Marion County Democratic Party. African American elected officials in Indianapolis didn't notice. Neither did the many Black candidates running for office November 3rd.

Community activists didn't detect it. Neither did the heads of the NAACP, Indianapolis Urban League, Operation Big Vote, or the Black ministerial associations.

The leadership of our African American community failed to notice that during September, the critical final month for voter registration, there was no media campaign, no media hype, no media interviews, no organized voter registration campaign of any kind occurring in our Black community.

Maybe that's because all summer there wasn't any coherent, meaningful, coordinated effort to make sure Black voters updated their voter registrations. During the summer, I kept hearing rumors about a coordinated campaign among Democratic Party officials and Black candidates designed to insure a massive turnout of Black voters November 3rd.

If there's such an effort, its so un-coordinated that it allowed the city's Black radio stations, for the first time ever, to ignore their responsibility to remind our people and community to get registered?

To be honest, I bear some of the responsibility. See, I got tired of the new folks at WTLC saying I'm unfair to them because I've written in this space that owner Emmis Broadcasting doesn't understand or want to understand the historic role WTLC plays in our Black community.

So, I decided to see whether WTLC would begin assuming its traditional role as a leader in our community. I waited for them to make the first move in creating a voter registration media campaign. As the voter registration deadline loomed, I kept waiting for "the New TLC" to exercise leadership on behalf of our African American community.

They didn't. Neither did our community's political leadership or Black political activists cajole TLC, or any of the city's six Black-oriented radio stations, into developing a coherent final voter registration media blitz.

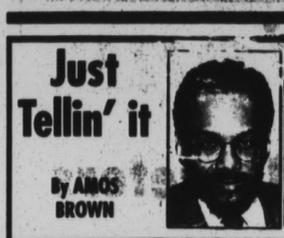

As a community elder, I tried to give others an opportunity to demonstrate leadership, responsibility and innovation. I wanted WTLC and Emmis to show they really care about the welfare of our community.

The acid test of Black oriented media's community concern is how extensively they encourage African Americans to register and to vote. WTLC and Emmis flunked! And our community's leadership blew it by not calling them to account for their failure of leadership.

So, like the Buffalo Soldiers, I guess I'll have come to the rescue, again! The stakes in the November 3rd election are too high for our Black community. If we wait for WTLC and the Democratic Party to get their act together, Republicans will capture our community's Congressional seat, we'll lose a historic chance to elect an African American State Treasurer and the GOP will win everything that's not nailed down!

Immediately upon the conclusion of the Coca-Cola Circle City Classic, the city's Black-owned radio and TV stations—KISS 106.7FM, Smooth Jazz Y100.9FM and WAV-TV along with The Indianapolis Recorder—will launch an extensive Get Out the Vote Campaign. Hoosier 96 will also support it.

I invite WTLC and other non-partisan civic organizations to join our effort to maximize voter turnout in America's 16th largest Black community. The Marines have a saying, "Lead, Follow or Get Out of the Way." WTLC, Emmis, Democratic Party, I'm leading; what will you do?

Heard in the Street

Sources tell me that Indiana Black Expo President, the Rev. Charles Williams, is the reason there's no Grand Marshall for the Classic Parade. The Classic Parade Committee wanted Tom Joyner, in part because of his efforts at raising thousands of dollars this year for Black colleges. The Rev. Williams objected, saying that if Tom Joyner was named Grand Marshall, he wanted WTLC to have "equal time."

I'm told the Classic Parade Committee, peeved at Williams' highhandedness and not wanting to get caught up in Black Expo politics, decided not to designate any celebrity as Grand Marshall. The Rev. Williams, who rarely participates in the Classic Parade, showed no class with his dictatorial tactics toward the Classic Parade Committee.

With much fanfare, the Clinton Administration released a Commerce Department survey documenting that minority-ownership of radio and TV stations is at an all-time low! Funny thing—the survey, conducted by the National Telecommunications & Information Agency (NTIA), didn't include Indy's Black-owned radio stations: KISS 106.7FM/WBKS (formerly WGGR) or Smooth Jazz Y100.9/WYJZ! And the NTIA survey refuses to include minority-owned low-power TV stations such as Indianapolis' WAV-TV Channel 53.

Tatia Williams, Acting Director, Minority Telecommunications Development for NTIA, apologized for not knowing that Indianapolis, America's 16th largest Black community, is served by three Black-owned stations. Williams admitted that NTIA's political goal is to demonstrate the paucity of minority-owned media. To achieve their political goals, NTIA refuses to count legitimate minority-owned TV stations such as WAV-TV.

Congresswoman Julia Carson and Senators Richard Lugar and Dan Coats should investigate NTIA's discrimination against the nation's 100 or so minority-owned low-power TV stations. Adding those stations to the totals wouldn't alter the fact that the miniscule minority ownership of the nation's 15,000 radio and TV stations is a disgrace! NTIA shouldn't add to that disgrace by discriminating against scores of minority-owned stations!

For more than a month, Evan Bayh's campaign has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars on media ads, but not a dime with the state's Black media. Why does Bayh's campaign (and those of other Democrats candidates) continually treat Black media as an afterthought, instead of a necessary tool toward victory?

See ya next week!

Can Clinton survive another Kenneth Starr report

I don't know whether President Clinton can survive a Kenneth Starr report that charges him with several "high crimes and misdemeanors" and gives graphic, shocking-to-some reasons why he is unfit to continue to lead this country.

I am sure of this: The nation will be severely damaged for the better part of two years as bitter impeachment proceedings go forward, as it now seems they will.

The effort in Congress to oust Clinton from the White House will be a profoundly political event with incredibly high stakes for a lot of American interests, and the wounds will grow deep and damage U.S. interests domestically and internationally.

Even if the president survives the charges regarding Lewinsky, he will be dogged by efforts to prove that he broke the law in his fund-raising in the 1996 election or by other charges until his last day in office. He will be a leader bereft of much of the moral and suasive powers that normally are inherent in the U.S. presidency.

His time will be devoted to trying to wipe off the taint of Clinton.

Malcolm S. "Steve" Forbes, a Republican who apparently will run for the presidency again in 2000, has said that "at this particular time, when the president and the White House are paralyzed," the GOP-controlled Congress should move to enact "a sweeping tax cut." That tells us that politicians as well as nature abhor a vacuum.

That also tells us that a lot more than "moral outrage" is driving this rush to oust Clinton. Some ambitious people, like Forbes, and some other powerful forces have always hated Bill and Hillary Clinton's agenda for America, and they are gleeful that Bill has unzipped a gaping hole in his armor.

Even if Clinton is impeached — or he resigns — Vice President Al Gore will assume the presidency under a cloud of charges that he, too, engaged in lawless behavior in the same election.

A lot of things Clinton has vowed to fight for will fall into limbo, including:

- * Legislation to regulate managed health-care plans and a program to reform Medicare, the government health-care program for the elderly.
- * A strategy to modernize and improve public education.
- * Efforts, including funding the International Monetary Fund, to ameliorate the financial crises in Russia and parts of Asia and Latin America.
- * A genuine effort to tighten campaign finance laws.
- * Legislation to increase the minimum wage.
- * A program to assist farmers who face economic disaster.

One way or the other it will become clear that in his sick involvement with a young woman, Clinton hurt the nation almost as much as he damaged his presidency. It will also become clear that you can't take the politics out of even a human tragedy — thus the damage to the nation will be intensified and multiplied.

Opinions

Baseball still prefers White heroes

By EARL OFARI HUTCHINSON

Chicago Cubs superstar Sammy Sosa bristles when asked if being black has anything to do with him getting less fan and media acclaim than St. Louis slugger, Mark McGwire. "What come on man, it's 1998." Sosa can't be blamed for getting indignant at the mere mention of discrimination. He has been carried off the field on the shoulders of his teammates. Fans have brawled in Chicago streets outside the stadium and in the stands for his home run balls.

Sportswriters have warmly praised him for his gracious manners and charitable work. President Clinton called and congratulated him after breaking Roger Maris's home run record. Congress passed a resolution saluting him.

But the generosity of many fans, teammates, and sportswriters can't paper over the glaring contrasts between the two players. Sosa, is black, Spanish speaking, and grew up in poverty in the Dominican Republic. McGwire is white, grew up in a middle-class, Southern California neighborhood, and was an all-American baseball player at USC. McGwire has the right class and racial credentials for many fans and sportswriters, Sosa doesn't. They have swooned over every McGwire blast, conceded the all time home run crown to him, and anointed him as the true heir apparent to the throne of Babe Ruth.

In a USA Today poll in August, nearly 80 percent of the fans chose McGwire over Sosa to break the home run record. Even after it became clear that the two players were in a race to the wire for the all time crown, much of the media still obsessively focused on McGwire's exploits.

In the first two weeks of September I counted 111 AP stories that featured McGwire. Sosa was featured in only 68 stories. A Sporting News cover story on "McGwire Mania" was crammed with photos, features, stats on Big Mac. Sosa as late as mid-September was relegated to a one page player profile in the magazine's baseball section.

Baseball's establishment has been no more even handed with the two superstars.

This summer thousands of fans have flooded into Baseball's Hall of fame at Cooperstown, Ohio to gaze at the vast array of McGwire memorabilia that includes bats, gloves, baseballs, T-shirts, jerseys, and plaques. As of September, Sosa's Cooperstown exhibit consisted of a jersey, and the bat in which he hit homers 58 and 62.

The contrast in the public reaction to McGwire and Sosa when they socked their record breaking 62nd homer has been just as stark:

"The record breaking ball. Sosa's balls were not marked to make identification possible, and retrieval from fans easier. McGwire's were.

"The media. The national and international press turned out in full force for the Cardinals nationally televised game at Busch Stadium, September 8 to see McGwire swat number 62. When he did, the nation and the media held its collective breath. The TV replays of his homer were shown long into the night. The game in which Sosa belted his 62nd homer was televised by Television Dominica, and only in the Dominican Republic.

"Baseball's bigwigs. Baseball Commissioner Bud Selig personally congratulated McGwire after he hit his record breaking homer at Busch Stadium.

Sosa had to settle for a telephone call from Selig when he hit his.

Selig tried to make up for the shameful neglect of Sosa with a belated Sammy Sosa day. Sportswriters and TV networks made a better effort to give Sosa equal billing in their coverage. And fans angrily lashed out at any suggestion that they preferred McGwire over Sosa to be the next Ruth.

This is the way it should have been from the start. But it wasn't because baseball is not an idle pastime that promotes the spirit of color-blind athletic cooperation. It's a big money business that mirrors the best in American values—cooperation, achievement, and fair play, and the worst—greed, sexism and racism. Baseball owners, the media and corporate sponsors know this and that's why they will always package and sell white heroes faster to the public than black ones. Just ask Hank Aaron.

Don't throw stones if you live in a glass house!

Dear Editor:

According to local polls and press, I am a member of a minority in regards to the hottest topic in the media today: The Clinton Scandal. I do not see a need for printing the infamous Starr Report in the daily edition on the Indianapolis Star and the Indianapolis News. In spite of warnings being given concerning the explicit nature of this material, I feel that this was made available the youth at free will. I say this because there are no paper patrols that keep an eye on who purchases or reads a newspaper. My firm belief is that the only people who needed to read this report are the people on Capitol Hill. Then and only then can a decision be made as to whether or not any crimes were committed by President Bill Clinton during his questioning. There is no way that a person can look at videotape of someone else and determine if they are lying or being truthful. Hence, why show the long boring videotape of the President's testimony. I see two very prominent reasons. First of all, this makes for good press due to the fact that this is one item that the majority of the people have neither heard, read nor spoken about. The second reason is that this is an election year and this makes for good political energy. The Republican Party has taken this topic and ran with it. This scandal has revived the feeling that many members of this party can come away with a victory in November.

