LIGHT VOTE IS INDICATED OVER COUNTY

POLITICAL PARTIES GO TO POLLS TO SELECT NOMINEES

NOTING HERE IS SLOW
Than Half The Total Vote Is Accounted For In Many Precincts At Noon

The primary election in Putnam county was a quiet and orderly one, and a fairly representative vote was believed to have been cast by those interested in the outcome.

The interest which had been worked in the county races on the Democratic ticket and the contests for sheriff and assessor in many of the precincts on both the Democratic and Republican tickets, was expected to bring out a vote higher than two years ago, when no township officers were nominated.

The interest in the Democratic primary centered around the contest for sheriff, clerk, auditor, treasurer, and early in the day, partisan workers were busy throughout the county, lining up voters and seeing that they were to the polls. In this city, the student vote again promised to be a determining factor in some of the contests which might be close. Several hundred students were voting during the day and if they vote all the way, as they usually do, it would control some of the contests.

In the precincts where the students there was a heavy vote from that party, and practically all of them voting the Democratic ticket. In some instances, seniors were voting, and they will not be here again next year. Others who appeared not to be legal age were casting their ballots. In some instances objections were made and rarely did they follow their first intentions with affidavits that they were legal voting residents.

The vote was light, as compared to a whole of two years ago. At noon 167 votes had been cast in the Third precinct; 85 out of 450 in the West Third; 192 out of 375 in the South Second; 185 in the south section only 90 out of 400 had voted in the new Northwood precinct, and 70 out of 300 in First Ward.

INDIANA HAS VERY QUIET PRIMARY DAY

VOTE OVER STATE WILL BE EXCEPTIONALLY LIGHT, BELIEF

INDIANAPOLIS, May 6 (UP)—Early reports on Indiana's primary bore out predictions that voting would be exceptionally light in nearly every part of the state.

In the state's two largest cities—Indianapolis and Fort Wayne—balloting was sluggish during the morning hours, with no indication of the political fervor and turmoil which until this year had marked the past several elections and primaries.

Ideal weather did not appear to be stimulating the vote except in farm communities, where it augmented balloting for trustees and precinct committeemen.

All reports received at forenoon were that city balloting was light, and there were no signs of election day disturbances.

ENTER CAR IN RACE

INDIANAPOLIS, May 7 (UP)—Barnesville, O., tiny, waterless port of a score of nationally victorious speed boats, is entering an automobile in the International 500-mile race for $100,000 at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30.

Occupying their winters racing hydroplanes over the southern water circuit, Barnesville sportsmen will spend the next month at the Indianapolis speedway watching the progress of "Buckeye Special," the name of one of their successful water speeders transplanted to the first racing automobile of the group, as it is groomed for the big race.

James H. Booth, of Barnesville, is the entrant of the "Buckeye Special." This youthful sportsman has moved bag and baggage to the trackside. For several years he has driven speed boats in national events, notably the gigantic winter regatta at Miami, Fla.

But he names Chester Gardner, with driving experience over the Indianapolis bricks, to wear the Ohio silks as "Buckeye Special" rolls to the starting tape.

"This automobile racing is all new to us," smiled Booth, in making his entry to T. E. "Pop" Myers, general manager of the Indianapolis speed plant, "but it can't possibly offer any more problems than racing high speed motor boats."

HURLS BRIBE CHARGES AT U. S. SENATE

ARIZONA SOLON STIRS UP EXCITEMENT IN JUDGE PARKER FIGHT

PARKER'S DEFEAT LOOMS
Bitter Opposition Found To Supreme Court Appointee Among Senators. Sen. Watson Active

WASHINGTON, May 6 (UP)—Charges of patronage bribes being offered and the office of a senator being mysteriously rifled embittered the senate today as it neared a vote on the nomination of Judge John J. Parker of North Carolina to be Supreme Court Justice.

The latest poll by the United Press showed 45 for Parker, 50 against him and one doubtful. The value of the figures, however, was not considered high because of the constant switching of positions by a few senators on both sides. Both sides claim a majority.

The vote may come today if Republican Floor Leader Watson permits absent opponents of Parker to pair with his supporters so that the votes of all senators, present or absent, may be registered. Watson served notice late yesterday he would permit no further pairing, whereupon Senator Borah, Rep., Idaho, leader of the opposition, replied, "Well, we will wait until all our votes are here."

In view of this situation, the time of the vote is problematical. Two or three absent opponents of Parker are expected to arrive tomorrow, so it appears likely the vote may not be delayed beyond that date.

The patronage bribe charges made by Senator Ashurst, Dem., Ariz., have aroused senators more than any other angle of the fight. All parties demand an investigation, but thus far no step toward forcing such an inquiry has been made by anyone.

"Call each senator and ask him what he has been offered in return for a vote for Parker," Hurst told the senate. He explained he did not intimate that President Hoover has personally promised any judgeships or ambassadorial posts, or that any senators have been a party to such a deal.

In reply, Watson, Republican leader, and Senator Fess, Rep., Ohio, assistant leader, also called for such an investigation. Both denied any knowledge of patronage offers.

Ashurst claimed to have specific knowledge of one senator who was approached and offered a judgeship. From an authoritative source, it was learned he referred to a Democratic senator opposed to Parker. Both Watson and Fess denied anyone had authority to make such an offer.

The office rifled was that of Senator McKellar, Dem., Tenn., who said no evidence was left behind to indicate who might have done it. He did not connect it with the Parker case, but made a public statement to the senate while the Parker nomination was under consideration.

All along there have been charges that the administration has been exerting great influence to get its nominee confirmed, but nothing so specific and sensational as Ashurst's charges had developed previously.

Construction on Forest Hill Mausoleum To Start Soon

Desirability of Mausoleum Entombment

Physical discomfort, and even sickness, suffering, and death which often follow exposure at our door burial are avoided when the service and entombment take place within the Mausoleum.

Entombment of the body in a clean, dry, ventilated crypt, sealed against every manner of disintegration offers none of the repulsiveness so often felt by those present at the lowering of the remains of their loved ones into the ground and the refilling of the grave. The trend of all things is forward not backward, and Mausoleum burial is the Modern answer in keeping with the finer and more sensitive natures of an advanced civilization.

The Mausoleum will stand through the ages both as a Monument and ever lasting Memorial to the departed ones within its walls. A perpetual endowment fund is to be set aside and placed in trust which guarantees the positive care of every crypt as well as the building.

To the families of the departed ones, it affords the assurance of protection for all times against desecration from whatever source.

"Show me the manner in which a nation cares for its dead and I will measure with mathematical exactness the trend of the sympathies of its people their respect for the laws of their land and their loyalty to high ideals—"

Delays Too Costly

MENT NOT RELIEVED EFFECTS THAT REMAIN ON PAPER

Delays are at present costing all over the country millions of cash. Miles of street paving which preliminary plans done are still "paper" despite the need for employment and the need for more motorizing space. Although the public were, for most paving projects, on the demands of official interferences are often the reason for delays in paving, and no doubt many paved, but for the most part, are more a state of a state of fact. It is considered an ideal communities to build pavements on the fact that there need for more paved streets, paving contract going at reasonable figures. Contractors naturally desire paving outfits busy and paving forces intact. Pavements in towns and cities are paid for by special assessments over a number of years. Paving now will not only benefit themselves and their children, but also the important function of employment. Country's paving task is not only of construction but also of reconstruction. Older and cities possess pavements that are inadequate for modern rebuilding there is an absolute emergency measure. Employment still exists and regardless of promises made by various communities to expedite construction of public works, many have still to make actual progress. A project on paper does not give men jobs. Neither does it give motorists a place to drive.

By some odd quirk the period during which new city officials assume office, is also a season for delay in construction projects. But now that the new officers are ensconced there is no good reason why blue prints should not be transformed into hard surfaced pavements, school houses, court houses, sewers, and so on—without delay.

MAKES ANNOUNCEMENT INDIANAPOLIS, May 5 (UP)—Complete redistricting of the State Police Motor Patrol was announced today by Secretary of State Otto G. Fiffeld.

All state highways are covered under the new system worked out by Chief Robert T. Humes. Each officer and patrolman has been given a definite headquarters and road assignment Fiffeld said.

"Law Violators generally and those in particular who pay little heed to traffic regulations on state highways will have rough going in Indiana from now on," The Secretary said. "This summer undoubtedly will be the busiest season we have had on the highways since the creation of the state police department."