This also helps to heal the wounds that remain open from the two presidential elections that were won by the democratic party! It is a real slap in the face to lose the keys to the White House, for many Republicans feel that they own this office and that they should never be displaced from it. I do not see any person on this earth that has been given the right by the Lord God to sit in judgement of another human being. Sure we all have an opinion on this topic, but let's keep it on this level. I do not know of one person who wouldn't say that there are items in their closet that they would rather keep under lock and key, so stop throwing the stones if you live in the glass house!

Voting for the least of two evils

Dear Editor:

For months the polls have stated that the American people want the Lewinsky investigation to cease. In the last couple of days the political analysts reviewing polls are still reporting that Americans want it to end, and in addition they do not want any more data to be released. These analysts are also starting to mention that the actions of members of the House are against the desires of the public. But these political analysts have failed to give these actions a name. The name is elitism.

Elitism- the government or control by an elite- Webster's New World College Dictionary. Every vote cast by the members of the House of Representatives when they accepted the Starr report was elitist in nature. The members of the House of Representatives, who voted yes, defied the will of the people. That is elitism. And those who voted no, did not state that they voted "no" to express the will of the people.

For the first 130 years of our nation, the American people were forced to live in an elitist society. We do not have to live in an elitist society any longer, nor should we be forced to live in an elitist one as is now occurring. There is one more vote that the House of Representatives has to take and that is a vote to proceed to a full impeachment hearing. At the present time it is estimated that this vote will be in the first week of October.

We must write our members of the House and tell them that we do not want an impeachment hearing. We must tell our friends, neighbors, co-workers, everybody necessary to contact their representative not to vote for an impeachment hearing.

This is not about being a Republican or a Democrat. This is not about being a conservative or a liberal. This is not about President Clinton. This is about democracy. This is about a government for the people by the people. This is about saying that we will not tolerate elitism. This is telling the members of the House that this is "Our House"!

I am just an ordinary man, but I think there is a lesson to learn from this current problem. When you do not vote, this sends a message. That message is that you do not care. This allows both political parties to court a smaller segment of society to win elections. The smaller the segment of society, the more elitist our government will become.

Please vote!!!! Even if it means voting for the least of two evils.

Time for black America to know what's really going on

Dear Editor,

I am writing concerning the article Former Zaire battlefield for current African World War. As an African American, I have a problem as to why the same world that tolerated Mobutu Sese Seko for 32 years has become dissatisfied with Laurent Kabila in only 15 months?

Where was this dissent these 19 years that Jonas Savimba has tried to overthrow the legal government of Angola? This same Savimba has been declared a war criminal by fourteen African presidents.

Who complained about France sending troops into Africa ten times since 1990?

Who complained the 500 years Portugal colonized Angola and Mozambique and when they left in 1975, ninety percent of the people were illiterate?

How many African Americans remember when Ronald Reagan welcomed Jonas Savimba into the White House at a time when Ben Hooks of NAACP fame was not welcome? Whatever one may think or not think about Laurent Kabila, he has put the remnant of the Holy Roman Empire in a casket. For once in my lifetime, decisions about Black Africa for Black Africa is being made by Nelson Mandela and 13 other African presidents, not Europe.

It is time for Black America to become knowledgeable about what has really been going on in Black Africa.

Sincerely,
John D. Washington

Ending partner violence is everybody's business

Dear Editor,
Every 15 seconds, someone in America is battered in a partner violence situation. These victims and their batterers come to work. Domestic violence costs businesses over $5 billion a year in medical expenses, lost wages, sick leave, absenteeism, and lost productivity. Sadly, one cause of lost productivity is premature death—homicide is the leading cause of on-the-job death for women, and 20 percent of those who die are murdered by an intimate partner at the workplace.

October 1 is national Work to End Domestic Violence Day, and marks the beginning of October as Domestic Violence Awareness Month. Employers in your community and across the country will join on that day to stand against domestic violence. In the workplace, these companies have policies that ensure employees are safe at work and have access to needed services. In their communities, these businesses partner with local domestic violence programs to provide much-needed assistance and support.

On October 1 and throughout Domestic Violence Awareness Month, let us all be aware that ending partner violence is everybody's business.

Ricky Dillard & The New Generation Chorale

Multi-talented singer, song writer, producer, and actor Ricky Dillard, is a "Ball of Fire for God" that has scorched an indelible mark of music. Dillard reached a humble plateau of success. Grammy nominee, motion picture star ("Leap of Faith"), music chart topper, and prime time television star ("Arsenio Hall Show"), God just continues to place jewels in this young mans crown.

A child prodigy, his career took an early ascension with recognition as an acclaimed choir director, vocal coach, and minister of music. Reverend Milton Brunson quickly honed and fine tune Ricky's talents as a member of the 'Thompson Community Singers'. He would go on to release solo projects and form 'The New Generation Chorale'. Ricky would steadfast lead New Generation through such projects as PBS's Going Home to Gospel with Patti Labelle, NBC's Comic Relief Salutes Michael Jordan, ABC's Paula Pundstone Show, the Annual Stellar Awards, BET's Bobby Jones Gospel, and The 'Grammy Nominated' and Stellar Award Winning project with the 'Queen' of Gospel Albertina Walker.

Walt Disney Production would later

call upon Dillard to serve as choir consultant for their movie 'Sister Act II'.

1996 greeted Ricky Dillard and New G with their fourth Live recording entitled "Worked It Out", due to release in October. Full of the energy and spirit filled songs that they are known for, "Worked It Out" delivers the message in a way that is sure to continue their ground swell of popularity. With the expertise of the award winning co producer Donald Lawrence and a new record company partnership with Crystal Rose and Star Song, Ricky Dillard and New G are experiencing God guidance and favor with much more on the horizon.

Vickie Winans

The name "Winans" and gospel music are synonymous and Vickie Winans most definitely lives up to her name as she continuously sings the good news of Jesus Christ. The captivating vocals of this multi-talented artist are like a soul fine tuned instrument that piques the emotions, and uplifts the spirit. Vickie lends a high-powered, energetic, yet smooth and inspirational style as showcased in her Grammy-nominated albums.

Vickie was just 8 years old when she sang her first solo in church. From then on, the biggest challenge for Aaron and Mattie Bowman was keeping a tight rein on their 7th child.

Vickie is the mother of 2 sons, Mario "Skeeter" Winans and Marvin "Cocunut" Winans. She and her sons are extremely close and her sons are ecstatic to see their mother's career soar in gospel music. "I absolutely love what I do," she says. "I've been offered movie roles and gospel talk shows. I'm just having a ball doing the will of God!"

Winans' ministry has even taken her

Where are the Black volunteers?

As all of us have, I've been reading and listening about the devastation that "Georges" has wrought the past few days and the local assistance that has reached out to touch victims. I heard about the two ministers who traveled to Haiti to serve as volunteers. One thing disturbs me. At the printing of this column - to date - I've not heard about one African American church volunteer, preacher or parishioner going anywhere to help.

That disturbs me because either my illustrious cohorts in the media are totally disregarding the African American volunteerism stories or there are no stories to tell. Now, I'm assuming that at least some of my African American pastors (and especially those of the larger and more affluent congregations) have gathered up a group, taken up some funds, collected up some clothing and other needful items and struck out on a journey to Haiti.

I must further assume that several Indianapolis African American based churches have done this thoughtful and God serving task quietly and unobserved by pen and camera.

And although we good Christians should certainly not limit our service to God by color, I would think my Black brothers and sisters would be more inclined to rally around our Black brothers and sisters around the world.

As a part of the media of this great city, I must confess that I am deeply hurt about the lack of across-the-board coverage we receive when we, as African Americans, do great things, locally and abroad.

Yes, I stay on the church and especially the Black church because I love it and expect it to rise to the full service of our Lord in every way. Yes, I ruthlessly pick on our Black churches because my experience and background tells me we waste much money, time and other resources on selfish parish vanity while communities crumble around our palatial edifices.

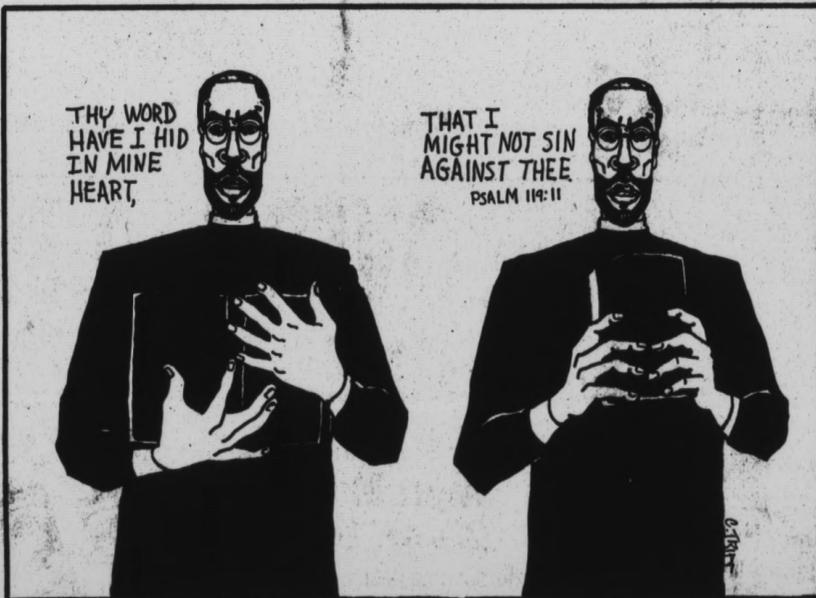

So when I see television cameras dance in on the goodness and blessed deeds of Indianapolis to the world, I feel the pain of our absence from such coverage and I must step to the plate if the media has been disregarding the "rest of the story." However, I hope at the same time that there is a "rest of the story."

We encourage readers to submit questions and comments for Ethel McCane's "From the Front Pew." Letters should be addressed to Ethel McCane, P.O. Box 18141, Indianapolis 46218.

Rev. Truevine

By Rev. Charles Tripp Sr.

Children pay more attention to things than we often give them credit for. Having been a child in a community whose life revolved around the church, I recall that all issues found their way back to the church. Spiritual and political life often found a common voice in its hallowed halls.

I remember the times when I would hear of an errant leader seeking the forgiveness of both god and man before an understanding congregation. Invariably, the sin of David and Bathsheba was cited as a scriptural context for their sins. The forgiveness of David's sins seemed peculiarly crafted to meet the sins of those who had enjoyed the perks and prerogatives of power, and up to that point had successfully escaped its temptations. However, the costly wages of David's sins were seldom mentioned. The bitter fruit of David's sin with Bathsheba and the murder of her husband was not dismissed by God. The prophet Nathan in 2nd Samuel 12:10 declared to David, "Now therefore the sword shall never depart for thine house; because thou hast despised me, and hast taken the wife of Uriah the Hittite to be thy wife."

James 1:15 says, "Then when lust has conceived, it gives birth to sin; and when sin is accomplished, it brings forth death." Sin, even forgiven sin, leaves a bitter aftertaste that is not so easily taken away. The Rev. Truevine says, "The bitter injury and betrayal of sin can be forgiven, but we must not be surprised when an unpleasant aftertaste lingers."

Chastisement will follow sin. Hebrew 12:6, "For whom the Lord loves, He chastens, and punishes everyone he accepts as a son." However, Hebrews 12:15 also declares, "See to it that no one misses the grace of God and that no bitter root grows up to cause trouble and defile many." Thus, whether we are on the sinning or chastisement side of the sin and redemption process, bitterness must not be allowed to linger in our lives.

After all, it is Jesus who redeems both David and ourselves. Jesus makes forgiveness available to all who confess, repent and receive the redemption available through Him. The cry of David's 51st Psalm is available to every broken and contrite heart. "Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin." (Psalm 51:2)

Do Muslims have a savior?

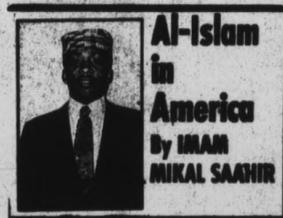

G'd (God) revealed to humanity, via his last prophet Muhammed, the following: "God will say: 'This is a day on which the truthful will profit from their truth: theirs are gardens, with rivers flowing beneath, - their eternal home: G'd well pleased with them, and they with G'd: That is the great Salvation, (the fulfillment of all desires). To G'd does belong the dominion of the heavens and the earth, and all that is therein, and it is He who has power over all things.'"