A radio receiving set to tune in the Indianapolis police department broadcasts, has been installed at Statehouse headquarters. Two officers have installed sets in their patrol cars at their own expense, Fiffeld said.

SYNOPSIS Only the sudden intercession of the sultry whip-man, Shep, has prevented Dawn, mystery girl, from being dedicated by the African rite as the mystic bride of a pagan god. Dawn, though fair of complexion, believes herself black of blood. Tom Allen, young plantation owner infatuated with her, overtures talk convincing him she is white. Allen and other British are prisoners of war, the Germans having seized the British territory. Dawn awaits the initiation services with dread. Shep, who dominates the blacks with his whip, has sinister designs on her. Tom is anxious to have it out with the hulking giant.

INSTALLMENT NINE Dawn wanted to know how he knew. "Because," Tom explained simply, "I had to see you I go away tonight." Dawn's smile gave way to quick anxiety. "You go back to England?" Tom shook his head. "No, I go to the new camp." The assurance that he was to remain near her gave Dawn vast comfort. It was a soothing comfort, however, dispelled by the recollection that very soon she would be parted from him perhaps forever. "Moods," she whispered slowly, "she say I go to be a goddess." "Yes," Tom answered gravely. "We heard." Her next words came in a torrent. Speaking with a bitterness

Dawn stood gazing into the sky

Tom had never before known her to have, Dawn, when through her recital as if fearful of being scooped. She spoke as if she found relief in ridding herself of the words, as if she were accepting a deserved scourge. "Tonight," she cried wildly, "I go to the jungle with many bridesmaids. There they leave me, alone in the light of the moon and the stars. Dawn's body must be bathed in white light—for to make sweet bride for great god Malungu." Description of the pagan rite revolted Tim. "It's unspeakable," he protested. "Inhuman! Dawn, have you ever wondered what your father would say to this?" "I never see my father," returned Dawn sadly. "Mooda tell me he was great chief." "Did it ever occur to you that your father might have been a white man?" "Oh, no, no—I ask Mooda about it, Tom." "And what does Mooda say?" "Mooda say that once in many, many years, Africa girl, white like me, is born. It means that Malungu loves her and must have her for his bride." Tempted as he was to convince the girl that she was not a child of the black Mooda, Tom finally decided that such tidings could only distress her. It was too late to reclaim her from the wooden bridegroom. Such knowledge would only serve to add to the torments already prescribed for her as the isolated bride of a lifeless idol. "But I love you, Dawn," he exclaimed impulsively, taking her into his arms. "I love you more than any of your gods could love you." "That makes me very happy, Tom." She was weeping softly. "Then Dawn, let me take you with me. I can't leave you here." "Ch, Tom, it would mean death to us both. Maybe the lives of all your people would be on my head, if I went with you. I'll wait for you. I'll be safe from all men—in the temple." Pigeon arrived with the kts. Holding the girl more closely to him, Tom kissed her again and again. "I'll come for you, Dawn," he promised and hurried away with Pigeon. She stood and watched them vanish into the jungle. Upon reaching his jungle retreat, after his public humiliation at the canteen, Shep Keyes entered upon dark plans of vengeance. Tom's punishment he intended to trust to his whip, but the means of penalizing Dawn for her part in the incident was something that called for different measures.

Tonight, Shep knew, Dawn, accompanied by her eight maids would proceed to a jungle clearing to offer her body to the purifying rays of the moon. Familiar with the ritual, Shep knew that Dawn would be chained to this crude altar and helpless. So much was already arranged.

As the whip man studied his plans he was beset with the fear that they would be somehow upset by Tom. While scarcely willing to admit it even to himself, he feared, Tom no little. Not that he would have hesitated to meet Tom in a physical encounter, with or without his whip; rather he was afraid of his influence with Dawn. He therefore resolved to be extraordinarily careful not to be seen en route to the ritual ground.

Accurately timing the departure of Dawn from the canteen, Shep hurried in the underbrush and watched the procession. To anybody but Shep, it was a weirdly impressive sight. Attended by eight maids, Dawn led the cortege with Mooda, their steps marking time to the piper's moaning music. The shimmering gowns of the marchers caught the moonlight and gave their wearers the appearance of ghosts on parade.