It is common for believers outside of the Islamic faith to ask Muslims, "How is your soul going to spend eternity?" Implying that Islam does not offer its adherents a successful plan for entry into paradise. The above Qur'anic verse testifies otherwise.

Then there are other non-Muslims who challenge the Islamic understanding of how one can gain entry into paradise by stating, "Your good deeds are not sufficient to gain you entry into heaven." Hopefully this misunderstanding will be addressed as we continue this discussion.

In Al-Islam, commonly called Islam, God has revealed numerous success plans for guaranteeing paradise for Muslims. Any human being who submit themselves totally to do God's will is not only guaranteed paradise after this present life but also already have begun tasting the sweetness of paradise in this life.

Do Muslims have one singular human individual as a "savior"? No. The Holy Qur'an and the scriptures revealed before the Qur'an state plainly that no soul can bear the burden of another. The Qur'an states further, "Then guard yourselves against a day when one soul shall not avail another, nor shall intercession be accepted for her, nor shall compensation be taken from her, nor shall anyone be (helped from outside)."

Al-Islam in America
By IMAM MIKAL SAHIR

Isn't it interesting that the Holy Qur'an addresses our human souls in the feminine, as "her." Continuing, we see that no soul will receive intercession except as pleases our Creator. The "saving" of our soul is not dependent on another individual outside of ourselves. It is the judgment of our deeds.

Every human being is dependent upon the loving Mercies of God's forgiveness. Yet we all have a conscious intellect that knows right from wrong. We have the opportunity now to do good deeds. Prophet Muhammed, prayers and peace be on him, stated, "Follow up an evil deed with a good deed, and the good deed will wipe away the evil deed."

Every creature that has ever existed on the planet is and was a servant of G'd either consciously or unconsciously. However, God wants us to serve Him with conscious behavior. All of the prophets worshipped and served God as the One God. They gave God no partners or associates. That is also salvation. Christ Jesus is quoted in the Bible, saying, "...I ascend unto my Father and your Father: and to my God and your God." That was salvation.

God is the only savior for us all. Our Creator is not sadistic. His intercession be accepted for her, nor shall compensation be taken

Church Federation holds vigil

The Church Federation of Greater Indianapolis held a prayer vigil for 16-month-old Chelsea Starr Stevens, last Tuesday, September 29. The vigil was held at the 7800 block of West 10th Street, one-half-block west of the entrance to the Tomahawk Village Apartments where the child lived.

The 132nd victim of violent death in the Indianapolis area, Chelsea died Thursday, Sept. 24, after she was taken off life support machines at Riley Hospital for Children. Physicians said that the little girl had bruises all over her body when she was admitted to the hospital last Wednesday night.

The Church Federation will hold Sharing Groups in October to listen to the experiences of those who have lost a love one to violent death. Those who wish to take part in the Sharing Groups are invited to call the Church Federation of Greater Indianapolis at 926-5371.

Enrollment at CTS hits 360

Enrollment for the fall at Indianapolis-based Christian Theological Seminary has hit 360, the highest total since the fall of 1996, according to the Rev. Edward L. Wheeler, president.

The fall totals include 158 male and 202 female students, with 73 of the men registered as full-time students and 92 of the women attending full-time in pursuit of their degrees. The total compares to 340 in last spring's class.

With roots going back to 1850, CTS is an ecumenical seminary related to the Christian Church. It offers masters and doctoral degrees in a variety of theological fields. The campus is located at 1000 West 42nd Street.

AL-ISLAM Conference at Greater Northwest

Mercy overrules His punishment. He is the Merciful Benefactor and the Merciful Redeemer, meaning that He gives us our needed benefits even before they register in our minds. Additionally, He gives us the mercy we consciously ask for that we need to give us new hope and life to redeem our human spirit.

Salvation begins in the here and now and is given to us in its fullness in the hereafter. God has given us a free will, though limited, to make choices between right and wrong. We get every good that we earn and we suffer every ill that we earn. To totally submit to do the will of our Creator in this life is the beginning of paradise. The choice is up to us as human individuals whether we want to strive to achieve this great salvation for our souls.

We encourage questions and inquiries. Please forward them to: Al-Islam In America, c/o Imam Mikal Saahir, Nur-Allah Islamic Center, 2040 E. 46th St., Indpls, IN 46205.

All of Indianapolis is invited to come share in special workshops, fellowship and music from Essence of Praise as they join Greater Northwest Baptist Church Couples Conference, Saturday, October 24, 1998.

As we are being faced with the highest rate of moral decline and divorce in our community, Christians need to set the standards starting in their own homes. The conference will focus on setting your home apart from the world for the Lord Jesus Christ.

"Sanctifying Your Home" is the theme of this conference sponsored by the Couple's Fellowship at Greater Northwest, where the pastor is Rev. Claude Robinson. Guest speakers, Frank & Mare Stone are members of North Baptist Church, where Bro. Stone is co-pastor. Rev. Stone is also a professor at Baptist Bible College of Indianapolis where his wife recently graduated.

There will be a pre-conference night at the Marriott, 7202 E. 21st Street, with overnight accommodations available at an additional group rate. Saturday's conference will be held at Baptist Bible College, 601 N. Shortridge Road, beginning at 8 a.m. with registration. The cost is $12.50 per person ($25.00/couple) which also includes a continental breakfast and catered lunch.

To pre-register or for additional information contact the church office at 299-9244.

Underground Railroad Center Gets $1M Donation

CINCINNATI (AP) — A $1 million donation to the National Underground Railroad Freedom Center will enable it to develop a program for young students about the network that helped slaves escape the South during the Civil War.

The grant from the Cincinnati-based Thomas L. Conlan Education Foundation will pay for development of a curriculum for elementary and junior high school students, Deborah Mack, the center's director of programming, said Tuesday.

"It's such a rich story," she said. "We're really trying to make it so even teachers who are teaching science can use elements of it."

The center is scheduled to open along the Ohio River in 2003.

The donation is the latest grant to the center, which is trying to privately raise at least $80 million to support its programs.

Thomas L. Conlan, Jr., a trustee of the foundation named for his father and of the freedom center, said the foundation decided the center should receive the grant because of his parents' devotion to education.

Conlan's father was a Cincinnati lawyer who co-founded the Student Loan Funding Corp. in 1981, which has helped 600,000 students through its loan program. He died in 1984.

The grant was made in recognition of Lawrence C. Hawkins, a member of the boards of the foundation and the freedom center.

Hawkins was a University of Cincinnati vice president from 1976 to 1984. Before that, he was assistant superintendent of the Cincinnati public schools, the first black to reach that level with the school district.

Colts prepare for Chargers after disappointing loss

By JAMES M. KEOUGH, JR.
Sports Writer

The Indianapolis Colts are in a world of hurt.

After a 0-4 start, including a 19-13 loss to the New Orleans Saints last weekend in the RCA Dome, the optimism of a winning season is quickly fading.

In fact, the prospect of winning one game is questionable.

The Colts are a proud football team. The Colts have players with strong character.

The problem is, this proud collection of good citizens does not add up to a very good football team.

But all is not lost.

There is always next week.

And next week just may be this team's best chance to break into the win column.

In many ways, the Indianapolis Colts and the San Diego Chargers are the same.

Both have high-profile rookie quarterbacks who are struggling.

Both have potentially explosive running backs with something to prove.

Both teams have defenses that are capable of competing with anyone until they run out of steam.

The only difference is that San Diego has broken into the win column.

Colts running back Marshall Faulk appears poised to display the form that catapulted him into the Pro-Bowl earlier in his career. Injuries, offensive line problems and a Lindy Infante (former Colts head coach) passing philosophy slowed the lightning-fast Faulk. This season, Faulk has gained 335 yards on 101 carries for a 3.3 yards-per-carry average. He is also the Colts' second-leading receiver with 19 receptions for 244 yards and one touchdown.

Natrone Means left San Diego two years ago over a contract dispute and never regained his former Pro bowl form. But after getting off to a fast start this season, the Chargers are once again excited about their running attack. In four games, Means has amassed 360 yards on 71 carries for a 5.1 yards per carry average. He has also scored two touchdowns.

After heading into what appeared certain victory against New Orleans, the Colts will have to continue to battle back the demons and the critics.

And get ready for the Chargers.

What did Colts head coach Jim Mora say to his troops after they blew a seven-point lead with 41 seconds left in the game and went on to lose in overtime?

"Nothing dramatic; we just have to keep battling. We fought hard today and the key is that we keep working hard and working to get better and become a better football team, and I know this team will," said Mora. "It was a tough one. Yes, when you fight hard and then to lose it like that, yes, it is very tough. Our whole team is disappointed, but you just have to battle back."

Life in the NFL is not getting any easier for Peyton Manning.

It is an ongoing learning process and Manning is taking a memorable stroll down the road of hard knocks.

But Mora isn't dissatisfied.

"I'm happy with the way he is progressing. He made some excellent throws and decisions (on Sunday). Can't blame all of the interceptions on him. He is working hard and progressing week by week. He will continue to progress. I am very happy with the way he is progressing and he will bounce back," added Mora.

Well, by comparison, he isn't doing that badly.

In four games, Ryan Leaf has completed 45 of 104 passes for 568 yards. This equates to a 43.3 completion percentage. He has thrown one touchdown and eight interceptions.

Manning, on the other hand, has completed 81 of 146 passes for 992 yards for a 55.5 completion percentage. He has thrown for three touchdowns and 11 interceptions.

Obviously, nether has been stellar.

But what advice can New Orleans head coach Mike Ditka offer Manning?

"He throws the (ball) awfully hard. If the receiver doesn't catch it, there is a good chance it will be intercepted. I'm not grading him—that's not my job.

He's a heck of an athlete who is going to have his share of big games," said Ditka.

Well, time will tell.

Life in the NFL is not getting any easier for Peyton Manning. (Recorder Photo by Walt Thomas)

October 4 event slated to celebrate life of Flo Jo

In a Sunday ceremony at Market Square Arena in Indianapolis, USA Track & Field and the Indiana Pacers will celebrate the life of Florence Griffith Joyner, the fabulous Flo Jo of Olympic fame who died last week in California.

Flo Jo's legend began here in Indianapolis at the 1988 U.S. Olympic Trials when she lowered the women's world record for the 100 meters in spectacular fashion. Flo Jo's speed was matched only by her colorful attire. She captured the world's attention and kept it all the way through the Seoul Olympics, where she won three gold medals and one silver in the sprint and relay events.

Flo Jo's close ties to Indianapolis continued long after she retired from competition. She was honored here as the 1988 James E. Sullivan Award winner, and also as the 1994 Major Taylor Award recipient. Flo Jo also designed the uniforms worn by the Indiana Pacers from 1990 to 1996.

The Florence Griffith Joyner Celebration of Life will take place Sunday (Oct. 4) at 4:00 p.m. at Market Square Arena. Al Joyner, Florence's husband, and the 1984 Olympic triple jump gold medallist, will be the featured speaker. Joining AL will be representatives of USA Track & Field Federation, the Indiana Pacers, the United States Olympic Committee, the International Amateur Athletic Federation, the City of Indianapolis, the Indianapolis Sports Corporation, the National Collegiate Athletic Association, Circle City Classic and the IUPUI Track Stadium.

Also present will be some of Flo Jo's 1988 Olympic teammates. This event will be free to the public. Doors on the west side of Market Square Arena will open at 3:30 p.m.

Fall's fabulously flavorful baking

Fall has many elements that intrigue the senses - from the eye-catching colors of the changing leaves to cool, crisp mornings. Now is the perfect time to start baking again, so why not start with two favorite fall ingredients - oatmeal and cranberries?