Just inside the jungle, Mooda directed the marchers to a well-cleared trail that wound upward through almost impenetrable foliage. Shep, who had felt himself undetected, darted into the jungle and followed at a discreet distance, the piper's notes guiding him through the darkness.

In another part of the jungle Tom and Pigeon were battling their way over unfamiliar trails. As they proceeded farther into the jungle, they lost the light of the moon and frequently were forced to pause and examine their map by the light of matches.

Tom, with a nonchalance he did not feel, chided Pigeon for permitting himself to be led astray. But Pigeon, whose body, already bruised by Shep's whip, had suffered severely from the slaps of snapping branches, was eager to recover the trail.

"You stay here, Boss," he counseled, unloading his pack. "an' I'll see if I can find where we're at." "Since you're the guide," said Tom, unslung his pack, "perhaps you'd better do the reconnoitering. Personally, I believe, we're on the right trail."

After the Cockney had lost himself in the darkness, Tom began to recount the events of the day. As they coursed through his mind his concern for Dawn grew greater. He would not resign himself to the permanent loss of her even though Eric dispatched him to England and the natives hid her in a temple in the deepest hide-away of the jungles.

The jungle was appallingly quiet. Once he fancied he heard music such as the piper had played during the afternoon. But this he laid to his imagination. It came to him again and again, faintly and brokenly, until he was persuaded that he really heard it. It gradually struck him that this music was being played for Dawn's ceremony.

This realization only served to increase his nervousness. He paced the small area, impatient for the return of Pigeon.

He did not realize that Pigeon had been gone for a considerable time until he searched for a cigarette and found the package empty. He had smoked the last of them, including the one he had promised to save for his companion. Fearful that Pigeon had met with trouble or lost himself in the jungle, he set out in search of him.

Pigeon, after progressing a few hundred yards into the thicket, remembered, with an eloquent oath, that he had left the trail map with Tom. Rather than return for it, he resolved to trust to luck. He plunged onward blindly. His chief fear was the swamp, but he was reasonably certain that it lay to his right.

Without warning, Pigeon's feet shot from under him and before he was aware of what it was all about he was plunged downward, landing heavily on a broad trail. When he recovered his breath, he felt like cheering. He believed he had stumbled upon the trail he was searching for.

VONCASTLE Dorothy Mackaill and Sidney Blackmer are again the heroine and hero in "Strictly Modern," the First National picture coming Wednesday and Thursday to the Voncastle theater. Blackmer, who has in a measure taken the place of Jack Mulhall as Miss Mackaill's leading man, steps into the Mulhall type of role in "Strictly Modern." He is a small town fellow who almost marries the wrong girl. His situations with Miss Mackaill, who is a writer of cynical love novels, are the humorous, whimsical style that Mulhall might play, too.

The story is also a return for the actress to her former type of portrayals. After making "The Barker," First National cast her in more dramatic parts, such as those in "Her Captive Woman" and "The Great Divide." Now she again becomes a comedienne.

"Strictly Modern" is the story of a feminine novelist who returns to her small home town to attend the wedding of her younger sister only to find that the marriage has been called off. After trying to mend the broken romance, she solves the situation as she might a plot in her novel and directs the characters into entirely different channels. And, falling in love herself, she forgets to be cynical!

The picture is an adaptation of the play, "Cousin Kate," by Hubert Henry Davies. Ray Harris and Gene Town were the screen adaptation and continuity.

Julanne Johnston is cast as Miss Mackaill's sister, and Warner Richmond has a prominent role. Another of the popular comedies featuring Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy is "The Bacon Grabbers" which is on the same bill with "Strictly Modern" this Wednesday and Thursday.

"Sally" starring Marilyn Miller, shows for the last time tonight. "Sally," Marilyn Miller's first motion picture, which plays again tonight and Tuesday at the Voncastle theater, is made entirely in Technicolor, showing the natural colors of costumes, settings and other spectacular effects.

The picture has been adapted from Miss Miller's greatest stage success, and is an all-dialogue production with singing and dancing on the most lavish scale ever attempted on the screen. An all-star supporting cast is seen with Miss Miller. Port Kelson, who played in Ziegfeld's "Rio Rita," is the ingenue lead and Alexander Gray, the musical comedy favorite who sang in "The Desert Song," appears in the romantic lead. Joe E. Brown, Ford Sterling and T. Roy Barnes, are the chief comedians in the gay and rollicking story of a grand duke who becomes a waiter and a humble waitress who becomes a stage star.