Baking with oats is easy to do. Oats add fiber and a delicious whole-grain flavor and texture to all kinds of baked goods. Add the tangy taste of cranberries for a fabulously flavorful combination. For instance, breakfast becomes brighter when fresh-baked muffins or scones are on the menu, and an old-fashioned oatmeal cookie full of crimson cranberries and chunks of chocolate makes a great after-school snack.

Enjoy all that fall has to offer. Most of all take pleasure in getting back to baking!

Facts and Tips

Fresh, frozen, juiced, sauced or sweetened dried cranberries can be enjoyed all year - they're not just for Thanksgiving!

It's easy to add both fiber and a delicious whole grain flavor whenever you bake by substituting oats for up to one-third of the flour called for in the recipe.

Fresh cranberries are available from September to early December. Buy two bags and freeze one for year-round use.

Freeze cranberries, without prewashing, in their plastic bag for up to one year.

Cranberries naturally have no fat or cholesterol.

In most recipes, quick and old fashioned oats are interchangeable. Old fashioned oats add more texture and may cause cookies to spread a bit more.

Measure oats the same way you measure flour. Spoon oats into a nested dry measuring cup and use the flat side of a knife to level even with top of cup.

Do not thaw frozen cranberries before using. Simply rinse in cold water and use as directed for fresh cranberries.

For additional cranberry recipes, call the Ocean Spray Consumer Affairs Department at 1-800-662-3263, department 330, Monday through Friday, 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. EST.

Why eat breakfast?

Studies have shown that kids - from preschoolers to teens - who start the day with a nutritious breakfast have many advantages both in the classroom and on the playground over kids who don't. Why?

Kids who eat a good breakfast are able to concentrate better, work faster, make fewer mistakes, be more creative, even score higher on tests.

Kids who eat breakfast have more energy for school, play and sports.

Kids who eat breakfast are more likely to meet their daily protein requirements and have higher intakes of vitamin C, calcium, iron and fiber.

DID YOU KNOW?

Studies show that the eating habits we develop as kids tend to stay with us as adults, so it's never too early to get a child in the habit of eating a good breakfast.

Instant oatmeal is made from the same whole grain oats as regular oatmeal, is low in fat, a good source of fiber, and fortified with essential vitamins and minerals growing kids need.

Kids need fiber, too. Children over the age of three need an amount equal to their age plus 5 grams each day. A packet of instant oatmeal provides 2 to 3 grams of dietary fiber.

Art and Jazz

Rod Trabue from the Indianapolis Urban Arts Consortium talks about the Consortium's plans for the fall/winter session, with visual artist Terry Wilson.

Visitors to the recent Open House for the Artists of 3001 N. New Jersey enjoyed a myriad of art, creativity, food, poetry, and live jazz.

By LILLIE WALKER

The warmth from the humidity blended easily into the early evening breeze of the late summer day. The parking lot was filling up quickly and cars were being routed to the adjacent lot. Formal flyers had gone out this time, assuring visitors that the lots would be secured by IPD. The neighborhood has had its share of crime and violence over the past years, but Sunday gave way to a restful reprieve, like a determined warrior pausing to catch its breath. The evening promised a myriad of creativity, food, poetry, and live jazz. It was Sunday, Sept. 20th, and the Artists of 3001 N. New Jersey were having an Open House.

On the first level, jewelry artist Teresa Montgomery welcomed each of her potential customers into her studio with open arms. The space was filled with her lively pieces: hand-made earrings, pins, and adornments along with her popular switchplate covers.

The bustling patronage of Ruby Harris' intimate 3rd floor studio brought to mind a shop in Paris. It was set up like a small, private boutique with one-of-a-kind garments and hats. Ruby specializes in unique ethnic mud-cloth fabrics. The jackets are of an oversize style designed to caress and slenderize. Her distinct designs are often recognized by this classic form. Very elegant.

George Murff's studio was located separately from the other artists, out of the way in the building annex. "I like it that way," he said. Although he missed the mainstream traffic, people sought him out anyway. George is well known for his graphic designs, but he also dabbles in sculpture and innova-

Disney books celebrates the beauty of black culture

Book Review

NEW YORK (AP) — Walt Disney Co. is launching a children's book imprint that will deal exclusively with black heritage and will include a work by Toni Morrison.

The imprint, called Jump at the Sun, is part of Disney's Hyperion Books for Children division, the company said Tuesday.

"This line of books celebrates the beauty of black culture while at the same time inviting all readers to enjoy this special cultural experience," said Andrea Davis Pinkney, who will head the new imprint.

All of the books will be hardcover and range from pop-up books for preschoolers to young adult fiction.

The contributing artists will not all be black or authors of children's books, she said.

Six titles will be released in the fall. They include works by Veronica Chambers, a culture writer for Newsweek and author of the critically acclaimed memoir "Mama's Girl"; poet Eloise Greenfield; and illustrators Jan Spivey Gilchrist, Nancy Doniger and Ken Wilson-Max.

Five more titles will be introduced in the spring. Among them will be a book by Morrison, winner of the Nobel and Pulitzer prizes who will be writing her first children's book and Della Reese, star of the CBS-TV drama "Touched by an Angel."

Pinkney said the market for this genre was strong.

Citing statistics from Target Market News, a research firm specializing in the black market, Pinkney said, blacks spend $300 million a year on books, more than they spend on electronic equipment like VCRs, videos and radios.

The imprint gets its name from a story Harlem Renaissance writer Zora Neale Hurston tells about her mother who urged her "to aim high in life-to jump at the sun."

Freedom Center has a new director

CINCINNATI (AP) - The National Underground Freedom Center has hired a director and chief operating official.

Dr. John Fleming, 54, has been the director of the National Afro-American Museum and Cultural Center in Wilberforce since 1988. He has been a consultant with the Freedom Center since 1994.

"As I saw the ideas and the plans for the Freedom Center unfold, I realized this was going to be a very major, significant national project," Fleming said Wednesday.

Fleming will plan, implement and manage the center's community and educational pro-tive artwork.

Philosophical conversation buzzed through the first-level studio space of Anthony Radford. His space was shared with artist Candace Brooks; her colorful abstracts leaped off the playful T-shirts she had designed.

Metal sculptor William Ryder and visual artist Terry Wilson shared a space in the first level also. Voices of rhythm and rhymes wafted from the terrace to add to the creative stimulation that surrounded the room. Poet Dorian Martindale wove his vocal magic to an attentive audience.

Outside, the Sambusa Hut allowed indulgences of meaty greens, plantains, and chicken and rice.

And there was art not seen, only heard. Invisible Art's jazz ensemble lured you to a chair and kept you there, among friends and familiar faces. Ife (Eunice Bowens) was in intense discussion about Cafe' Li'ture, every fourth Sunday at X-Pression Bookstore. Rod Trabue from the Indianapolis Urban Arts Consortium talked about the Consortium's plans for the fall/winter session. James Depp of the Midtown Writers reminded everyone of their Open Mike, every Thursday night at the Omega Center.

It was an interesting evening of art and community embracing one another in a special place. If you remember the days of Indy Renaissance (a network of African-American artists), it would be easy for you to see, in that special place, the growth of a collective force of artist and supporters. Taken to a higher level, partnerships emerge, solutions are created. The spirit of our culture made a presence there, we hope it will always remain.

the merits of her work regardless of its commercial success. "This album reflects who I am and where I'm at right now in my life. To me it's a good album, but you never know because it's the public who makes the final decision. People can be fickle, and I know that there is a chance that this album may not hit the same way that my last project did. But whatever happens, I plan to hang in there and keep doing music that I believe in."

The future looks very bright for Faith, who in addition to her own project plans to continue to write and produce for others. Currently she's considering an offer from the Ford modeling agency, as well as several acting roles. The sky is the limit for this young diva, who says that she's ready for whatever opportunities come her way. She says, "As long as I believe in myself, I know that anything is possible." Spoken like a woman with a great deal of faith.

AT THA GRAVE SITE

I wish you can feel what I'm going threw dogg. There's so much pain inside me cause you're gone. Why do we kill each other...why?!

"To those who have lost their loved ones, I feel your pain."

Why can't we respect one another, love one another.

Why can't we share this world together? I wish we can take away all the guns.

I will always remember you dogg. I would give it all up just to have you back.... We need to stop the killing over all this mess...word, being jealous, material stuff, all of it, its not worth a life. It's too much pain for mothers and fathers to go threw no more dogg. Let's ride dogg.

Activists condemning "The Secret Diary of Desmond Pfeiffer"

Los Angeles (AP)— Black activists are condemning "The Secret Diary of Desmond Pfeiffer," an upcoming UPN comedy set during the Civil War, saying that it makes fun of slavery.

"This show desensitizes the pain and devastating suffering of slavery," said Ron Wright, pastor of the Emmanuel AME Church in Los Angeles.

"There is no compromise on this. This show need not air," said Danny Bakewell, head of the Brotherhood Crusade civil rights group.

Bakewell and Wright said they plan to organize a protest to demand that the show be kept off the air, and say they will target advertisers if it does appear.

The network has no plans to yank the show, UPN President Dean Valentine told the Los Angeles Times. "We have nothing to feel bad about," he said. "They can march up and down the street all they want to."

The series, set to debut Oct. 5, is a farce about a black English nobleman who winds up as a servant and adviser to Abraham Lincoln.

Chi McBride, who plays Pfeiffer, said he anticipated the controversy but stands by the show.

"If this were a comedy about slavery, I would not be involved," he said.

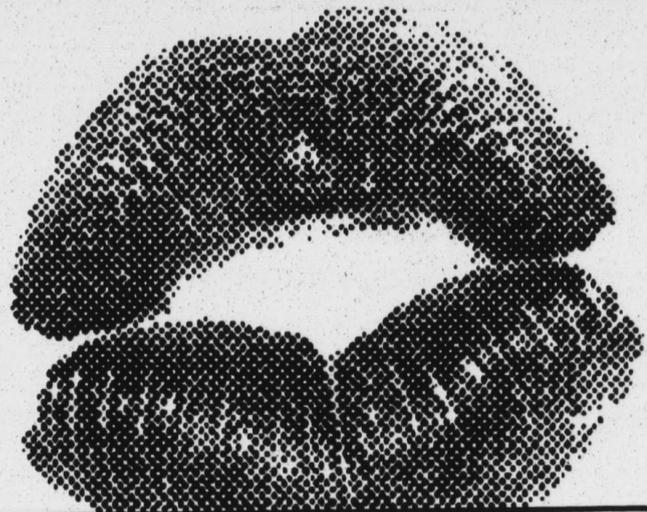

There are a few jokes referring to slavery in early episodes, including one in which Lincoln's chief of staff sees the title character relaxing in the kitchen and remarks, "The slaves haven't been emancipated yet, Pfeiffer. Get your feet off that table."

Valentine said the pilot was shown to black groups, who "found it incredibly funny."

He said the network has gone out of its way to avoid alienating blacks. "The last thing we want to do is offend an important part of our constituency."

Chi McBride, who plays Pfeiffer, said he anticipated the controversy but stands by the show.

15 Classic Years!

... us with a celebration

Coca-Cola Circle City Classic

We are what you have helped us become ... Classic! Over the past 15 years, the Classic has grown from a football game to a week full of activities for everyone to enjoy. It is a showcase of the spirit, energy and tradition of America's historically black colleges.

This premier national event is staged by more than 1,500 volunteers and attracts over 100,000 people to downtown Indianapolis each year. Behind the scenes, Indiana Black Expo, Inc., and Indiana Sports Corporation, two not-for-profit organizations with deep roots in the Indianapolis community, collaborate to organize the Classic.

The Classic exists to celebrate, elevate and educate about African American excellence. Its participants are also its beneficiaries. Achieving cultural excellence is the purpose, the process and the product. Everyone involved is vested on some level. They invest in the values. The Classic is an opportunity for each person to hold onto the bar of excellence while touching someone else.

Be part of the excellence.
Celebrate the Classic with us!

Will Internet set African Americans free?

By DAVID FARRELL
The Detroit News

Wayne State professor Rosie Albritton was dragged online kicking and screaming while in graduate school eight years ago. Today she gives speeches about the wonders of the Internet and serves as the host of an international e-mail chat group.

William Jordan launched his online service two years ago with only one commercial customer. He now reports that businesses are lining up to join his service.

Albritton and Jordan are not simply the latest examples of online success stories. They are at the front of what appears to be the next big trend in cyberspace—the movement of minorities, particularly African-Americans, online. “The Internet is a gift from God to the black community,” Jordan said. “The Internet is tailor-made for us. I encourage everyone I meet to go online.”

Many blacks seem to be doing just that. Although still greatly outnumbered by whites in cyberspace, (only 3 to 5 percent of online users are African-American) blacks are streaming online, lured by a growing number of sites delivering Afrocentric content.

Jordan's online service, Melanet, is a good example. It bills itself as offering “the uncut Black experience” and carries the motto: “Building Upon the Legacy of Our Ancestors.”

“We are offering the entire world the experience of the black experience, so the entire world can benefit from it,” Jordan said.

Like many other commercial Internet sites, Melanet offers up the broadest possible range of content within its focused scope. The site features lists of black businesses, a special children's section called “Watoto” and even a wedding guide for couples who want a traditional African ceremony.

Albritton's discussion group, Afritech, takes a more narrow approach. Primarily set up as a forum for black professionals and academics to discuss technical issues, Afritech has recently seen its subscriber list grow to include students and African immigrants to the United States.

“People are looking for an African connection,” Albritton said. “They are happy to find us.”

Both Jordan and Albritton are among a growing list of black Internet evangelists, online leaders who tout the global computer network as a way for African-Americans to forge a new sense of community and bootstrap themselves out of the cycle of poverty and social exclusion. Perhaps the best-known and most influential among them is New York talk-show host and journalist Tony Brown.

Each week, Brown devotes an afternoon radio show to what he calls his “cyberspace club,” where he interviews black computer experts and exhorts his listeners to get plugged in.

The show is wildly popular, and Brown credits a lot of his success to his continuing emphasis on computer topics.

He says people are responding to his simple message: Get a computer or get left behind.

“What I'm emphasizing is that for every black family to become empowered they need to have computers,” he said.

“The 21st century won't be about blacks or whites, or sexism and racism. It will be about the haves and have-nots. The haves will have computers. The have-nots won't.”

Brown is so convinced that computers will liberate the black community, he is launching his own online service later this month. Called Tony Brown Online, it will be a place where blacks can meet one another, set up electronic storefronts and take advantage of distance-learning educational opportunities.

Forging an online community and becoming computer literate is crucial for blacks, Brown said.

“There is no way the black community is going to catch up with white society under the current (economic and social) system,” Brown said. “But with a computer, you can take any person from poverty to the middle class. That's what we're going to do.”

Brown and other online proponents argue that the Internet de-emphasizes and can even erase issues such as race. After all, no one knows what color you are on the Internet unless you tell them.

“The Internet also levels the playing field for African Americans,” Jordan insists. “It's a new technology that no one has figured out yet, so we are able to get in on the ground floor just like everyone else is. That's equality.”

Some experts think Jordan's view is overly optimistic, saying it is unrealistic to expect a box filled with microchips and wires to overcome entrenched social and economic barriers.

“It is important that we keep the technology in perspective and not expect it to fundamentally change our lives,” said David Sobel, legal counsel for the Electronic Privacy Information Center, a Washington, D.C.-based organization concerned with civil liberties and privacy issues on the Net.

“This technology is not a cure for cancer. It is not a way of fighting poverty. It is important to remember what this technology really is—a way for people to communicate with one another.”

The black community definitely will benefit from being plugged into the Net, but there are still many real hurdles to overcome before that happens on any meaningful level, Sobel said.

First, there's the question of access. The $2,000 price tag for a new computer system is too steep for many people, black and white.

In addition, there are cultural reasons why blacks have shown a reluctance to embrace computer technology. The stereotype of a computer nerd—a geeky, white, unsocial kid who sits enthralled in front of a computer monitor for hours at a time—doesn't appeal to many black youngsters.

That cultural gulf is even evident in Internet nomenclature, says Stafford Battle, co-author of The African American Resource Guide to the Internet.

Computer geeks talk about “surfing the Net.”

“Well, most black people don't surf. We cruise,” he said in a recent Newsweek magazine article.

Before computer technology makes a real impact on the African-American community, the number of blacks online will have to increase significantly, experts say.

According to a survey of 54,000 homes commissioned last year by the National Telecommunications and Information Administration, only about one in four (28.6 percent) white households had a computer. Only slightly more than one in ten—11.1 percent—of black households had computers. That number, while growing, is still too small to have a sweeping social or economic effect on the larger community, Sobel said.

Brown and other Internet proponents ignore that kind of analysis and concentrate instead on what they call the larger picture. They emphasize that the trend of African Americans flocking online is very clear, and they couldn't be happier.

“I meet hundreds of people a week about computers,” Brown said. “No one knows exactly what our lives will be like, but everyone knows technology is changing how we live and work.”

“One thing we know for sure, if we don't have technical skills, we will be in big, big trouble.”

IN CASE YOU ARE ASKED

By WOODY M. COLLINS

Make it last more than a few days

The typical trade show or business expo lasts just two to three days. Normally, a business would consider the show or expo a success if it derived enough sales to cover the cost associated with the event. The cost of participating in the show or expo is a one-time expense. But a lot of businesses think the benefits are also one time and last just a few days. With some planning and the appropriate information technology, a business can derive benefits from a show or expo for the entire year. A website on the Internet can give your business year-round exposure to customers, thereby making your event experience last forever.

Let's look at this year's Black Expo. It was another successful event for many businesses. Thousands of visitors (potential customers) and small businesses came from many miles away to participate in one of the greatest and biggest African American events in the United States. I spent considerable time visiting each booth to collect business cards and flyers from the vendors. From the electronic commerce perspective, I found only 30 percent of the vendors used an e-mail address or a website on their literature. But of the companies that were “electronic commerce ready,” more than 61 percent had websites in addition to e-mail access. Nevertheless, I concluded that many small- and medium-sized businesses approached the Black Expo from a “weekend event” perspective. Hundreds of vendors just came to sell or offer for sale their products at the physical 1998 Black Expo. The Black Expo was viewed as a single, one-time, sales event and not as the start of a yearlong virtual Black Expo. Many small businesses did not provide their customers or potential customers the opportunity to purchase their product or service after the Black Expo was closed. The marketing aspect of business was missing.

Some companies came to the Black Expo to sell and market their company, products and services. The size of the company had little to do with the absence of a marketing attitude. For example, the United Parcel Service (UPS) booth was not there to ship your purchases home for you. UPS came to market its company as a great place to work, and to let you know more about its products and services. UPS provided brochures, lighted buttons, bags, pens, and other trinkets to remind you of the company long after the Black Expo had closed. The website for UPS was prominently displayed on most items being given away. The same type of marketing effort was noted in numerous small businesses. The best example by a small business was the “Picture King Warehouse” booth from Arlington, Texas. First of all, it was the only business to display its website address on the Expo placard below its name. The owner of Picture King stated that his

The incredible non-thinking machine

By CLAYTON EVANS

More than any other machine, computers, symbolize the late 20th century. We find computers in homes, schools, libraries, stores, cars, and virtually anywhere else we go.

Machines that less than twenty years ago were relegated to the realm of science and Radio Shack hobbyists now seem so commonplace that many of us find it hard to imagine life without them.

It's strange to think that even though computers form such an integral part of the modern landscape, many people have not the slightest idea how they operate. Keys are pressed—that part is easy.

The mouse is moved from one spot to another—OK.

Somehow, these simple actions cause complex calculations to transform a spreadsheet or pull up World Wide Web pages from another continent.

Science fiction writers often point out that advanced technology from other worlds would look like magic to us. In fact, our own technology appears as magic to most of the population.

But computers are no more mythical than can openers or cars.

Regardless of their price or size, they are machines good at doing math, and that's about it.

The basic concepts behind their inner workings can be explained in simple terms.

Computers aren't so useful because of transdimensional warp powers located deep within their circuitry, but rather because of the ingenious ways that humans devise to take advantage of the limited functionality they offer.

In other words, computers can't think, at least in the way we normally define the word.

Computers aren't “smart.” They don't have flashes of insight or write novels. They don't display emotions, although they can act temperamental. They just work very quickly with many tiny pieces of information. To understand what really makes modern computers tick, for African-Americans, it helps to go back in time when they actually ticked.

We'll “E” ya next time for the “Genealogy” of the electronic wonders!

Coca-Cola signs multi-year deal with Soul Train's Don Cornelius

Coca-Cola USA is jumping on board. The Soul Train with a three-year sponsorship agreement with Don Cornelius Productions, Inc., creators and producers of the long-running “Soul Train” weekly entertainment program.

According to the agreement, Coca-Cola USA will be the exclusive beverage sponsor of The Soul Train Music Awards, The Soul Train Lady of Soul Music Awards, The Soul Train Christmas Starfest and the Soul Train weekly television program.

“Don Cornelius has continued to produce music programs that are both entertaining and extremely relevant to today's teen,” said Todd Putman, managing director, Consumer Marketing, Coca-Cola USA. “We have been successful business partners for about 20 years and this new agreement will carry that relationship into the next millennium.”

In addition to being a long-time sponsor of the weekly music and dance series, Coca-Cola USA was one of the initial sponsors of The Soul Train Music Awards and has been a supporter of the Lady of Soul Music Awards since its inception four years ago.

Under terms of the new agreement, Coca-Cola will have the exclusive rights to advertise and promote company-based products in connection with each activity.

“The new agreement is beneficial for both Coca-Cola USA and Don Cornelius Productions,” explained Putman. “It assures Don Cornelius Productions of important resources to continue producing quality programming and it provides additional opportunities for our company to target African American consumers.”

website was being developed to augment current sales avenues and to make his products available 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. In contrast, I found at three book publishers or resellers that were not "electronic commerce aware." As a matter of fact, one of the book dealers came from Seattle, WA and the business card displayed only a mailing address and toll number (not a toll-free number). Considering the success and popularity of the Amazon.com and Barnes-and-Nobles websites, selling books over the Internet is well established.

The Internet, mainly e-mail and websites, can provide the opportunity to have a virtual Black Expo. Products and services can be displayed, demonstrated, and offered for sale long after the Expo is closed. A small business can have a virtual Black Expo booth on the Internet for as little as $20 a month. I think many businesses would agree that this cost is minimal to the potential benefits of year-round exposure. Small businesses need to become "electronic commerce ready". Granted, most businesses are "electronic commerce aware", but most have not taken the steps to develop an electronic commerce strategy. Get online and make it last forever!

Welcome to Net Power Links' 5-minute guide to the Internet

By JAMIL, D. SHABAZZ
President & CEO
Net Power Links

Introduction
As part of my contribution to the community, I have composed a Beginner's Guide to the Internet. I wrote this article for those of you who are browsing from AOL, Prodigy, CompuServe, and MSN, or your local ISP. In fewer than five minutes, I will have you cruising the "Information Superhighway."

This article covers definitions, navigation, and other basic necessities required to be a successful "Internet Guru."

Definitions

You may ask yourself, "Why do I need to know definitions?"

As rudimentary as it seems, a basic knowledge of the "language" will aid in understanding the Internet. Again, I promise to be brief.

Internet

A network of computers linked up by phone lines. By reading this page, you are learning about being a part of the Internet. By the way, there is no company called "Internet." Think of the Internet as a universe, and your online service as a planet that is part of that universe.

Web Browser

Think of this as your spaceship that you use to explore different parts of the universe. The browser lets you travel the Internet. I am partial to Netscape Navigator and Internet Explorer. You will have to judge for yourself. Both browsers are free to download.

Bookmark

On your browser's toolbar, click on Bookmark, and then click on

Add Bookmark. These actions allow you to go back to any pages that you want to revisit in the future. Caution: Use the bookmark feature often. It is easy to get sidetracked, due to all the links (a link is defined below) that you will encounter along the way. It will happen to you, and when you attempt to get back to a site, you won't remember the address or even how you got there! If I had a dollar for every time this happened to me, I would be a rich man! (This article contains interesting websites, too, so give them a try.)