The famous Albertina Rasch dancers appear in the ensemble numbers, and a company of more than 100 is seen in support of the star.

"Sally," which broke theatrical records in every large city in America when presented as a stage musical comedy, is also breaking box office records as a picture, and has already established Marilyn Miller as a screen star of the first rank.

It is a First National and Vitaphone picture. A variety of talking short subjects including Vitaphone Act, Screen song and Sound News will complete the program.

Konjola Brings Quick Relief To This Man

INDIANAPOLIS MAN SORRY HE HAD NOT TRIED NEW MEDICINE LONG AGO-REALLY DIFFERENT

MR. JASON A. HOOTEN

"I should have had Konjola long ago; it would have saved me a world of expense and suffering," said Mr. Jason A. Hooten, 301 Orchard avenue, Indianapolis. "I suffered from stomach trouble for years. Food lay like a heavy mass in my stomach and gas formed in such quantities that my heart action was affected and I became short of breath. I became weak and run down and was forced to take a rest each day. Nervousness and constipation added to my misery.

"Konjola, which was recommended by friends, proved to be a truly new and different medicine. It attacked the very source of my troubles and relieved my constipation almost at once. My appetite quickly returned and my digestion became normal. My nerves were soothed and quieted, and I began to take on weight until I had gained eight pounds. I have more strength, energy and vitality today than I have had in a long time and I owe it all to this great medicine."

Konjola, the new and different medicine, is a systematic treatment, taken after meals. It quickly goes to the source of the ailments, cleansing and invigorating the ailing organs, and giving abundant and glorious relief. Konjola is sold in Greencastle at the Owl drug store, west Washington street, and at Flenor's drug store, No. 2, Washington street, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

raising chicks that are hatched in May and June than it is those earlier in the season. It is impossible however, to raise a higher percentage of chicks hatched during these months, nor to make good profitable producers of them.

One of the reasons we have more trouble with May and June chicks is that the poultryman is usually busier this time of the year and does not give the chicks as good attention as he does earlier chicks. Anyone who has had the experience of brooding a February, March or April brood and then putting some chicks out May or June has more or less let down on giving them close attention; when the truth is, May and June chicks need as much if not more attention than those hatched earlier.

It is hard to keep the brooder stove running so that the temperatures are comfortable for the chicks. If the weather is warm, yet the chicks are not old enough to do without heat, it is not always possible to run the temperature low enough by reducing the amount of fuel consumed to make them comfortable, and more ventilation is the only answer to it. Often a mistake is made by taking the heat away from chicks complete because it is late enough in the year that it would seem they could do without it. It is not safe to take heat away from chicks until they are reasonably well feathered, even though they are hatched late in the year. Heat ought to be continued at least for five or six weeks.

Sometimes the idea is expressed that we can put more chicks in the house in May and June because they are out doors more. I would recommend that less chicks be put in the house, through May and June than are housed earlier in the season. The difficulty is not during the daytime but when the birds go to roost at night. During the hotter weather it is necessary that they have a chance to spread out more so that they can keep comfortable at night.

Disease is more likely to hit the late hatch chicks on account of the fact that they get on the ground earlier and range farther. It is very necessary that late chicks be brooded on clean ground if we want to keep them away from trouble with Coccidiosis and worms, and they should not be allowed to range with the flock of laying hens.

Paint the perches and perch supports with a good wood preservative or shingle stain in order to keep mites down.

DANGERS WE ESCAPE NOW

From the Banner, 1869
"Colonel C. C. Matson was thrown from his buggy Saturday evening. His shoulder was dislocated and his arm severely bruised."

"A sad accident occurred near Reelsville Friday by which Mrs. Wilson of that vicinity was killed. With her four children, she was riding to in a wagon, the bed of which slipped forward on the horses, causing them to run away. Mrs. Wilson was thrown out, one of the wheels passing over her chest."

"Harry McNary, who broke his right arm mounting a horse, is getting along finely."

"James Durham is carrying his right hand in a sling, the result of having allowed it to be caught between a post and the head of a horse. Two of the bones were broken."