Search Engines

You may find your browser to be pretty pathetic. As an AOL subscriber, I was frustrated at my searches; I could not seem to find what I was searching for. A search engine takes care of that; it will do the searching for you! I find Yahoo and Excite to be the best; again, you be the judge. I will show you how to access them in the fourth minute!

Links

Links are quick routes to other web pages that may be similar or related in some fashion. This is another way for you to navigate the Internet. I find these links most helpful, but also very addicting. You will soon find out for yourselves!

Plug-Ins

Plug-Ins are what makes the Internet exciting. These are "add-ons" to your web browser. That is why I recommend Netscape; it has a ton of 'em, and it is easy to plug 'em in! Examples of plug-ins that are a must include: RealAudio—which allows your PC to receive Real-Time Radio broadcasts over the Internet. And VXTreme—which is real-time video over the Internet.

Shockwave, by Macromedia, is pretty awesome, too! Note: I have links to these sites on my "link list" (see at the end). For example, www.realaudio.com

Freeware/Shareware

These terms are used synonymously, and, technically, they should not be! There are sites on the Internet from which you can download software programs. Freeware is, well, free! Most plug-ins are freeware. Shareware comes in a couple of forms: You might receive a "scaled down" version (one that does not have all the bells and whistles activated), or you might receive shareware that is in "beta testing," which means it is in a test phase and therefore may still have a few bugs in it. Some programs have an evaluation period for you to try them out before you are asked to buy them. Finally, some require a registration number that is provided when you pay for it.

I estimate that I have purchased about 95 percent of the software I use. I am a firm believer in the idea that if you use it, you should pay for it. These developers are in business, and without cash, they will not be able to continue to develop better software.

ISP

ISP stands for "Internet Service Provider." This is your "planet." I used to inhabit the AOL planet, but like yourselves (I know, because you are here!), I grew tired of the planet rather quickly. And what is up with never being able to connect? I soon found myself out roaming the "universe" more than I stayed at home. If you have experienced this, I suggest canceling your service with the national providers and going with a local company that offers direct access to the Net. Not only will you become more proficient on the Internet, your pocket book will thank you as well! The typical local ISP will usually charge a flat rate with unlimited time! And, trust me, you will need it!

IRC

IRC stands for Internet Relay Chat. Yes, the Internet has its own chat areas, in case you were wondering. So, when you switch to a local ISP, you won't miss all that fun and exciting chatting that you love so much. IRC is by far superior to any so-called "chat Area"; there are essentially no limits to what you can do. I like playing chess with my IRC friends! You can download this application by going to www.download.com.

Virus

A virus is a program that tells your computer to do something bad! Here is how to avoid viruses: You need to go to my link list and link to a shareware site to download a virus scanner. You need to look for one that will do the following:

- Automatically scan when you start your computer
 - Stay running in the background while you have your PC on
 - Be able not only to detect but also to delete or fix the damaged file
- Be able to make a "disaster recovery diskette"—bootsector viruses do not allow you to start up your computer! You must protect against that! (And by the way, don't forget: BACKUP YOUR HARD DRIVE! (Or at least the files you continually update) I know it is a pain—but you will thank me when your system crashes.

Navigation

Now that you know a thing or two about the Internet, let's put it into practice. You are probably wondering how many sites there are on the Net. Well, since new sites are popping up all the time and no one can honestly say what all is out there, you are gonna need help. And this help comes by way of search engines and links. Search engines are self-explanatory, which is probably what landed you on the Internet in the first place!

Links usually show up in a different color from the rest of the text around it. At the end of this article, you can check out the rest of my top 10 weekly links—and please do; you are more than welcome! Or, you can e-mail me at webpro@netpowerlinks.com.

Labor shortages, wage increase are greatest challenges, say Midwest executives

Good help is getting even harder to find, according to executives in the Midwest. Of the 700 chief executive and chief financial officers surveyed recently by Bank of America, nearly one-quarter (24 percent) say the greatest challenge facing their business is hiring good employees. Among those executives whose top concern was finding good workers, the numbers were highest in Michigan (30 percent) and Ohio (32 percent). Other significant business challenges mentioned in the survey include increasing market share (15 percent), cost cutting (15 percent), and increased competitive pressures (14 percent).

Paxson Communications Partners With EPCOM

Paxson Communications Corporation has entered into a partnership agreement with EPCOM, L.L.C. to sell its Cedar Rapids station, KPXR-TV-48, to the minority-owned broadcast company. Paxson will also assign various contracts and rights that the Company controls to EPCOM to construct four new television stations. The agreements allow EPCOM, founded by minority broadcaster, Ed Parker, the former President and Chief Financial Officer of Blackstar L.L.C., to own, manage and operate the five stations under an affiliation with PAX TV.

Under the current FCC rules, Paxson would hold non-voting minority equity in EPCOM as a result of the agreement, but both EPCOM and Paxson will petition the FCC to allow Paxson to own 49% of the voting stock of EPCOM and for Paxson's interest in the five stations not to count toward the FCC's 35% national ownership limitation.

Paxson's Chairman, Lowell "Bud" Paxson said, "This unique partnership with EPCOM is just one example of the many initiatives we proposed in July to undertake to encourage and assist new minority and non-minority entrants with building and acquiring broadcast properties. Ed Parker is a historically successful minority broadcaster who we believe will play a very strong role in the expansion of minority broadcast ownership across the country. This transaction with EPCOM will bring to a total of 13 the number of broadcast licenses held by minority broadcasters who Paxson has assisted in the financing, construction and operation of their television stations."

Ed Parker said, "I am excited about this opportunity. Through numerous successful ventures with minority and non-minority broadcasters, Bud Paxson and Paxson Communications have shown that major broadcasters can do good and well at the same time. Investments and strategic alliances with qualified minority broadcasters is just good business."

Pax Communications owns and operates the nation's seventh and newest broadcast network - PAX TV, the national family entertainment network.

U.S. Makes Buying Treasury Securities Easier

The U.S. Treasury is making it easier for individuals to buy government securities by lowering minimum purchase amounts and expanding online access. This comes as government debt has become the world's most popular security. Global investors stampeded into the relative safety of Treasuries this year as economic turmoil in Asia and Russia spreads through global financial markets.

Treasury bills and notes have traditionally been viewed as the domain of large institutional investors such as pension funds and insurance companies. With the Treasury lowering the minimum investment for bills maturing in one year or less to $1,000 from $10,000, more individuals can now take part in the $4.5 trillion government debt market. Individual investors can buy securities through the government's Treasury Direct program on the Internet at the Bureau of Public Debt's website. The address is: www.publicdebt.treas.gov.

Michael R. Bloomberg Receives the "Bridgebuilders Award"

The Reverend Jesse L. Jackson, Sr., The Rainbow/PUSH Coalition and the Citizen Education Fund honored Michael Bloomberg, founder of Bloomberg Financial Markets, with its Wall Street project's "Bridgebuilders Award" at this year's annual conference. The "Bridgebuilders Award" recognizes Michael Bloomberg's efforts to build a bridge between the minority community and the world of finance.

Commenting on the award, the Reverend Jesse L. Jackson thanked Michael Bloomberg for his multi-million dollar gift of BLOOMBERG terminals to the United Negro College Fund as well as the creation of the Bloomberg/API Index (BAPI) which has given much needed visibility to African American-owned or operated publicly traded companies. He said, "Michael Bloomberg is a man of great integrity. His incredible and unique relationships with African American newspapers and urban radio stations, exemplify the message of our Wall Street Project; that inclusion is the key to economic growth."

Michael Bloomberg commenting on the award said, "The Bloomberg agreements mean greater coverage of the stock market, African Americans in the business community as well as investment advice on a weekly and daily basis. There is great wealth in the African American consumer market and we are glad to help make a difference in this underserved financial market."

"Michael Bloomberg is a man of great integrity."

Bloomberg Financial Markets, founded in 1981, is a global multi-media based distributor of information services, combining news, data and analysis for financial markets and businesses.

1986, allows individual investors to open an account with the government. The system credits interest payments electronically and automatically reinvests maturing securities into new Treasuries on request. One benefit of the program is the avoidance of transaction costs and management fees associated with buying bonds through a broker or investing in a mutual fund. U.S. securities can be sold for a smaller fee than required by most brokers. In October, investors with Treasury Direct accounts will also be able to buy securities with a touch-tone phone.

"Bills and notes are most popular with individuals because they're seen as equivalent to cash."

Deregulation in finance and banking has led to looser control of the capital flow, with money market funds serving many of the roles that savings accounts played in the past. Still, Treasury bills and notes offer higher returns than most bank certificates of deposit. Treasuries maturing in six months yield 5.10 percent, compared with an average of 4.69 for six-month CDs. Those returns don't take into account the exemption to state and local taxes that all U.S. government debt carry. That can add up to a significant savings in high tax states.

Bills and notes are most popular with individuals and international investors because they're seen as equivalent to cash. They're favored by investors in times of turmoil because they get their principal back quickly and the securities are among the most easily traded.

Bethune-Cookman 1998 Outlook

Bethune-Cookman College head football Coach Alvin Wyatt, Sr. was eager for pre-season camp to kick off. With a host of lettermen and starters returning, coupled with one of the best recruiting classes in college history, the Wildcats are ready to successfully implement phase II of their "Return to Glory" campaign. The 1997 season was a heartbreaker for the first-year Wildcat coach, whose 4-7 team was much better than its record indicated. However, Wyatt was extremely pleased with his team's overall performance and plans to build where the '97 Wildcats left off last season. "We had a super ending," Wyatt said. "We're focusing now on getting our team prepared to take us to the next level."

The Wildcats are currently undefeated in the 1998 season.

Alvin Wyatt, Sr. - Head Football Coach

On November 27, 1996, Alvin Wyatt, Sr. was named the ninth head football coach at Bethune-Cookman College, becoming the sixth alumnus to head the program. Wyatt has been just as much of a fixture at the college as "Cy" McClairen, having served on the athletic staff for 23 years, and was a member of the football staff from 1975 - 1990, before returning in 1994 as defensive coordinator and assistant head football coach for McClairen. He also served as an assistant head football coach and defensive coordinator under former head coach Larry Little from 1983 - 1990.

During his 18 seasons on the football staff, Wyatt has coached former standouts Cedric McKinnon, (the colleges all time tackler) and member of the 1995 & 1996 Arena Football League Champions, Tampa Bay Storm; Roger Jackson, a scout with the Minnesota Vikings; former Houston Oiler Lee Williams; Gordon Sunkett; Mark Irvin; Jeff Alexander; John Bostic; Brian Dudley; Charles Cornelius and several other outstanding Wildcat players.

Before returning to Daytona Beach, he played professional football in the National Football League, being drafted by the Oakland Raiders in 1970 and spending three seasons with the Buffalo Bills and completing his NFL stint with the Houston Oilers in 1974. He finished his pro career with the now defunct World Football League from 1974-75, playing for the Jacksonville Sharks.

Returning to Bethune Cookman in 1975, he became a defensive assistant and later was promoted to defensive coordinator under former teammate and then head football coach, Larry Little as defensive coordinator. Al helped lead the "CATS" to their first MEAC championship in 1984; B-C finished runner up in 1985 and won the conference championship again in 1988.

Wyatt first made his mark on the gridiron as a standout for the Wildcats from 1966-69 by earning All American and All SIAC honors during his illustrious career. A defensive back who was probably years ahead of his time, Wyatt set numerous school and conference records, including : career interceptions, a 102 yd kickoff return and a 25.9 punt return average. One remarkable honor that he holds is that in 1969, his senior season, he was elected the SIAC Offensive Player of the Year.

Aside from his football duties, he was the head women's basketball coach directing them to two MEAC crowns, in the early 80's while coaching over 400 games and finishing with a record of 260-200.

Howard University - 1998 Football Season Outlook

With 18 starters returning from last season, the Howard University football program is primed itself for an outstanding season.

After getting off to a slow start in 1997, losing three of its first four games, the Bison overcame numerous injuries and rallied to finish strong, winning six of their last seven games.

Much of the team's early season offensive woes can be attributed to the injuries and inexperience on the offensive line. After taking its lumps, the unit came along nicely down the stretch and should be a factor in the team's quest for success in 1998. The leader of the group will be All-MEAC candidate center Fred Ray, who is a three-year starter.

All-American candidate Ted "Sweet Flight" White hopes to rebound from last season where he put up some impressive numbers but did not quite measure up to his phenomenal stats the previous season when he was selected Black College Player of the Year and third-team I-AA All-American. White still remains one of the most dangerous passers in college football and the added experience of the offensive line, along with a stable of outstanding running backs and some talented wide receivers, should make for a successful campaign.

The defensive unit was also beset by several early season injuries that forced a lot of new and unproven players to step up. It should pay big dividends with the return of eight starters. The defensive line boasts one of the top players in the country in senior defensive end and preseason MEAC Defensive Player of the Year Marques Douglas. Douglas is an impact player because of his ability to make the players around him better. He should be even more effective with the return of Roy Sampson, a 6-9, 280 pound senior defensive end and pro prospect who was having an All-Conference season until an injury cut his season short.

The specialty teams play was nowhere near where it has been in the past and the coaching staff hopes to shore up that area.

Steve Wilson ~ Bison Head Football Coach

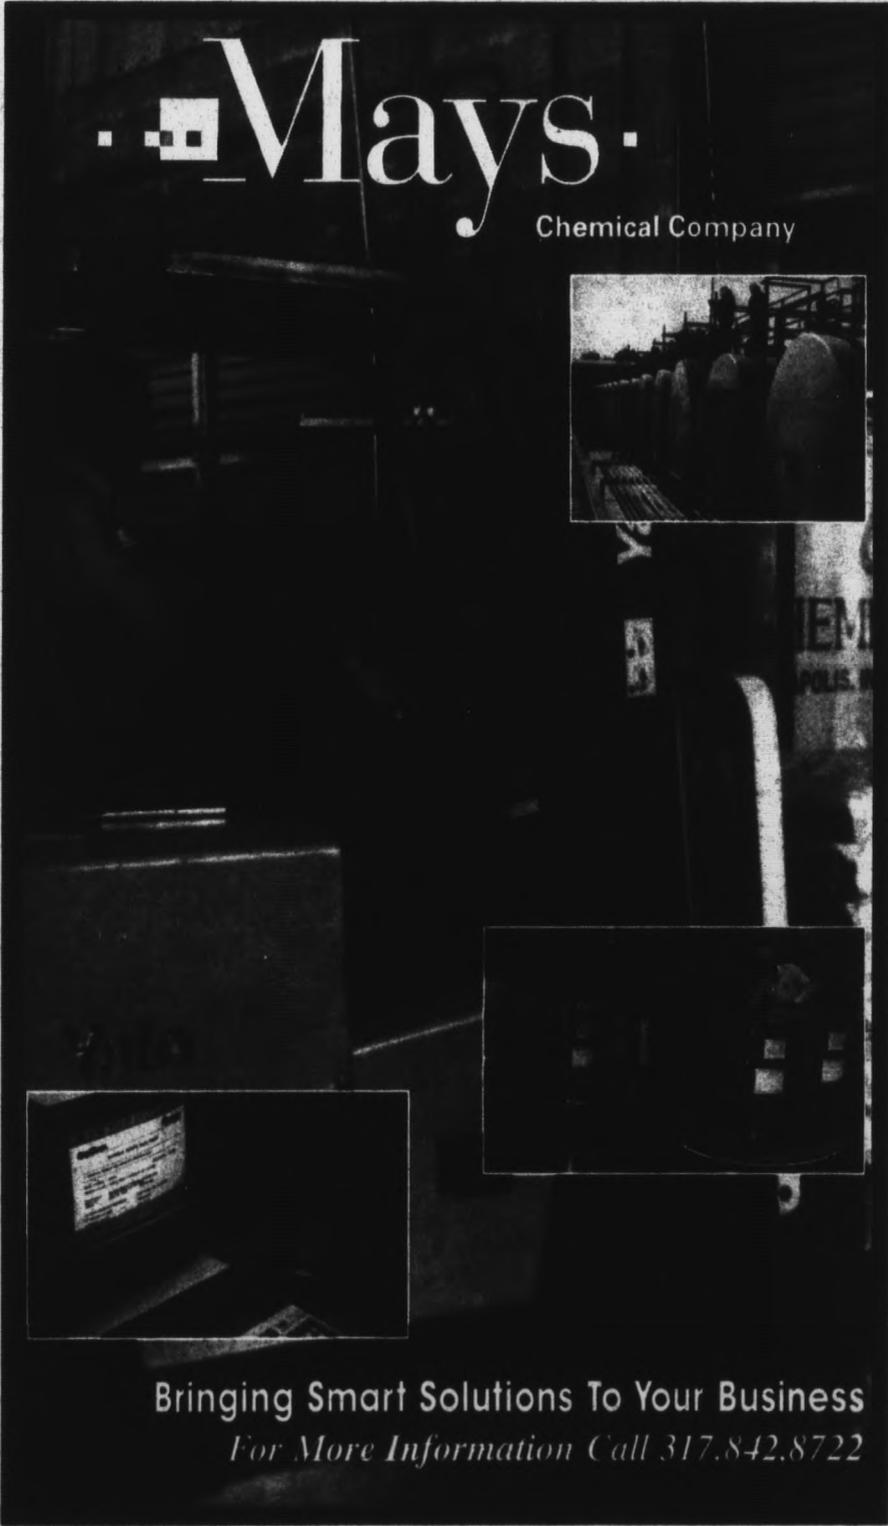

In less than 10 years, Steve Wilson has developed the Howard University football program into one of the best in the country. In 1993, he led the Bison to an 11-0 mark and the school's first ever NCAA I AA play-off appearance. He was honored as Coach of the Year by the Mid Eastern Athletic Conference (MEAC), Washington Pigskin Club, Washington Touchdown Club, the 100% Wrong Club of Atlanta and Division I AA.

Three years later, Wilson guided the Bison to an impressive 10-2 win loss record and featured one of the most explosive offenses in Division I AA. Howard went on to win the Heritage Bowl by defeating Southern University, 27-24, and capturing its second Black National Championship title in three years. Once again, Wilson received several awards for his accomplishments.

Regarded as one of the bright, innovative young coaches in his profession, Wilson has turned Howard into one of the most entertaining and explosive teams in college football. Since his arrival on the Hilltop, professional scouts have found their way on campus. The latest Bison to play in the NFL is Billy Jenkins of the St. Louis Rams.

Wilson served notice in his first season, leading the Bison to an 8-3 mark and a second place finish in the MEAC while being named conference coach of the year, a rare honor for a first year coach.

Wilson has demonstrated his readiness for the job by his ability to maintain an outstanding coaching staff that has done a tremendous job of preparing the Bison each time out. To hone his skills and knowledge of the game, Wilson learned from some of the finest head coaches in football including former Dallas Cowboys head coach Tom Landry; former Chicago Bears and current New Orleans Saints head coach Mike Ditka; former Denver Broncos and current Atlanta Falcons general manager/head coach Dan Reeves, and Gene Stallings, who coached the University of Alabama to the 1992 Division I A National Championship.

A look back at the Circle City Classic

The inspiration came in 1983, when a group of men headed by Rev. Charles Williams, president of Indiana Black Expo and Indiana State Rep. Bill Crawford attended what many consider the Grand-daddy of Classic games, the Bayou Classic in New Orleans. This game pits Grambling State University against Southern University in a football game which has become an spectacle.

Williams thought such an event in Indianapolis had potential to develop the same way; and from that germination of an idea has grown the week-long event which is known as the Coca-Cola Circle City Classic. As the Classic enters its 15th year, here's a look back at how it has grown over the years.

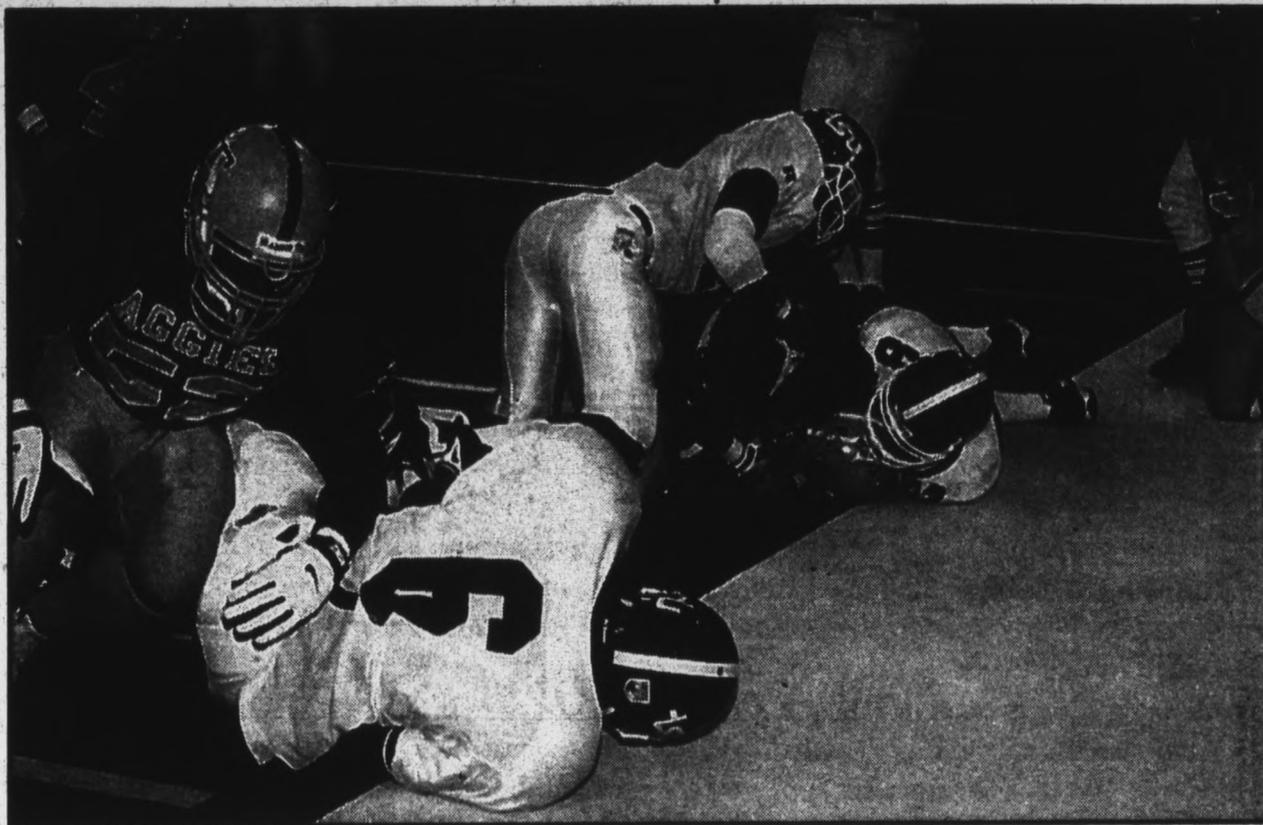

1984. The first Circle City Classic is played between Grambling State and Mississippi Valley State. The game attracts 40,752 as the two teams battle down to the closing seconds. Future NFL great Jerry Rice hauls in a 67-yard touchdown pass from Willie Totten with 1:41 remaining to give Mississippi Valley State 48-36 victory.

1985. Mississippi Valley State returned for a 28-15 victory over Tennessee State before 40,983.

1986. It was close, but the Central State Marauders overwhelmed the FAMU Rattlers with 28 fourth quarter points for what remains the biggest blowout in Circle City Classic history: CSU 41, FAMU 3. Tracy Brame is crowned the first Princess at the Circle City Classic Princess Coronation.