"Reese Hammond sports a game leg, caused by the kick of a horse. But this does not stop him from driving the finest horses in Indiana. Reese is a capital horseist."

"Sunday afternoon, Alphonso Morris accepted an invitation to ride in a stranger's wagon. The horse took fright and Mr. Morris was thrown out striking the ground with his left arm and shoulder. He is a large fleshy man and this caused the fall to be more severe."

"James Torr, senior, was thrown from his wagon by a runaway team one day last week and was so severely hurt in the chest and one foot that he was confined to his bed for several days."

"Nat Hammond drives a mare twenty-three years old that does not look to be more than five or six. He bought her twenty years ago."

"Willie Crow, son of Joe Crow, was thrown from a young horse Saturday afternoon and three bones in his right hand broken."

BRAZIL SPRINTER SMASHES RECORD IN KOKOMO RELAYS

KOKOMO, Ind., May 5—Ivan Fuqua of Brazil equaled the national interscholastic record and clipped two-tenths of a second off the state mark for the 100-yard dash during the fifth annual Kokomo relay carnival here Saturday.

Three watches clocked Fuqua in 9.7 seconds, the same time credited to Charley Borah of Glendale, Cal., and Ralph Metcalfe of Tilden Tech., Chicago. Fowlkes of Muncie set the present Hoosier high school record of 9.9 seconds during the state meet at Indianapolis in 1928.

Kokomo carried off team honors with 227 points. Eleven other teams scored as follows: Brazil, 20; Technical of Indianapolis and Peru 16 each; Anderson 8; Newcastle, 6; Warren Central (Marion County,) 5; Muncie, 4; Prairie township and Marion 2 each and Wabash and Sheridan, 1 each. Six schools failed to score.

Eldon C. Hill, former local boy, has been elected and initiated into the University of Wisconsin chapter of Alpha Kappa Delta, national honorary sociology fraternity. He was one of eight who were chosen for the honor. Hill was graduated from DePauw with the class of 1927. After two years and a half on the Indianapolis News, he entered Wisconsin last fall to do post-graduate work toward a Master of Arts degree. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Hill, of Belle Union.

SEIZE TWO STILLS

CHICAGO, May 5 (UP)—Acting under a 66-year-old revenue act, Federal prohibition officials today moved to confiscate two Illinois farms on which alcohol stills recently were seized.

Prohibition administrator E. C. Yellowley said the confiscation proceedings would be based on the almost-forgotten statute, which is directed against the operation of unlicensed stills, and provides for seizure of "Rights and titles in the building or plot of ground" on which an unlicensed still is found.

Whether an entire farm can be considered as a "plot of ground" probably will be the point of contention in the seizure, according to Walter Wiles expert on prohibition and revenue law in the United States Attorney's office.

One of the farms is a 520-acre tract owned by Joseph Englehart in Putnam county. The other is 208 acres in Bureau county, owned by Elmer Flaherty.

Engelhart and Flaherty were charged with the misprison of felony after huge stills were discovered on their farms by Federal agents. The misprison charge is an offense known as "Countenancing law violations without reporting them to authorities."

CONCRETE MASONRY

Although concrete masonry has, in relatively few years, won high standing as a building material, many prospective home owners and builders do not yet understand exactly what it is.

Fundamentally, as the name implies, concrete masonry is simply concrete made into standardized building units called block, or for the smaller sizes, building tile. The manufacture of these units is today a well established and stabilized industry, involving production under conditions and with equipment which insure high and uniform quality.

Concrete masonry units are made by mixing portland cement with water and other suitable materials such as sand, pebbles, crushed stone, cinders, burned shale or slag. These materials, or aggregates are available everywhere; hence the manufacture of concrete masonry is not a localized industry. The actual shaping of the material in moulds is done mechanically, usually under pressure, using concrete scientifically designed to produce the best results. After a period of curing, the units are ready, any competent mason being able to use them effectively.

With few exceptions, modern concrete masonry is made with a large proportion of contained air space. Hence its use automatically produces the much desired cellular wall type of construction, with from 30 to 40 per cent of the volume taken up by dead air space. Extremes of temperature do not easily penetrate such a wall; likewise it affords insulation from noise and moisture.

The standard unit measures 8 by 8 by 16 inches, a size which permits