1987. For the first time, two former Circle City Classic participants clash when Central State and Tennessee State collide. In one of the Classic's closest contests, TSU fell short, 31-28. A total of 47,415 tickets are sold. Shari Hubert is crowned at the Circle City Classic Princess Coronation. The Major Taylor Award, named for Marshall "Major" Taylor, a Black cyclist in the early 1900s, is established to honor individuals who encourage excellence in the next generation of athletes. Ray Crowe, a legendary Indiana high school basketball coach, is the first recipient.

1988. Jackson State makes its first appearances in the Circle City Classics against Florida A&M, and the result is the only tie in Classic history. The Major Taylor Awardee was Doug Williams, then head football coach at Morehouse College and former NFL MVP. Regina Cross was crowned Miss Coca-Cola Circle City Classic.

Coca-Cola Circle City Classic overview and history

In 1983 during construction of the then named Hoosier Dome (now RCA Dome) and before the Baltimore Colts moved to Indianapolis, there was a significant effort mounted to utilize the new facility. The Mayor's Office and a blue ribbon committee of community leaders provided the impetus and functioned as a clearinghouse to attract events that eventually included a Chicago Bears pre-season game, Notre Dame vs. Purdue, Indiana vs. Illinois and other regional football rivalries. The Mayor's committee had also funded a fact-finding trip to New Orleans for the Bayou Classic, which by then had been played for several years in the Superdome. Approval was then given for a football game between Mississippi Valley State and Grambling State University. While the design of that event met the city's criteria of tourism and revenue generation for the new stadium, the Circle City Classic leadership would add its own agendas:

- 1.) a demonstration of African-American economic strength on sustaining the event.
- 2.) the importance of education and specifically the viability of historically black institutions and
- 3.) the provision of annual scholarships from the proceeds of the football game. Bolstered by the volunteer spirit in Indianapolis, the leadership of Indiana Black

Expo and their partner for the Classic, Indiana Sports Corporation, and a $150,000 grant from the Lilly Endowment; the Circle City Classic became an instant success with nearly 40,000 attending the first game on October 13, 1984. Since that day when Jerry Rice and a strange new offensive set, never before seen called the "no huddle, no backfield", staggered a powerful Grambling football team 48-36 and when the bands battled for sixty minutes after the football game, the excitement has never waned. Over the thirteen years of the organization's existence there have been changes, but the original objectives (demonstrating the strength of the African-American consumer, highlighting the advantages at historically black universities and providing scholarships) have not changed. Staff has been added, volunteer numbers have increased significantly, fans come in greater numbers from farther away and budgets have grown in part to accommodate the demands of football programs laboring under new financial restrictions and also in some measure due to the competition of other "Classics" that have appeared in Chicago, Detroit, Washington D.C., Tampa, Dallas, Atlanta, Memphis, Columbus, Los Angeles and St. Louis since our first game in 1984.

About Howard University

Founded in 1867 as a private university to educate freed slaves and their descendants, Howard University is the only predominantly black comprehensive university in the country. It consists of 12 fully accredited colleges and schools and many institutes and research centers. The University awards degrees in 23 fields and offers almost 200 areas of professional and graduate study.

Howard's 10,500 students represent diverse ethnic groups, nationalities and creeds. They are from all 50 states and more than 100 foreign countries. Its faculty is equally cosmopolitan and includes the largest concentration of black scholars in any single institution of higher learning.

As in the past, Howard continues to graduate significant percentages of the nation's black physicians, dentists, lawyers, educators, ministers, and other professionals.

The University has four campuses. The main campus consists of 89 acres located in northwest Washington, DC, on an elevated site that affords panoramic views of landmarks in the nation's capital.

During the 1970's, the University underwent the most rapid expansion in its history when seven of its 12 schools and colleges were added. Howard's physical plant, valued in excess of $400 million, includes the Armour J. Blackburn University Center, a focal point for students, faculty and community activities, and the Howard University Hospital, which adjoins the Colleges of Dentistry and Medicine.

The University also operates a commercial FM radio station (WHUR) and a public television station (WHMM), which serve as training facilities for students enrolled in the schools of Communication and Engineering.

Howard's efforts are headed by H. Patrick Swygert. President Swygert comes to Howard from the State University of New York at Albany where he served as president. He received his undergraduate degree (1965) and his law degree (1968) from Howard University.

Mary McLeod Bethune Founder of Bethune-Cookman College

Mary McLeod Bethune's accomplishments in the areas of education, politics, international relations, religion and cultural endeavors were more than most people would dare to strive for.

Born on her parents' farm near Mayesville, South Carolina, Mary McLeod Bethune, the 15th child of former slaves, became an outstanding example of how a leader can expand the notion of service as a vital component of higher education.

After receiving her education at Scotia Seminary in North Carolina and Moody Bible Institute in Chicago, Dr. Bethune began her career by starting a mission school. There she began to dream of her own school. In 1904, she founded the Daytona Normal and Industrial Institute for Girls of Daytona Beach. In 1923 the school merged with the Cookman Institute of Jacksonville, founded in 1872 by the Reverend D. S. B. Darnell, and became the Daytona-Cookman Collegiate Institute.

Both institutions were established on Christian principles. At the time of the merger, the institution became affiliated with the Board of Education and Ministry of the United Methodist Church. Today Bethune-Cookman College continues that relationship and enjoys the benefits of strong spiritual and financial support from United Methodists throughout Florida and the world.

In 1941, Bethune-Cookman College became a four-year Liberal Arts, career oriented, co-educational and residential institution. Since 1960 the College has received continuous accreditation from the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

Committed to developing the ethical and moral values of its students, Bethune-Cookman College's professors, academic programs and learning environment enable students to journey the pathway to successful careers and productive lives, opening the door of opportunity for a bright future.

Joyner-Kersey receives 1998 Marshall "Major" Taylor Award

The Coca-Cola Circle City Classic is more than gridiron glory and pageantry. It is also a Showcase of commitment - Indiana Black Expo's and the Indiana Sports Corporation's commitment to the future ... to youth. Throughout Classic week, youth become the focal point of activities - including the Black Alumni Council's College Fair and the NIKE Youth Football Clinic and, of course, the presentation of the prestigious Major Taylor Award.

The Marshall "Major" Taylor Award, sponsored by NBD Bank and presented at the annual Circle City Classic Coaches Luncheon, is an annual presentation to an individual who has had a profound impact on youth and athletics.

This award, named for the world champion cyclist who was from the Indianapolis area, embodies the spirit of the Coca-Cola Circle City Classic, and the 1998 recipient - Jackie Joyner-Kersey - certainly embodies that same spirit, both on and off the track.

Jackie Joyner-Kersey, who bid farewell to competition just a few weeks ago, has created a legacy of excellence that remains unparalleled. Here's a brief look at her marvelous career:

A popular rule of thumb in resume writing is "keep it to one page". Good luck to Jackie Joyner-Kersey on that score; she'll need it. The dominant American female track and field athlete since 1984, Joyner-Kersey has been unmatched in her versatility. She owns three number one rankings in the long jump, and six in the heptathlon. Add to that three Olympic golds, a silver and two bronzes, and another four gold medals in the outdoor world championships. The title of "World's Greatest Athlete", so often reserved for gold medalists in the decathlon, can be justly given to Joyner-Kersey.

Her Olympic experience is without match:

1980: Only 18, she finished eighth in the Olympic Trials long jump, jumping 20-4w as a high schooler in her first trip to the big time. She ranked number two in the prep All-America standing in the long jump, behind Carol Lewis.

1984: A stronger athlete after three years of work with Bob Kersey at UCLA. She scored 6579 to break the American record and win the Trials heptathlon. At the start of the final event, the 800, she realized that her brother, Al, had just made the team in the triple jump (Second in 56-4.75). As she described the experience, "I looked up at the screen and thought, 'Oh! Good jump!' but then I figured I had better get around this track in less than 2;18." Later that week, she took second in the long jump (21-10) behind Lewis.

At the Games, the strong favorite in the heptathlon, she finished second to Australia's Glynis Nunn after a tight dual. Leading after the sixth event, she lost it in the 800, partly because of a strained hamstring. "When I lost the gold medal by five points," she told Track & Field News, "I knew it was because of my poor mental approach. I vowed right then I would never again allow myself to be weak mentally." Later, she leaped 22-2.5 to take fifth in the long jump, the top American there.

1988: Joyner-Kersey's best Olympic year ever. She started the season as the World record-holder in the heptathlon, undefeated since her loss in the LA Olympics. In Indianapolis at the Trials, she did even better, with her 7215 tally, breaking the record by 57 points. In the long jump, she safely made the team on her first attempt, then chased the World record: She came close, hitting 24-5.6 on a wind-aided leap.

Joyner-Kersey Continues to Give Back to the Community

In 1989, one of Jackie's personal dreams became a reality with the creation of her Community Foundation - an effort to give

This ambitious project to build a $12.5 million facility in the heart of East St. Louis is just another step in the career of an extraordinary athlete who has made another career out of giving back.

Flo Jo was, and always will be, one of our own

Track and field legend Florence Griffith Joyner, born in the Watts section of Los Angeles and a lifelong California resident, had a strong connection to Indianapolis. The Amateur Athletic Union bestowed the Sullivan Award upon Griffith Joyner here in 1989. On the eve of the 1994 Circle City Classic, Florence received the Major Taylor Award. On each occasion, the city opened its heart to this beautiful, stylish lady.

And with good reason: the legend of "Flo Jo," as she was known worldwide, began right here. Florence came to the 1988 U.S. Olympic Trials at Indiana University Track Stadium as a solid contender to make the American team in the sprint event. By the time she left, she'd captured the world's attention — and she held onto it all the way through the Seoul Olympics. At the Trials, running in eye-catching uniforms with six-inch fingernails, Florence took down the world record for the women's 100 meters to 10.49 — a feat that, on a global level, was considered more mind-boggling than Mark McGwire's 70 home runs. At the Olympics, she won four medals — three gold, one silver — in the sprint and relay events. Her winning time in the 200 at Seoul was a world record 21.34. Both her 100 and 200 meter marks are still on the books.

But it was Griffith Joyner's performance here that set the stage for her spectacular Olympic feats. It was here, too, that the world learned there was much more to Flo Jo: beyond the stylish attire, the flowing hair and the incredible speed was a quiet dignity and a burning concern for community and youth. Long after she retired, Flo Jo worked hard to encourage young people to excel. When little girls told Florence they wanted to be just like her, she would tell them, "Don't be just like me. Be better than me."

Florence Griffith Joyner is gone now, dead at the age of 38. We mourn the passing of a great champion who understood the responsibilities that come with athletic fame. Flo Jo was — and always will be — one of our own.

Sunday at Market Square Arena, USA Track & Field and the Indiana Pacers will host the Florence Griffith Joyner Celebration of Life. The ceremony begins at 4:00 p.m. Numerous sports and civic leaders will take part, and the public is invited to attend. Doors on the west side of MSA will open at 3:30 p.m.

HOWARD UNIVERSITY VS. BETHUNE-COOKMAN COLLEGE

Howard's win over Bethune-Cookman last year in Jacksonville, Florida broke the series tie which stands at 8-9-1. Bethune-Cookman wants to even the score in the RCA Dome this year. Alvin Wyatt Sr.'s Wildcats boast a balanced offense and defense with standout wide receiver James Adderley, who may be the MEAC's all-time receiver by season's end. Coached by Steve Wilson, the Howard Bison are led on defense by quarterback Ted White, and protected by an offensive line averaging 300 pounds. They intend to widen their lead in the series. A Howard victory will require outstanding play by Marques Douglas, Roy Sampson and Chris Rogers on defense.

It is in this time and place that, at last, a chosen daughter is summoned home. But what must she sacrifice to honor the River Mother's call? That question is at least at the heart of this remarkable novel. For women everywhere, Alma's journey is a reminder of the price we all pay for forgetting and for remembering. Help us welcome back this award-winning author of "The River Where Blood is Born."
